RACING

BIRMINGHAM MEETING

LLANRWST WINS

(FROM OUR RACING CORRESPONDENT)

Meetings were begun at Birmingham and at Brighton yesterday. Showery weather probably accounted for the rather small attendance of visitors. The racing was rather uninteresting, but that may be because the majority of the events were won easily, and also because the meeting came so soon after Ascot.

The most important event of the afternoon at Birmingham was the quite valuable Warwickshire Breeders' Foal Plate, which was won comfortably by the well-backed Llanrwst from the favourite, Heritage, who had run very well against Sir Andrew at York. Llanrwst was the first to show in front, with Heritage second, but the leader never appeared in the least likely to be caught. Llanrwst has certainly improved since he was beaten by the useful Lady Maderty at Newmarket, and he should win again. Eric, once known as the Perimeter colt, made his first appearance in a selling race when he was one of the field for the Croft Selling Plate, for which he started favourite. He won, but he had little to spare from Monkey, who once headed him, but was in the end beaten by a neck. The winner was trained by De Mestre, whose stable has been out of luck for some time. Radio Rag, who has recently finished second in several selling races, was apparently expected to win the other selling race on the afternoon's programme, the Trial Selling Plate, but this time he could not gain even a minor place behind Jacob's Ladder, who won with ease. The winner belongs to Lord Glanely, who now keeps on winning races, for, in addition to this success at Birmingham, he had a winner at Brighton, where Grand Prince just won the Balcombe Stakes. He was ridden by Richardson, who is riding very well and would seem to be a most accomplished light-weight. For so small a man he has great strength, and with the rides that he is getting for the stables managed by Captain Hogg and Douglas-Pennant he is more than likely to develop at last into one of the most fashionable of light-weights. After their races Eric was sold to V. Smyth for 190 guineas and Jacob's Ladder to Mrs. Hollins for 300 guineas, the latter presumably making her purchase with a view to running Jacob's Ladder under National Hunt Rules.

Spinner's Cottage followed up his Yarmouth success with a comfortable win in the Birmingham Plate, for which he was favourite and in which he made all the running to win by two lengths from the well-backed Ferrule, who had won his last race at Hurst Park. Jock Trotter had run prominently on several occasions this season, and as he seemed well handicapped in the Coombe Plate, in which the opposition was not very strong, it was only reasonable to suppose that he might win for his enthusiastic owner. However, he ran his race in snatches and never appeared likely to win, finally being unplaced behind Ann Bridget, who followed up her Epsom success with another win here. Lonesome and Pinealular ran best of the others. When Ann Bridget won at Epsom, Cragford was a good second, so it would seem that the old horse has not deteriorated as some people seem to think. If he is started to-day in a selling race over this course he should run well. Song of Love ran sufficiently well in this race yesterday to be noted as a not improbable winner in the near future.

The best finish of the afternoon was left to the last event of the day, the Ruckley Maiden Plate, which was fought out by the Wolverhampton winners, Mispec and Sans Espoir. For a mile Santa Giustina was a long way in front, but she weakened in the Straight, when Mispec took up the running, only to be challenged and beaten below the Distance by Sans Espoir, who won by a short head.

NEWCASTLE PROSPECTS

(FROM OUR NEWMARKET CORRESPONDENT)

At Brighton to-day Newmarket will not be represented in the Patcham Handicap, but our chance in the Ditchling Selling Plate is a good one. Boie has useful public form and may prove the winner, but I shall select CA-TOO-SA.

Grand Stand Welter Handicap.—BURGEE may be our only representative and will require beating.

The Sussex Plate may go to GRAND-MASTER, in spite of his big weight.

In the Steyning Plate WELFARE CENTRE should prove our best, and CHRYSOPHIL is fancied for the Egremont Plate.

BRIGHTON PROSPECTS

3.0.—PATCHAM SELLING HANDICAP (1m.).—Bill Sykes, in spite of his penalty, has a fair chance here, for he showed on Saturday at Windsor that he has done well since he won over the same course earlier in the season. He should not, however, at the weights, beat Norman Baron on their Windsor form. De Mestre's selected, Catanian, Marden, dropped in the handicap, and Murphy, who has been running in better company, are others who seem to have reasonable chances. Grandene is better handicapped than he has been for some time. It is not easy to make a selection. The winner may be NORMAN BARON.

3.30.—DITCHLING SELLING PLATE (5f.).—At the actual weights the Hackla gelding has nothing in hand of The Limpet, but he will probably be ridden by a good apprentice, which will give him a few pounds in hand. He has the beating of Mary Lochiel filly, Cherry Whisky and Orangelle have shown some promise in similar company, as has Vica. The best selection seems to be HACKLA GELDING.

4.0.—GRAND STAND WELTER HANDICAP (1m.).—To You surely has too much weight, and, further, the distance is beyond his best. Pachalik never wins, but L'Odeon has a fair chance on his Chester form. Merton Abbey and Burgee, the latter in spite of a small penalty, must have fair chances. Frank Bare may be just outclassed if some of the other of the entry are started. I like best the chance of BURGEE.

4.30.—SUSSEX PLATE (5f.).—Somme Orb is not harshly handicapped, while on his best form Speyside has a nice chance, but he cannot be trusted. Still, this course often suits horses like him. Ryevale at last seems to be fairly handicapped, while Cedarwood, if he should reproduce his Ascot form, would not be easy to beat, but he got a flying start then and the form may not be too reliable for that reason. De Mestre's selected should run well, but for the winner I shall take SUSPICION, who beat Grandmaster at Hurst Park after running very well at Epsom. She is still nicely handicapped, and the course should suit her admirably.

5.0.—STEYNING HANDICAP (6f.).—There are some quite useful two-year-olds in their own class in this race. The best of them at the weights may be DEERPARK, who ran well at Newmarket, and who showed good speed then, and that is essential on this course.

5.30.—EGREMONT PLATE (1¼m.).—TETRAGEM ran in the Derby, without any success it must be admitted, but if there was any reason to leave him in a race like that he ought to be able to win such a race as this. The best of the others may well be the staying Orange Tip.

BIRMINGHAM PROSPECTS

2.30.—TAMWORTH SELLING PLATE (1m.).—BOBBIE BURNS III. keeps appearing in these races—he was in a series of them at Epsom—but is never started. If he is started this time he would seem an obvious selection.

3.0.—BROMFORD SELLING PLATE (6f.).—Gamesome ran well at Manchester and is rather better handicapped here, but it is a long time since he won. Water Rose was unlucky when beaten at Epsom and is better off here as regards weight. Old Cragford, if he were sent on from Windsor, would have a fine chance in this company. Collingwood comes from a stable in form at last and did not run at all badly in a selling race at Newmarket. He might win here, but I shall give another chance to WATER ROSE.

3.30.—MIDLAND BREEDERS' FOAL PLATE (1¼m.).—SEA ROVER seems to be the best of the small field who will be started here. He ran well at Manchester when just beaten in the last stride by the older Racedale.

4.0.—PACKINGTON PLATE (5f.).—GOLDEN APPLE has not run since he was bought at Newmarket for more than 1,000 guineas after winning a selling race. He is probably very useful and may win here.

4.30.—GUERNSEY STUD PRODUCE STAKES (5f.).—Fortress has twice finished third and, with a large breeding allowance, has a chance, but he would be my selection only in the absence of Charlwood and Knight's Orb. The latter won like a good colt at Alexandra Park, while the former has twice run exceedingly well in very good company. As, however, Charlwood may wait for a later race I shall take KNIGHT'S ORB and very much hope that he will win.

5.0.—BULL RING PLATE (1¼m.).—In spite of his penalty and now considerable weight RALLYE II. may well add this race to his other recent successes.

AUSTRALIANS AT MANCHESTER

TEDIOUS BATTING

The Australians, so far, by their play against Lancashire at Old Trafford have certainly not added to their prestige. A score of 427 sounds good, but they took over eight hours to make the runs, and when at the luncheon interval yesterday, with 352 runs on the board, it was decided to continue plodding along rather than declare the innings closed, they killed all chance the spectators had of seeing a cricket match. When stumps were drawn yesterday Lancashire, with all their wickets in hand, were 337 runs behind.

To condemn the Australian batting wholesale is a little unfair on Kippax, who played his highest innings of the tour, and whose struggle to suit himself to English wickets has been the most interesting feature of their play. Like Jackson, who has obviously modelled himself even to details of dress upon the elder player, he is in his own country a deflector rather than a striker of the ball, and it was not long before they both realized that something more than deflection was required over here. Now, whereas Kippax has learned his lesson, although he has not yet developed the scoring strokes which he clearly has in his mind, Jackson is still struggling. The Australian innings was interesting in that four of their batsmen—Kippax, Fairfax, Oldfield, and Hornibrook—exceeded their previous best scores of the tour, and for the fact that the last four wickets added 73 runs, an unusual amount for this side, who have a very weak tail.

Kippax and Fairfax continued the innings with the total at 231 for five wickets on a pitch which played faster than it had done on Saturday. Sibbles and Hodgson began the bowling, and when Fairfax had made 10 he put a ball dangerously close to second slip's right hand, and once before Hodgson had made one get up unexpectedly sharply. Neither batsman showed the least sign of wanting to hurry the pace, the first half-hour producing 32 quiet runs, and Hopwood then came on in place of Sibbles. Hodgson made another one fly, Kippax doing well to get out of the way, but there was never the least indication that a wicket would fall. Kippax made one or two good late cuts and Fairfax twice surprised everyone by hitting the ball past cover-point for 4, but the bulk of the scoring came from pushes for a single at the rate of two or three an over. The rate of scoring was below a run a minute, but in the last over before luncheon Kippax scored two 4's off lovely square cuts, and so 121 runs had been made in 120 minutes, slow enough scoring as it was in the circumstances.

Kippax scored only two more runs after the interval before he was stumped playing forward to the ball. His innings, which had lasted for four and a half hours, did not contain many strokes which remain in the memory, but it was workmanlike and always pleasant to watch. That was six wickets down for 354, and 10 runs later Duckworth got another one for his side when Fairfax was completely deceived by the flight of a ball from Tyldesley. Hurwood helped Oldfield, who was batting much more like the man he was in 1926, before he was caught at third man trying to hook. There followed a bright little stand for the last wicket, during the course of which Oldfield hit a ball on to the head of a spectator in the Old Pavilion, fortunately not injuring him severely. The Lancs bowling throughout was steady rather than dangerous, and was, no doubt, a little flattered, but the fielding, and that of Iddon in particular, was entitled to its full measure of praise, and Duckworth was in his most resilient form.

When Lancs were at last allowed to go in to bat at 4 o'clock Watson almost at once played two delightful strokes to fine-leg off Wall, but rain stopped play after a quarter of an hour. When they came out again after a delay of 20 minutes Wall made the ball fly a little. He was bowling on Hallows's leg stump, and after Hallows, walking in front of the wicket to turn the ball to leg, had twice mistimed it, he received a painful blow on the hip. He went on batting, however, and, with Wall taken off, scored at a reasonable pace. Woodfull gave Hornibrook, who bowled slower than usual, a long spell, but except that Watson might have been caught in the gully when he had made only 15 both batsmen batted with the greatest confidence and ease. Wall, when he was put on again, lost his pace, and when rain stopped play for the day at a quarter past 6 90 runs had been scored in 100 minutes. Hallows and Watson at one time came in for some barracking, which, in fact, would have been much more in keeping when Australia were batting.

HAMPSHIRE IN A GOOD POSITION

Hampshire, thanks to some good bowling by Baring and Kennedy, gained a lead of 63 over Glamorgan at Portsmouth yesterday, and at the close of play had scored 166 for four wickets in their second innings.

When Glamorgan continued in the morning 236 behind with all their wickets in hand, Baring, bowling very fast, had Bell caught at the wicket and Rhys caught at short leg while two runs were added, the total then being 36. Turnbull helped Bates to improve the position by adding 45 before Newman bowled Bates, and then Hills batted well until at 157 Turnbull was dismissed. The remaining batsmen offering little resistance, the innings closed for 207, the last five wickets going down for 50 runs.

Hampshire in their second innings lost Newman at 26, but Brown and Kennedy made a splendid recovery. This pair took the score to 103 before Brown was bowled off his pads.

ESSEX FOLLOW ON

A COLLAPSE AT THE OVAL

Surrey occupied the first 25 minutes at the Oval yesterday in completing their first innings, but it was largely a waste of time, for Peach, Gregory, and the three remaining batsmen were able to add only 16 to Saturday's big score of 475 for six. Essex, who had escaped playing on the pitch while it still may have had some moisture in it, then showed signs of making a bold bid for first innings points, but, although 175 was on the score-board for the loss of only two wickets, the batting suddenly went to pieces, and no amount of belated recovery could avert the follow-on.

Little more was seen of the excellent batting of Peach and Gregory that had completed the discomfiture of the Essex bowlers on Saturday. Gregory carried out his bat for 30, but a catch in the slips quickly disposed of Peach, and Squires, M. J. C. Allom, and Brooks made only four between them. Without these cheap wickets, the bowling analyses of Nichols and O'Connor would have looked sad indeed.

Essex were content with the steadying influence of the light roller before sending in Cutmore and Pope to open their innings, and the former, by scoring six runs in Allom's first over, strongly suggested that the pitch was now in fairly good condition, whatever it may have been 40 minutes earlier. Just occasionally the ball did rise sharply, but Cutmore, at any rate, found no difficulty in scoring runs slowly but surely. As he possesses scoring strokes behind and in front of the wicket, and on both sides also, he could not be easily kept quiet by the ordinary methods. Pope was mostly engaged in digging himself in. Fifty-four went up before anything very notable from the spectators' point of view happened. Then Pope was bowled by a ball from Shepherd that also struck the wicket-keeper in the mouth. Happily, Brooks was a casualty for only one over, during which the Surrey captain disguised himself as best he could in the regalia of a "stumper." This was just before the luncheon interval, by which time Cutmore had made 35 of the total of 58 for one.

Afterwards, Cutmore still did his full share of the score in a pleasantly efficient, if quiet, manner. Cutmore and O'Connor added 78 for the second wicket before the former at last was tempted by Gregory into making a risky off-drive. This resulted in a catch at mid-off, and the score read 125—2—78. Cutmore's hits included nine 4's. O'Connor, joined by Russell, settled down to the extent of giving some of the Surrey spectators the double sensation of anxiety and boredom, in the proportion, say, of two to three, but when, eventually, Russell was bowled by Allom all danger of an Essex surprise quickly vanished. The score stood at 174 for three—still not a bad total—but, inside three overs, it read 177—5—55, O'Connor's being the third wicket to fall in that brief period. O'Connor was caught at the second attempt by Peach in the gully, off Allom's bowling. Nichols had been brilliantly caught and bowled for none by Gregory, whose accurate bowling had fairly earned for him something more exhilarating than a protracted lull in the scoring.

D. R. Wilcox and C. Bray, though additionally tested by a tea interval, stopped the rot to some extent by raising the score to 214, but then Allom got in several really fast and awkward overs and, first, Wilcox gave Peach another catch in the gully and then Brooks held H. M. Morris behind the wicket. Bray continued to make a courageous effort to drive the Surrey bowlers off their length and into a more subdued frame of mind, and Sheffield lent him valuable support in an even more daring manner, but the fall of Bray's wicket at 283 reduced the chances of saving the follow-on to a negligible quantity—the idea of first innings points, of course, must have vanished with the fall of the third wicket at 174. Bray was caught at the wicket for an excellent 36 off the bowling of Squire, and without a run added Hipkin was bowled. Sheffield went on hitting out for all he was worth, but it was a fatal error of judgment to attempt to get the bowling off a short run with Hobbs the challenged fieldsman. Essex failed by 79 runs to avert the follow-on.

Essex were all out a minute or so before a quarter-past 6 and so they had approximately five minutes' more batting. They still were 219 behind the Surrey total, and no doubt Sheffield and Pope did well to reduce this to 216 in the course of two trying overs. No doubt, too, it was a wise move by the Essex captain to have sent out Sheffield, while the latter still had his eye in, to join the steady Pope in the last adventure of the day.

GOOD PERFORMANCE BY WARWICKSHIRE

Facing a total of 249 made by Leicestershire on Saturday Warwickshire yesterday at Nuneaton made such a good reply that, when rain stopped play for the third time during the day, they had scored 151 for three wickets, and in the end carried their score to 276 for six before the close of play.

Warwickshire began in a manner that did not suggest this good score for, with only 15 runs on the board, Smith was out to a catch at cover, Croom, having made some splendid hits at the expense of Geary, was struck on the inside of the knee by a ball from Snary and had to retire with his score 31. Wyatt and Bates then attacked the Leicestershire bowling with such success that at luncheon the total stood at 104 with one man out. This fine partnership ended soon after the interval when Bates returned a ball to Shipman, and then Croom, happily recovered, resumed his innings. He added 12 runs, including a big hit to leg for 6, but was third out at 123. With the total 143 rain stopped the game, and on play being resumed only a single had been added when the game was again stopped. Once more the players came out, but a third stoppage occurred at 151, the game being held up for 20 minutes. After that both Wyatt and Kilner made some good strokes, and at the tea interval Warwickshire's score stood at 179 for three wickets, Wyatt being 44 and Kilner 28.

The weather cleared after the interval, and the Leicestershire total was passed without further loss. Wyatt, who completed his 50 after batting for two hours and 20 minutes, lost Kilner at 257, the stand for the fourth wicket producing 134 runs in just over two hours. Kilner played very well, hitting one 6 and six 4's. Santall and Morton were run out, but before the end Wyatt completed his second hundred of the season.

DERBYSHIRE WIN

A LOW-SCORING MATCH AT CHESTERFIELD

A low-scoring match ended at Chesterfield yesterday when Derbyshire gained an easy victory over Somerset by 10 wickets. The modest totals of 54 and 70, by Somerset represented the smallest aggregate made by any county so far this season in two completed innings in one match. Derbyshire completed their innings for 120 and Somerset going in a second time were all out for 70, leaving their opponents only five runs to make for victory.

As in their first innings, Somerset collapsed in surprising fashion before the bowling of Slater, who came out with the following excellent analysis :—

O.	M.	R.	W.
22	15	17	7

Having taken seven wickets on Saturday for 31 runs, Slater finished the match with the best figures of his career, these being 14 wickets for 48.

Derbyshire added eight runs to their Saturday total of 112 for their two remaining wickets when play was continued, Buse ending the innings in 15 minutes. Thus Derbyshire gained a lead of 66. Though the pitch appeared to be in better condition than on the first day it was still all against the batsmen, though the manner in which Young and Longrigg began Somerset's second innings did not suggest another triumph for the bowlers. They put on 20 for the first wicket and Northway helped to add 18 for the second. The last ball before luncheon sent back Young with the score 46 for three wickets.

The cricket after the interval was most startling. After two maiden overs Slater took three wickets in four balls, so that four batsmen left at the same total—46. Though the last four men added 24 runs Slater was irresistible, and in his last spell of bowling actually took six wickets for two runs. Excellent fielding helped Derbyshire in their splendid success.

Sent in to get five runs necessary for Derbyshire to win, Mitchell hit two balls from Gaskell to the boundary, the match ending before 4 o'clock.

LITTLE PLAY AT TRENT BRIDGE

There were less than seven overs bowled yesterday in the match between Nottinghamshire and Yorkshire at Trent Bridge, two before luncheon and four and a half afterwards, and in that time the Yorkshire total was increased from 245 for six wickets to 255. Rhodes made one lovely stroke to fine leg off Voce before the rain came in the morning, but although it cleared up after luncheon and the players came out again at 3.35 for 10 minutes, there was always rain about, and at 4.30 play was abandoned for the day.

KENT TRY FOR VICTORY

Rain seriously interfered with cricket in the match between Worcestershire and Kent at Stourbridge yesterday. Nothing could be done before luncheon, and then Kent, declaring at their Saturday's total of 173 for eight wickets, got down one Worcestershire wicket for 29, when further downpours put a stop to the game. Little more play was possible, but at the close of play Worcestershire were four runs on with eight wickets in hand.

OXFORD WINNING AT LORD'S

FINE BOWLING BY PEEBLES

Oxford University, after a good day's cricket at Lord's yesterday, are left with only 96 runs to make to beat the M.C.C., and with nine wickets in hand. Apart from B. H. Lyon's brilliant 102 and some fine hitting by A. M. Crawley, the chief feature of the day's cricket was the collapse of the M.C.C. later batsmen, for the second time in the match, to the bowling of Peebles. On [illegible]day the M.C.C. had 182 runs up for five wickets and the side was out for 205, Peebles, from the Pavilion end, taking the last five wickets. Yesterday the M.C.C. were 236 for five and all out 240, Peebles, again from the Pavilion end, taking four wickets in six balls, the last ball of one over and the first five of the next over.

Oxford were leading by 12 runs and had four wickets in hand when the game was begun. C. K. Hill-Wood was too late to a ball that came quickly off the pitch, and I. A. P. Peebles was out playing back to a ball which he might have reached forward. H. M. Garland-Wells was bowled by a yorker for a fine innings of 72 runs. He was batting 70 minutes and hit one 6 and eight 4's, and played forcing cricket with absolute confidence and time to spare in the playing of every stroke. Nevinson was bowled by Martin, who in the morning took three wickets for 21 runs, and the innings closed for 265, which gave Oxford a lead of 60 on the first innings.

M.C.C. kept their same order for the second innings. M. D. Lyon scored a single and avoided the horror of a pair of spectacles, and then made 19 runs fairly quickly. Peebles was, when he first went on, bowling medium to fast-medium with the usual field for such bowling, and it was with a fast-medium ball that he bowled M. D. Lyon. B. H. Lyon came in and he played himself in rather carefully though he never let off a really loose ball. A. L. Hosie batted very quietly, but at luncheon 77 runs were up, Lyon being not out 31 and Hosie not out 22. Lyon got going at once after the interval, and he played beautiful cricket. Hosie was finely caught at the wicket for a most useful 40, made out of 137 runs scored while he was in. R. Aird came in and again started well. Lyon meanwhile had been approaching his hundred fast, the bowling of A. Melville coming in for particular punishment. Lyon made his hundred, out of 146, after being in an hour and three-quarters. After that, as sometimes happens, he got hardly any of the bowling for the next 10 minutes, and in that time only made two runs. Then he was out trying to place J. H. Nevinson to leg. In his innings, the third really good one he has played at Lord's within a week, he hit one 6 and 13 4's. R. Aird, who was shaping as if he would make a lot of runs, was also leg-before to Nevinson, and four wickets were down for 187. G. C. Newman played some good strokes in a short innings, but was bowled by a ball to which he was inside all the way and which he seemed to lose half-way in its flight. At the tea interval the score was 228 for five wickets, Martin, who had played careful cricket, being not out 15 and Captain T. O. Jameson not out 1.

Peebles was put on again at the Pavilion end, and there followed a most remarkable collapse in the batting. With the last ball of his first over Peebles bowled Jameson with a googly that broke back sharply. The first ball of his second over bowled T. F. Mitchell, who had the misfortune to "bag a brace" in this match. The ball was a googly, and Mitchell spotted it as such. He was not, however, prepared for the quickness of the ball off the pitch and the extremely sharp angle at which it broke, and he was outside the ball and a little late for it. S. J. Pegler came in to save the hat-trick. The first ball bowled to him was another googly, but it pitched too short, and, breaking much too much to hit the wicket, hit him on the outside of the left pad. The next ball was a fast one, to which Pegler played forward and hit it in the middle of the bat. The fourth ball of the over, one very similar to that which bowled Mitchell, took the leg stump, the break beating the bat. Major R. T. Stanyforth was bowled first ball by a googly, which was practically a yorker. Bowes came in to save another possible hat-trick in the same over. Peebles bowled him a short ball and Bowes survived it. Martin hit Garland-Wells for 4, past extra-cover, in the next over but was out, playing just too soon, to a well-disguised slower one next ball. The innings closed for 240 runs after a second collapse, this one being even worse than that of the first innings. Peebles's analysis after tea was remarkable, and is given below :—

O.	M.	R.	W.

Oxford, who were set 181 runs to make in order to win, had 55 minutes' batting before the close of play. In that time they made 85 runs for the loss of D. N. Moore's wicket. A. M. Crawley played another brilliant innings. He began batting with a more confident sight of the ball than he had had in the first innings and his driving, and his hitting to leg, were extremely pleasant to watch. Crawley made 51 out of 70 in 50 minutes. He might then have steadied down, but instead of that he made 15 of the last over of the day, which was given to Captain Jameson to bowl.

LAWN TENNIS

THE CHAMPIONSHIPS

A FRIGHT FOR THE CHAMPION

Sunshine and bright weather favoured the opening day of the Lawn Tennis Championships on the All-England Club's courts at Wimbledon. The full programme was carried out, though it clouded over and threatened rain near the end of the day. It was only a threat and all ended well.

The first round for the Singles Championship was played off and the entrants reduced from 128 to 64. The one surprise of the day was the defeat in the first match on the Centre Court of E. F. Moon, the champion of Australia and one of the eight seeded players in the draw, by W. Allison, of America. Moon was an easy victim. The spectators in the Centre Court, who were more numerous than usual for the first day, had other thrills to follow, for H. Cochet, the champion, who followed in the second match, had a long and close struggle before he beat H. Timmer, of Holland, in the fifth set. Then came the only English seeded player, H. W. Austin, and he had a fright in the first two sets before he managed to beat E. R. Avory.

COCHET EXTENDED

The match of the day was the second on the Centre Court, in which the champion, H. Cochet, was making his first appearance this year. His opponent, H. Timmer, of Holland, had met him there, but in a much later stage of the tournament last year, and he had then shown himself to be a good hard plodder, keeping the rallies going for long stretches from the base-line without venturing much farther afield. It was a different Timmer that played yesterday, and he gave Cochet a long fight and a great fright. It is true that in the earlier stages of a championship Cochet is frequently content to take things rather easily in the hope apparently of getting as much practice as possible and experimenting with strokes which he would probably not dare to attempt on a more important occasion. If that was the case yesterday then Cochet let himself in for a more strenuous task than he had bargained for, and he got a fright from which he was fortunate to extricate himself safely in the end, though he got home quietly enough at last.

Timmer was playing a much more varied game than before. He was frequently up to the net, never recklessly but always at the proper moment; yet that was not where he excelled. It was rather in his fine forehand drives taken with a lovely full and free swing. With them he often got the ball down the side lines past Cochet, when he was up, and there was nothing to do but watch the ball flash away. As for Cochet his play had all that ease and abandon that it had in the past. His wonderful confidence in himself and his perfect knowledge of just what he could do marked him out as a master of the game. Although he seemed to be often trying himself out, he never appeared to be rash, and when he did succeed he had done something which few others would have the courage to try. His finest strokes were his half-volleys, some on the backhand from the base line being perfectly judged and placed, and his volleying when the ball was dropping near his feet. He always played the ball well in front of him, and that made his shots most effective.

Timmer got away well in the first set and was leading by four games to two, but Cochet then won five games in a row for the set. The first two games in the second set went to Timmer and the next two to Cochet. From that point the games alternated regularly from three all to nine all. In the 13th Cochet for a moment began to bethink himself that there was some error in his ways and he stayed at the back of the court for a while, but that is a style of play in which he is no way superior to Timmer, and it profited Cochet but little. Besides, he could not bring himself to act in such a dull fashion, or would not if he could. He is not the man for it, and he was soon back at the net volleying, half-volleying, smashing, and being passed. Once or twice later he kept back, but it was only for a little while. Timmer in the meantime kept on his way calmly, and in the 20th game he was leading 40—15 and the set in sight. He failed then, but won at his second advantage point. After the loss of such a long and hard set it was thought that Cochet would pull himself together and win quickly, but he found Timmer a harder nut than ever, and the third set went against the champion, six games to four. The fourth was another close affair, the games going evenly to four all. Then Cochet got a love game on his service and got the next for his second set. The final set went all in his favour. He was serving with great power. He was plainly tired, but that did not affect his play, for though he moved about little he seemed to attract the ball to his racket, and the spot where he stood seemed to be just the right place to make his shot. Timmer seemed less worn, but he was then completely outplayed, and to judge from the play in the last set he was beaten by one far outclassing him at every point. It had been a fine thrilling match. Cochet got his cheer as he made the winning shot; it was well earned, but it was nothing to that which greeted the loser as he left the court, and that too had been won deservedly.

DEFEAT OF MOON

The earlier match on the Centre Court had brought the first surprise of the Tournament. It could not have come any earlier. E. F. Moon, the champion of Australia, who was one of the eight players selected to head the eight divisions of the draw, was beaten, and straight away those who had made the choice were told that their judgment had been wrong. Moon's conqueror was W. Allison, from Texas, one of the members of the American Davis Cup team. Though Allison won the London Singles Championship at Queen's Club on Saturday he is not a Singles player of the first rank, and he is better in Doubles with his partner, J. van Ryn. Yet he was far more lively and determined than Moon, who seemed inclined to take things easily and give his attention to playing well rather than effectively. Moon got only one game, the third, in the first set, and three in each of the others. He made many beautiful strokes, but they came only at long intervals, and Allison's dogged persistence and hard hitting won the day.

As if two thrills were not enough for the Centre Court on the first day, a third was to follow, and that immediately. Two captains of Cambridge were involved, the one, H. W. Austin, from three years ago and the other, E. R. Avory, who has just retired from that post. Austin is generally looked on as the best lawn tennis player that has been at Cambridge for years, but spectators at the Centre Court and others, who could follow the score on the excellent and easily read electrical scoring board outside, had to rub their eyes when it seemed to say that Avory had won the first set by six games to two and was leading in the second by five to two. Avory had excelled himself and stolen a march on his distinguished predecessor. He had hit like a man, and when Austin stole close up to the net Avory proved himself master of the art of lobbing the ball high over his head to the far corner, and that made Austin set off in hot pursuit and fail frequently in his object of getting the ball back. But Avory's lobbing powers suddenly left him. He could not get the ball far enough back in the court and Austin, standing near the centre line, suddenly developed gifts of smashing which he has rarely shown before. The turn came in the seventh game of the second set, and then Austin found himself. He did not look back. Six games on end gave him that set when all seemed lost and there was never any doubt of the result after that. Avory could not win a game in the fourth and last.

Much interest was taken in the second match on Court No. 1, for the newest and youngest American player, J. H. Doeg, from California, who has been honoured with a place among the select eight on his first appearance at Wimbledon, was there opposed to N. Sharpe, a steady, persistent player, who keeps at it continuously from the base-line. Though Doeg got away with the first two sets he found Sharpe a hard man to beat, and it was only in the fifth set that Doeg made victory secure. He plays left-handed. He has the most powerful service of any player to-day, and the ball comes with such speed and power off the ground that most people have no chance of getting the racket to it. Yet Doeg does not have to exert himself unduly. His play seems to be easy. He is not too confident in his strokes off the ground, but once he can get up to the net, and he is not slow to do so when the chance is offered, he can smash as forcibly as he serves. He won the first two sets by 6—3, 6—1, but then he began to find the wind, which was blowing across the court, rather troublesome, and it frequently carried his ball out. With two sets won he began to hit rather wildly, and that only made Sharpe safer than ever. He would draw Doeg to the net and get past him with a drive down the side. Two sets went to Sharpe (6—4, 6—4). Then came a tussle for the rubber. Doeg found himself again and won easily (6—1).

Many other good matches were played during the day. The gigantic Irishman, G. Lyttelton Rogers, opened the play on Court No. 1 against the Japanese player, H. L. Satoh. It was a case of David and Goliath, for Satoh hardly reached to Rogers's shoulders, but David did not win. He shot his bolt in the first set, and it was Rogers all the way after that. Still, Rogers did not play as his height and reach might have justified. He was content to drop the ball softly over the net, and it was only at the end that he began to exert himself at all.

C. E. Malfroy, a Cambridge freshman from New Zealand, won a fine victory over the Italian Davis Cup player, P. Gaslini. The Americans generally did well. Berkeley Bell lost the first set to A. W. Vinall, but made no mistake about the next three. G. S. Mangin won a good match against Y. Ohta, the Japanese player. It was disappointing to have such a good player go out in the first round. Ohta started well and won the first set, but then went all to pieces. He had shown himself the better player at the start, but later he did not play as he can and often has done over here. I. G. Collins, the Davis Cup player from Scotland, was beaten by his brother W. A. R.

YACHTING

THE RAMSGATE WEEK

A good south-westerly breeze favoured the opening of the Royal Temple Yacht Club's annual regatta, which is popularly known as Ramsgate Week. The racing proved very interesting and some of the finishes were close. The programme was made up of six events ranging from the International 12-Metre Class to the 18-footers of the Whitstable Yacht Club. The results were:—

MATCH FOR YACHTS OF THE 12-METRE CLASS. First prize, £20; second prize, £10; third prize, £5. Entries:—

They were sent off at 10 a.m., being set to sail a course of about 27 sea miles, once round the Deal Bank and North Brake buoys, thence to the Deal Bank Buoy and back again. All went except Vanity. They got away to a fair start. Mouette worked out a lead, and at the end of the first round was nearly three minutes ahead of Lucilla, the new boat of the season. The times for the round were:—

Clymene led home and won easily, without calling on her time allowance. The official finishing times were:—

FINANCE BILL

FURTHER DEBATE IN COMMITTEE

LOCAL AUTHORITIES AND INCOME-TAX

MONDAY, JUNE 23

The SPEAKER took the Chair at a quarter to 3 o'clock.

Southend-on-Sea Corporation Bill was read the third time.

MEXICAN FINANCE

Mr. HENDERSON, Secretary for Foreign Affairs (Burnley), replying to Mr. A. M. SAMUEL (Farnham, U.), said that the International Committee of Bankers on Mexico had announced that the Secretary of the Mexican Treasury would arrive in New York on June 25 to discuss with them both the external debt of the Mexican Government and the debt of the National Railways. Delegates of the British section of the committee would be present at the discussions. The International Committee of Bankers were the properly qualified agents of the bondholders, and were authorized to carry on negotiations on their behalf with the Mexican Government. In these circumstances he did not consider that any useful purpose would be served by instructing his Majesty's Ambassador in Washington to intervene.

THE MALTESE CORRESPONDENCE

CAPTAIN P. MACDONALD (Isle of Wight, U.) asked the Secretary for Foreign Affairs whether, in view of the importance of the issues raised by the recent controversy in Malta, he would arrange for the publication of further documents not included in the recent Blue-book, such as the draft concordat between the Maltese Government and the Vatican, the correspondence between the Maltese Ministry and the Vatican on the claim of the Vatican that clerics could only be brought into Court with the consent of their ecclesiastical superiors, and the reply of Lord Strickland to the detailed charges brought against him by the Vatican and included in the Blue-book.

Mr. HENDERSON.—No, Sir. I do not at present propose to publish any correspondence or documents supplementary to those contained in the White Paper. The first two categories referred to by the hon. and gallant member have, however, already been published in the Malta Government Gazette. With regard to the third category, his Majesty's Government have never been called upon to intervene in this particular dispute. Still less have they ever made it the subject of representations to the Vatican. For these reasons I do not consider that they could properly agree to its publication.

CAPTAIN CAZALET (Chippenham, U.) asked if the right hon. gentleman had yet taken any decision regarding the appointment of a Minister to the Vatican.

Mr. HENDERSON.—I have not taken any decision, and I do not propose to be in any hurry to do so.

THE SIMON REPORT

QUESTION OF AMERICAN CIRCULATION

Mr. BENN, Secretary for India (Aberdeen, N.), informed Lieut.-Com. KENWORTHY (Hull, Central, Lab.) that the question of the translation of the Report of the Indian Statutory Commission into foreign languages was under consideration.

SIR A. CHAMBERLAIN (Birmingham, W., U.) asked if any steps were being taken to circulate the English edition of the Report in the United States of America.

Mr. BENN.—I should be glad to make inquiries and give the right hon. gentleman information as I receive it.

A TWO-PARTY CONFERENCE

Mr. LAMBERT (South Molton, L.) asked the Prime Minister what progress had been made with the composition of the non-party agricultural conference; and whether all questions germane to the agricultural industry were to be discussed and considered by the conference.

Mr. MAC DONALD, Prime Minister (Seaham), said:—As I have already stated, I have received a favourable reply from Mr. Lloyd George, and I have received over the week-end a negative reply from Mr. Baldwin, the Leader of the Opposition. It was my intention to bring under review, had the consultations taken place, all questions germane to the agricultural industry.

SIR F. HALL (Dulwich, U.).—And for us to take the responsibility out of your hands.

LIEUT.-COM. KENWORTHY (Hull, Central, Lab.) asked if they were to understand that the conference would go on.

Mr. MAC DONALD.—The three-party conference is not going on, but the two-party conference will very likely go on.

SIR K. WOOD (Woolwich, W., U.).—Who will answer for this conference? Will it be Mr. Lloyd George? (Ministerial cries of "Beaverbrook.")

MR. THOMAS'S TASK

Replying to SIR K. WOOD, Mr. MACDONALD said that the late Lord Privy Seal would carry out the work he began in promoting the economic reorganization of those industries which required that treatment. Otherwise questions dealing with unemployment would be answered as was done previously by the Departments concerned.

UNEMPLOYMENT

CIVIL SERVANTS AND THE COMMITTEE

Mr. GRANVILLE (Eye, L.) asked the Prime Minister if it was his intention to appoint to the Unemployment Committee a Civil servant from the Ministry of Agriculture to represent the position of English and Welsh farming.

SIR N. GRATTAN-DOYLE (Newcastle, N., U.) asked the Prime Minister the power and duties and composition of the organization of Civil servants which had been established to deal with unemployment and to co-ordinate the experiences of Departments thereon.

Mr. MAC DONALD said that a staff of Civil servants, performing the ordinary functions of Civil servants, had been appointed to work under the direction of the Unemployment Committee of the Cabinet. Full provision was being made for taking into effective consultation the separate Departments concerned.

Mr. BETTERTON (Rushcliffe, U.).—Are these full-time jobs or will they be seconded? Mr. MACDONALD.—For the time being they are being seconded. SIR N. GRATTAN-DOYLE asked what measure of co-ordination had been established between the Civil servants and the others who would sit with them on the Board. Mr. MACDONALD.—They are performing the ordinary functions of Civil servants, and they are in the same relation to Ministers as they were when they were in their Departments.

Mr. W. J. BROWN (Wolverhampton, W., Lab.) asked if the right hon. gentleman could assure the House that when Civil servants were appointed to carry out this kind of function the old tradition of preserving their anonymity would be observed in that House. (Cheers.) Mr. MACDONALD said that had been done and would continue to be done.

SIR K. WOOD asked if the right hon. gentleman had not announced the name of the Chairman, a prominent Civil servant.

Mr. MAC DONALD said that the right hon. gentleman was misinformed. He had announced no name of the Chairman. SIR K. WOOD.—The right hon. gentleman mentioned the name of the Permanent Secretary to the Home Office.

UNEMPLOYMENT GRANTS

PAYMENT OF INCOME-TAX

Mr. E. BROWN (Leith, L.) asked the Prime Minister whether it was the policy of the Government to demand income-tax at the standard rate from local authorities and other bodies who were accelerating work in relief of unemployment in respect of grants made for works which were technically revenue producing; and, if so, whether that decision was formally arrived at and when, or if it was the result of departmental official action.

Mr. SNOWDEN, Chancellor of the Exchequer (Colne Valley), who replied, said:—Income-tax law requires that annual grants of a revenue character made to local authorities or other bodies for the purposes of their trading undertakings should be taken into account in the same way as other revenue receipts in computing the profits of those undertakings for income-tax purposes. This question in relation to unemployment grants has been before the Board of Inland Revenue on several occasions from 1925 onwards, and they have always taken this view, which is based on judicial decisions of long standing.

Mr. BROWN asked how that could have been based on judicial decisions of long standing, seeing that those grants only began to operate in 1923 as a result of the setting up of the St. Davids Committee. Mr. SNOWDEN replied that 1923 was rather a long time; and as the hon. member knew, there had recently been another case in the Courts which had been decided in favour of the Inland Revenue. Mr. BROWN asked whether Mr. Snowden was aware that so little was that known in his own Department, that some demands—he had the papers in his pocket—for 1924 were first intimated to local authorities only on December 17, 1929. Was that not inimical to the whole policy of unemployment grants to make work? Mr. SNOWDEN replied that Mr. Brown had exaggerated the importance and universality of the papers which he had in his pocket. (Laughter.) In a very few cases, through some misunderstanding, the law was not applied, and application had been made for outstanding amounts.

SIR H. SAMUEL (Darwen, L.) asked whether the Chancellor of the Exchequer had taken into account the facts that many local authorities had been invited by the Government to undertake works in order not only to increase the amenities and equipment of their towns but also to give work to the unemployed, and that large numbers had done so on the understanding that the Government would give them grants. Was it the case that, instead of the grants being made in lump sums, they were being made in the form of annual grants in relief of the interest to be paid on the loans; that these enterprises, although referred to as revenue-producing enterprises, usually involved a charge on the rates, although they brought in a certain income, and that the outcome was that the local authorities would be getting 20 per cent. less than they anticipated they would receive?

Mr. SNOWDEN replied that the right hon. gentleman was wholly misinformed. The point at issue was that, upon the whole interest on the loan, income-tax was deducted. But it was not the income-tax of the local authorities; it was the income-tax on the stockholders. What Sir H. Samuel had in his mind was that the local authorities, having deducted the whole of the income-tax upon the interest paid to the stockholders, they should be able to keep that part which was due to the Inland Revenue. Instead of the local authorities getting less, if they were permitted to keep that part of the income-tax they would be getting considerably more than 20 per cent.

THURSDAY'S BUSINESS

Mr. MAC DONALD, replying to Mr. BALDWIN (Bewdley, U.), said that on Thursday, in Committee of Supply, the Vote for the Dominion and Colonial Offices would be taken.

FINANCE BILL

LONDON PROPERTY VALUATION

Mr. SNOWDEN, Chancellor of the Exchequer (Colne Valley), asked by Mr. CHURCHILL (Epping, U.) what amount of progress he aimed at in Committee on the Finance Bill that evening, said his general ambition was to get on as far as possible, but he thought Clauses 26 to 28 ought to be got through before rising.

Mr. CHURCHILL hoped the right hon. gentleman would stop at Clause 28, and take the next day the Bill was put down Clause 29, which raised the important question of estate duty where property of a deceased person had been transferred to a private company.

Mr. SNOWDEN asked whether, if he agreed to that suggestion, Mr. Churchill would help him to get Clause 29 and the other clauses relating to the same subject at one sitting. He thought no one would maintain that even reasonable progress had been made with the Bill so far.

SIR L. WORTHINGTON-EVANS (St. George's, U.) said it was absolutely impossible to get Clauses 29 to 31 in less than two days.

The House then went into Committee on the Bill, Mr. R. YOUNG, Chairman of Committees (Newton), in the Chair.

On Clause 26, subsection (1) of which provides that for the purpose of income-tax the Valuation (Metropolis) Act, 1869, should cease to operate from April 6, 1931, and that the annual value of any property in the Administrative County of London should be ascertained in accordance with the enactments applicable in the case of properties situate elsewhere in England,

Mr. MARJORIBANKS (Eastbourne, U.) moved to omit the subsection. He hoped the recommendation of the Royal Commission on Taxation, that there should be instituted a single valuation of property for the purposes of local and national taxation, would be carried out. The change proposed was a retrograde one. The Act of 1869 had worked perfectly satisfactorily in the Metropolis and had met with the approval of everybody except, perhaps, Somerset House and income-tax officials. It was believed that Somerset House had wished to get the valuation of property into its hands for many years. The change seemed to be attended by so many disadvantages and so few advantages that one tried to find why this progressive Government were going back to mid-Victorian standards. It had been said that considerable revenue would be raised by it. If it was necessary to eliminate the public right of appeal, to change a simple system for a complex system, to oust the jurisdiction of the Courts, and to establish a system of droit administratif in order to raise revenue, let the Government say so.

SIR K. VAUGHAN-MORGAN (Fulham, E., U.) said he thought the provisions of the Bill represented an improvement, not a reactionary or retrograde step. As a General Commissioner of Income Tax he sat for an area which included parts inside and parts outside the Metropolitan area. He was a convinced adherent of the principle of the separate valuation, the benefits of which would be conferred on London by the present Bill. He had for some time regarded the existing method of valuation under the Act of 1869 as unsatisfactory in operation. It represented an unhappy kind of compromise. It was estimated that under the present system the Exchequer lost no less than £500,000 a year. The City of Westminster had raised certain objections to the clause, and in a circular they described the procedure under the Act of 1869 as an ideal one. The circular also dealt with the question of appeals, but he could not see that the taxpayer would have any less appeal in future than at present. He hoped the amendment would not be pressed; he could not support it.

SIR L. WORTHINGTON-EVANS (St. George's, U.) expressed gratitude to the mover of the amendment. The Standing Committee of Metropolitan Boroughs, in 1924, expressed quite a different opinion from that held by Sir K. Vaughan-Morgan. They showed no desire whatever for a second valuation. He could not believe that a sum of £15,000 would anything like cover the expenses of the valuation, which would require a very large increase of staff and of professional employment. Each individual who was assessed would have to employ a professional man to check that assessment, and the total figure would be more like £150,000. The onus was on the Government to show why the present practice, which had worked well to remove blots on the system, but not to scrap the whole system.

Mr. PETHICK-LAWRENCE, Financial Secretary to the Treasury (Leicester, W.), said that an attempt to make a single valuation system instead of a dual valuation system was made by the late Government in the Rating Bill, but had to be abandoned owing to the opposition of their own supporters. This clause would establish uniformity between London and the provinces. It was estimated that at least £500,000 was lost to the revenue owing to these properties being undervalued, in the sense that the full income received on half of these properties did not pay its full share of taxes. Therefore, some property owners in London were getting privileges which owners in other parts of the country did not receive. That was unjust, and was not a state of things that should continue. The Conservative Party, when invited to carry out uniformity in the opposite direction by their own Government, refused to do so.

SIR K. WOOD said that in this matter the Government were going in the teeth of every recommendation made by every authority that had considered the subject.

MAJOR NATHAN (Bethnal Green, N.E., L.) said he looked with the gravest suspicion upon any proposal whereby the Executive would bar the road to the Courts to the citizens of this country, and this clause would, intentionally or otherwise, have that effect.

After further debate, the closure was moved by Mr. PETHICK-LAWRENCE, and was carried by 256 votes to 166—majority 90.

The amendment was rejected by 233 votes to 191—majority 42.

Mr. CHURCHILL then moved to report progress to ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how far he intended to go that night. He suggested that they should stop at Clause 28, particularly in view of the fact that Sir D. Herbert intended to submit a point of order in regard to the group of clauses from Clause 29 to Clause 33. It would be far better to start these clauses, dealing with private companies, on Wednesday.

Mr. SNOWDEN said that the persuasive manner in which he was conducting the proceedings had evidently affected Mr. Churchill. (Laughter.) He realized that Clause 29 was important, and he would not oppose any amendment which did not strike at the structure of the clause. He did not think, however, that the point of order would be of such importance as Mr. Churchill had assumed. He suggested they should take that point of order, and an amendment which was on the paper to postpone Clause 29, that evening.

SIR H. SAMUEL (Darwen, L.) said that it was obviously reasonable that Clause 29 should be taken on a fresh day. If the Unionist Party would agree not to move the postponement of Clause 29, perhaps Mr. Snowden would agree that the point of order should be taken at the outset on Wednesday.

Mr. SNOWDEN said that he was agreeable to this course, and Mr. CHURCHILL withdrew his motion.

On a further amendment to Clause 26, which was later withdrawn, Mr. SNOWDEN informed SIR W. BRASS (Clitheroe, U.) that the clause did not alter the allowances under the 1869 Act for local rating purposes or the allowances to be made under the general tax law.

On the motion that Clause 26 stand part of the Bill Mr. SNOWDEN said that in these times the possibility of increased revenue could not be ignored. They anticipated from this change an additional revenue of £500,000 a year from London under Schedule A, but that figure was only the measure of the annual loss that the revenue had been suffering for a considerable number of years past owing to the fact that the assessments for rating purposes in London did not as a general rule approximate to the actual income-tax value of the property. There was nothing in their minds about the extension of the provision to Scotland. The present system was unfair to the property owners of the provinces.

Mr. LEIF JONES (Camborne, L.) said that he sympathized with Mr. Snowden's desire to see that property owners in London paid their proper proportion of income-tax, but he could not support the proposal for two separate valuations of the same property.

Mr. SNOWDEN asked if Mr. Leif Jones could imagine any system of single valuation which would put the rating authorities and the revenue authorities on terms of equality.

Mr. LEIF JONES said that the Chancellor of the Exchequer could not say that it was impossible to arrive at a fair valuation of a property in the open market.

SIR P. PILDITCH (Spelthorne, U.) said that he hoped the Chancellor of the Exchequer would reconsider the question.

MAJOR NATHAN said the Chancellor of the Exchequer had stated that there was a loss of revenue; but what he meant was that he did not agree with the valuation placed by the rating authorities upon property in London.

Mr. ATKINSON said that in the case of house property let at low rents in War time which were still being paid the owner, owing to the rise in the valuation of the property, would have to pay in income-tax more than he received in rent.

SIR K. VAUGHAN-MORGAN said that in such a case all the owner had to do was to make a representation to the Income-Tax Commissioners. His own experience as an Income-Tax Commissioner led him to believe that if the Exchequer was to obtain its due there must be separate valuations for rating and taxation. Rateable value was based partly on ability to pay and partly on benefit received. The valuation for taxation was intended to arrive at the revenue which the owner obtained from the property.

SIR W. BRASS opposed the clause.

Mr. MARJORIBANKS said that the last division showed that there was a considerable body of opinion against the proposed change, and the Chancellor of the Exchequer should respect that opinion and consider a compromise in regard to this matter. That compromise was ready at hand in an amendment which had not been called on and which provided that, although there might be a separate assessment for income-tax purposes all the rights of appeal which existed under the Metropolis Valuation Act of 1869 should continue in force. If there was an independent appeal to the Courts this clause would be more justifiable than it was now.

The clause was carried by 249 votes to 139—majority 110.

On Clause 27 (Provisions with respect to returns, copies of valuation lists and tax assessments in London),

Mr. PALMER (Greenwich, Lab.) moved a series of amendments which he said were in accordance with the desires of the London County Council and the Metropolitan Boroughs Standing Joint Committee. The metropolitan boroughs acquiesced in the desire of the Government that on the grounds of economy and convenience the form of return which the borough councils served quinquennially for rating purposes should serve for income-tax purposes as well, but there were certain questions necessary for rating purposes in addition to those required for income-tax purposes. His amendments were designed to enable such questions to be added to the form.

The amendments were accepted by Mr. PETHICK-LAWRENCE and agreed to.

The clause as amended was ordered to stand part of the Bill.

ESTATE DUTY

On the motion that Clause 28 (Amended rates of estate duty) stand part,

Mr. O'CONNOR (Nottingham, Central, U.) said that the pernicious practice of increasing the death duties was exhausting the capital reservoirs of the country and putting nothing in their place. One would have expected a Socialist Government to devise machinery whereby the State could receive payment in kind either land or shares or any other form of the estate.

CAPTAIN GUNSTON (Thornbury, U.) said that if the Labour Party really believed in the nationalization of the land, why should they not accept land for the payment of death duties and try to prove that the State could farm as well as the landlord.

MAJOR DAVIES (Yeovil, U.) said that death duties were really a capital levy by instalments. They reacted not only on the prosperity of the industry, but also on the rights and interests of the workers.

Mr. TINKER (Leigh, Lab.) said he looked forward to the time when estate duties would be made to contribute a far larger sum to the national revenue.

SIR B. PETO (Barnstaple, U.) thought that if those excessive estate duties were further increased a time would come when there would be nothing left for the Chancellor of the Exchequer. They were getting very near to the point when they would have to settle how it was possible to carry on the agricultural industry of the country.

Mr. A. M. SAMUEL asked whether the Government was never going to bring in a clause or a Bill constructed to add to the wealth of the country. Every action of the Socialist Party seemed to be directed towards dividing up wealth. (Ministerialist cheers.)

The clause was agreed to by 256 votes to 156—majority, 100.

Progress was reported, and the House resumed.

The Road Traffic (Fines) Money Resolution passed the Report stage.

The House adjourned at three minutes to 11 o'clock.

At a meeting of the Nelson (Lancashire) Weavers' Association last night a vote of confidence was passed in Mr. Arthur Greenwood, Minister of Health and M.P. for Nelson and Colne. A resolution to the effect that the association no longer intended to support his candidature, financially or by service, and reserved to themselves the right to select their own candidate in view of the Government's attitude on Labour matters, was defeated by 600 votes to 12. The resolution was a sequel to a meeting of the association with Mr. Greenwood when the Minister's attitude on matters affecting the cotton operatives was severely criticized and the Government's policy was condemned.

INTERNATIONAL HORSE SHOW

THE KING GEORGE V. GOLD CUP

BRITISH VICTORY

The competition for the King George V. Gold Cup for jumping by military officers of any nation was the chief item of a varied programme arranged for the gala performance at the International Horse Show at Olympia yesterday. Those present witnessed a skilful exhibition of jumping by officers representing five nations. The trophy was won for Great Britain by Lieutenant J. A. Talbot-Ponsonby, 7th Queen's Own Hussars, on Chelsea, a 12-year-old brown mare.

The number of people present was estimated at over 7,000, and included many British officers and representatives of various foreign Governments. The Royal Box was occupied by Lady Howe, Major-General C. E. Corkran, Lady Corkran, Lady Lister-Kaye, Lady Fitzgerald, and Lady Lowther. Field-Marshal Sir George Milne, Chief of the Imperial General Staff, attended, and others present included:—

Lord Granard, General Sir Walter Braithwaite, Lieutenant-General Sir Webb Gillman, Major-General Harman, Mrs. Claude Beddington, the High Commissioner for Australia, the French, German, Japanese, Belgian, Portuguese, Italian, Argentine, and Polish Ambassadors, and the Finnish, Netherlands, Austrian, Danish, Greek, Cuban, Hungarian, Swedish, Swiss, and Norwegian Ministers.

The King's Cup was won last year by Lieutenant Gibault, France, on Mandarin, an aged chestnut gelding. In 1928 Lieutenant A. G. Martyr, on Forty-six, won the trophy for Great Britain, and on two previous occasions British officers held the cup. Fifty-five horses were entered for the competition, and these included Mandarin, last year's winner.

The countries represented were Great Britain, with 39 entries; Germany, five entries; France, four entries; Irish Free State, four entries; and Chile, three entries. The course consisted of seven obstacles, including a stile, stone wall, posts and rails, wattle fence, field gate, and wall surmounted by a fence. Faultless rounds of the course were made by only six of the contestants. These were Captain A. L. Cameron, Royal Horse Artillery, on Irish Eagle; Lieutenant J. B. Pemberton, 14/20th Hussars, on Devilled Kidney; Lieutenant X. Bizard (France), on Arcachon; Lieutenant J. A. Talbot-Ponsonby, 7th Hussars, on Chelsea; Lieutenant J. Barrington, Royal Artillery, on Goliath; and Lieutenant Brian Johnson-Ferguson, Lanarkshire Yeomanry, on Peter. In the final jump off for the trophy Lieutenant Talbot-Ponsonby on Chelsea made the best performance, though he registered two half faults. The runner-up was Lieutenant Johnson-Ferguson on Peter, which made two half faults and refused one of the jumps, which counted another fault. Mandarin, ridden by Lieutenant H. Gibault, France, the winner of the cup last year, competed early in the contest but failed to make a clear round, two half faults being recorded against him.

HACKS AND HUNTERS

A parade of prizewinners was a popular feature of the afternoon programme. The ordinary class judging was restricted to hacks and hunters ridden under the side-saddle rule by amateurs and to an open driving class. The first was for ladies' hacks over 14 and not exceeding 15 hands. A very creditable display was made by 11 selected hacks, and the first prize went to Landrail, the chestnut mare exhibited by Mrs. E. M. Heseltine and Mrs. S. Petch, which has gained a number of awards during the show. Lady Philipson-Stow's Ballerina, an aged bay mare, was second and Mida, shown by Lady Muriel Liddell-Grainger, was placed third. In the class for ladies' hunters, five years old or over and capable of carrying over 12st. 7lb., Mrs. Basil Young's Hillmorton, a nine-year-old bay, beat Tresjasser, last year's first prizewinner, shown by Miss Diana Russell Allen; and the third award went to Mrs. J. de Pret's bay gelding Mount Rivers.

The displays by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police were much appreciated features of the gala performance. Their trick riding exhibition, which was given during an interval in the jumping competition for the King George Cup, proved an attractive interlude. In the evening there was further judging of riding and driving classes.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT AND UNEMPLOYMENT

HEALTH MINISTER AND RURAL COUNCILS

The Minister of Health, Mr. A. Greenwood, was a guest at the annual dinner of the Executive Council of the Rural District Councils Association last evening at the Trocadero Restaurant. LIEUTENANT-COLONEL SIR SEYMOUR WILLIAMS, presided. Mr. H. STONE gave "The Houses of Parliament." LORD ONSLOW and Mr. I. FOOT, M.P., replied.

The CHAIRMAN, proposing "The Ministry of Health," said their association comprised people of all political views and they were only interested in administration.

The MINISTER OF HEALTH, replying, said he regarded his department as one that touched the life of the people at a thousand points. It was a department that as the result of accumulated experience had adopted "a point of view." They were able to view the system of local government as a whole and he believed they had evolved a system of government which worked as well and indeed better than that in any other part of the world. There were bound to be different points of view in such a complex system, but they had learned the art in the sphere of local government of living together. (Cheers.) Whatever the law was, they felt it had to be honestly administered. In local government they had to make the best of the law as it stood, and he hoped they would learn to live in amity with the county councils. They had to cling to the idea of responsible local government. They had not yet properly sorted out the services and the authorities, but they were in process of doing so. The Local Government Act was a measure out of which they had to extract the maximum of good for the people.

They were now engaged on the question of the revision of county districts, and he wished them well in the task and hoped that the result would be a more logical redistribution of county areas. (Cheers.)

He did not believe that local government could solve the question of unemployment, but there were possible developments which local governing authorities ought to undertake which would make a contribution to that problem. Even the poor rural district councils could put their share into the pool and help the nation through a difficult time. (Cheers.)

Those present included:—

Lord Strachie, Mr. E. Knox, Sir Cyril Hurcomb, Sir Edward Holland, Mr. P. Hurd, M.P., the Rev. R. C. Thursfield, Sir Arthur Robinson, Major Sir William Prescott, Mr. H. J. G. Rudman, Captain R. R. Henderson, M.P., Colonel C. H. Bracey, Mr. E. P. Everest, Mr. G. L. Pepler, Lieutenant-Colonel J. M. Longden, the Mayor of St. Pancras, Mr. W. G. Allen, Mr. J. J. McIntyre, Mr. R. Doncaster, Captain J. Spencer, and Mr. S. M. Johnson.

INCREASING TRADE BY ADVERTISING

SIR E. BENN DEFENDS THE VICTORIANS

Over 1,000 experts in all branches of advertising met at Hastings yesterday for the sixth annual convention of the Advertising Association.

Discussing the general theme of the convention, "Increasing trade by advertising," SIR ERNEST BENN put forward what he described as "A little bit of pleading for the underdog, the small man, and the people who are left out of account when we talk in that big way which alone is popular to-day." They should get the people out of the big-figure habit, he said. "Make the little man feel that he counts for something. At the moment all the little minds are thinking of large figures and they don't fit." People had been led to believe that they did not count as individuals, that they could leave things to the big men, that they must be organized, and that somebody with better brains would do it for them. Organization which limited or restrained individual effort was bad.

"This is the period of 'safety first.' If we are to develop trade and industry we need less safety first and a few more healthy bankruptcies and a revival of the old spirit of individual adventure."

The development of trade, he believed, would bring about a return to a good many of the ideas which prevailed in the Victorian period.

"I am not advocating a complete return to Victorianism, but I am 'up against' the notion that we Victorians are all wrong and that your modern young people are all right. We have had enough of both to be able to sift the bad from the good and, if we are wise, to take advantage of such good as exists in both sides. There was certainly more economic sanity in the Victorian period than is to be found among us to-day, and there can be no doubt as to the development of trade and industry when good Queen Victoria reigned over us. That time might be described as the period of sex safety and economic adventure, both propositions being, in my judgment, absolutely sound. We are now in the period of what is imagined to be economic safety and sexual adventurousness, and both propositions, in my judgment, are wrong to the core. As a good Victorian you may imagine with what fervour I sing that line of the good old hymn which runs 'Change and decay in all around I see.'"

If trade and industry were to be developed by advertising they must revive the independent spirit of the small man and make him feel that he counted for something.

"I do not believe that everything that is new is bad; I only reject the modern view that everything old is stupid."

THE EMPIRE CAMPAIGN

LORD RIDDELL, in his address as president of the association, said that since 1924 advertising had made great strides in quantity and quality and the nation had developed in advertising sense. But even now many business people imagined that the right goods properly marketed at the right price would sell themselves. Manufacturing and marketing without advertising was like kissing your hand to a girl in the dark. The world had many awkward economic problems to solve and judicial advertising was an essential factor in that solution. They might disagree about fiscal policy, but Lord Beaverbrook had performed a public service by infusing new life into the discussion of Empire problems. He hoped the campaign would lead to a closer study of all our markets, British and foreign.

LADY DUNEDIN, in an allusion to circular letters, expressed the view that typewritten letters were generally opened by the recipient as well as handwritten letters. "Practically everything, including love letters, comes typewritten nowadays," she added.

LORD LUKE said that the idea that it was not necessary to advertise an old-established article had been badly battered about in recent years. "You simply must advertise to the new generation that takes control or risk going out of business."

In a message to the conference the Prime Minister said, "Clean and honest advertising means clean and honest business dealing, which affects the whole moral tone of our people." A new national effort, Mr. MacDonald added, was required to meet intensified competition. To win and maintain our position called for great development in the art of salesmanship, of which advertising was an important part.

PRIMITIVE METHODIST CONFERENCE

WOMEN IN THE CHURCH

Details of the approaching union of the three Methodist Churches were discussed at the Primitive Methodist Conference, which was continued at Bradford yesterday. Representatives of the Wesleyan Methodist Church were present and addressed the conference.

The REV. SAMUEL HORTON said Methodist union had the blessing of all Christian Churches. Indeed the only one which viewed it with distrust was the Roman Catholic Church, whose statesmen were keen enough to recognize that Methodist unity would be one of the greatest bulwarks of Protestantism.

Discussing the future work of the Church the REV. F. H. BROWN (Bloxwich) said that with reunion in two years' time they were to begin an evangelical campaign. They were not ready for it. They had not enough men of spirituality to enter that campaign, but there were still two years. Some of them were trying to stop boxing contests on Sundays and had asked municipalities to rescind resolutions to open corporation golf links on the Sabbath. Those things were helpful, but they would not bring young people to Christ with that sort of thing. They must get among the people themselves.

Mrs. W. V. SIMPSON, wife of a Sheringham minister, proposing a resolution asking for an investigation into ways of satisfying the needs of women in the Church, said: Women had not taken their share in the wider work of the Church. There had been engendered in women a feeling of inferiority, and for many generations women had been content to remain in the background. They had been allowed to share in the work, but it had been on sufferance. Up and down the country there had been a series of meetings where women had tried to express themselves; she wanted to see those meetings co-ordinated into the Church and developed, for never in history had there been a time when women should have a higher sense of vocation than now.

Three other women delegates supported Mrs. Simpson's resolution, which was carried unanimously.

DERATING OF SMALL HOUSES

LORD CORNWALLIS'S PLEA

LORD CORNWALLIS made a plea for the derating of small house property in his inaugural address yesterday at the forty-first annual congress of the Royal Sanitary Institute at Margate.

"Industry and agricultural land have been derated," he said; "will not the derating of small house property soon follow? At present, if an employer provides better cottages for his workpeople he is not only rated, but rated at a higher figure, even though the rent he charges be a low one, and of course it cannot be a high or even an economic one, to people earning only an agricultural wage. This is a distinct hindrance to the gradual improvement of the housing conditions of the poorer of our people."

Referring to the problem created for the county authorities of Kent by the annual influx for four or five weeks of 50,000 hop-pickers, Lord Cornwallis said: "It is quite noticeable how changed are the habits and general demeanour and behaviour of those people, to whom the holiday is of as much benefit as the money they earn. This is very largely due to improved conditions and to the increased interest shown in their welfare by the growers, the public authorities, and not least by many welfare societies."

Speaking of what he termed "the bungalow disease," Lord Cornwallis said: "Nothing but a surgical operation will cure this ailment, but it must be remembered that the balance is not all on one side. Those of us who are old inhabitants of a place do not wish to see our hillsides dotted with inartistic houses like a patchwork quilt. But we must not forget that three out of every four of the inhabitants have come from a crowded area and are at least getting a pleasant view and healthy surroundings, so far as light and air are concerned. And they are getting it at a reasonable cost, even though the drainage may be primitive."

The congress is being attended by 1,500 delegates, who were welcomed at a luncheon at Cliftonville yesterday by the Mayor of Margate, Councillor A. E. Grant.

The annual exhibition at the British Museum of objects from the expedition to Ur will be opened to the public on Wednesday, July 2.

OPENING OF COLONIAL CONFERENCE

LORD PASSFIELD'S REVIEW

The Colonial Conference, the second called to deal specially with the affairs of the colonies, protectorates, dependencies, and mandated territories, was opened at the Colonial Office yesterday. At the outset a loyal message was sent to the King and another message to the Prince of Wales offering him congratulations on the occasion of his birthday.

Lord Passfield, Secretary of State for the Colonies, welcomed the delegates and also those present who had been appointed by other Governments as Observers. The value of the conference was, he thought, not so much in the formal discussions as in the opportunities of meeting those engaged in other branches of Colonial administration and in the common interchange of ideas. Lord Passfield then dealt with the Crown Colonies generally.

Letters to the Editor

EARLY EGYPT

FINDS IN EASTERN DESERT

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TIMES

Sir,—The third season of the Brunton Archaeological Expedition to Egypt on behalf of the British Museum has been a particularly successful one, many interesting and beautiful objects having been discovered. The ground explored was a new stretch of the Eastern desert immediately north of that worked in 1928 and 1929, in the Badari district, south of Assiut. This had been badly plundered, especially near Matmar; but three cemeteries were found which had escaped the modern native. A large number of graves of most periods were dug; we have in fact good objects of all ages, with the exception of the Middle Kingdom, which is hardly represented at all in the district.

Perhaps the most important discovery of purely historical interest was the site of a temple built by Rameses II. in honour of the god Set, which adjoined the village of Matmar. It was surrounded by a complex of houses, which had been occupied down to about the Twenty-fifth Dynasty. The whole area had been raked through repeatedly, but luckily one complete sandstone lintel remained, giving the cartouche of Rameses II. "beloved of Set"; and under this was an intact foundation deposit of that king containing model bricks of the brightest blue faience, the skull of a bull, a little pottery, and a multitude of tiny cartouches and models of food in various coloured glazes. Scarabs were found showing a figure of Set; and a wooden statuette of the divinity shows the animal seated and wearing the double crown. Some blocks of limestone had been taken from an earlier temple and re-used, while fragments of statues in red and black granite repeatedly gave the name of the Aten. A large block with the cartouche of Akhenaten is lying partially buried in the village. It is evident, therefore, that here is the site of one of the many temples which that much-discussed king built for his Aten-god, and which were so soon to be swept away by his successors.

From the houses came a variety of small domestic objects, a group of fine bronze vessels, a pot carefully sealed and hidden containing a gold pendant and bead necklace, iron tools, flints from sickles, and scarabs, one of which bears the name of Shishak, the conqueror of Jerusalem. A particularly interesting fragment is part of a bone toilet vase finely engraved with a scene of bulls wildly charging through a forest. This is in the best style of Cretan art. There is also a tiny statuette in bronze of a seated scribe which is remarkable as it shows the feet crossed in front, a new attitude quite out of keeping with the formal Egyptian style.

Results as far as the Tasian and Badarian cultures were concerned were a little meagre. Two cemeteries came to light, both of them poor and plundered. But isolated objects of excellent quality were found loose in the sand. Thus a surprising discovery was a stack of eight magnificent polished stone axes, and another happy find was a perfect Badarian bowl of black pottery finely rippled.

A closely-packed cemetery of Amratian date had never been touched since the robbing of very early times. A set of four perfect ivory female figures, a copper fish (?)-hook of most unusual form and excellent technique, a red polished pottery bowl with a crocodile in relief and five little hippopotami walking round the rim, and some good flint knives, were the principal objects found here.

Many graves of Late Predynastic and First Dynasty date were examined. One of them contained a most interesting slate palette engraved with a well-drawn figure of a hartebeeste. Over its back is the hieroglyph of the god Min, a very rare example of the early signs. An alabaster straight-sided cup is of outstanding quality. The stone is worked to a marvellous thinness, and most fortunately was quite perfect except for one piece which has now been fitted back. This beautiful object remains at Cairo.

The discovery of the large Twenty-second Dynasty cemetery was a lucky chance. A modern grave was being made in what was to all appearances virgin ground. The grave-diggers, however, found an earlier burial, and had the expedition not been on the spot, the villagers would have reaped a happy harvest. The whole cemetery was undisturbed, even by the ancient Egyptians. We recovered about 150 scarabs, some of them fine, and a number of blue glaze figures of divinities. These were mostly of beautiful colour; and one, of Sekhmet, is a most delicately modelled specimen showing two tiny figures of captives under her feet. This is now in the Cairo Museum.

An exhibition of last year's (1929) discoveries will be held in the Egyptian Sculpture Gallery of the British Museum from July 1 to July 31. This will include objects of most periods, but chiefly of the Badarian culture and that of the "Pan-grave" or Southern mercenaries of the period between the Twelfth and Eighteenth Dynasties. These were described in The Times of July 18, 1929. It is to be hoped that visitors will show their interest in a practical way by subscribing to an expedition from which the nation's collection so largely benefits. An American gentleman, Mr. John A. Roebling, has come forward with most welcome assistance, and Continental museums have also helped in return for surplus antiquities; but the main expense of excavation and publication has so far been borne by the excavators. The work has therefore to be on a very small scale and can do very little to forestall the ceaseless plundering of the modern Egyptian. Subscriptions will be gladly received by the Director of the British Museum.

I am, &c.,
GUY BRUNTON.

NATIONAL MARK BEEF

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TIMES

Sir,—The final decision by the Birmingham Wholesale Meat Salesmen's Association to give no further support to the National Mark scheme is, in the view of the Lord Mayor of Birmingham and presumably authoritative correspondents to The Times, a very great mistake in the interests of farmers and the purchasing public.

It is reported that the Meat Salesmen's Association have quite definitely stated that if the public demanded marked and graded beef they would supply it. In this regard it may be interesting to recall the following passage from the Empire Marketing Board's report for the year 1929-30:—"No amount of persuasion brought to bear upon the consuming public in all its forms would succeed unless it was supported by the wholesale and retail traders." The National Mark scheme was sanctioned by Parliament in the best interests of our home producers. It would be a calamity if through a lack of cooperation between the trading community and the Government this practical lead to constructive rationalization failed in its objects.

Yours faithfully,
W. BICKERTON.

THE "NEW TAILORING"—The fit is assured when you choose clothes instead of cloth

Founded on Fit . . .

The ultimate aim of expert tailoring—the well-fitting suit—is the first concern of the "New Tailoring." It saves the delay and expense of made-to-measure. It avoids the shortcomings of ready-made. It was founded with the object of assuring exact fit—immediate fit. Its stocks and its system of graded sizes and fittings are planned on such a scale that it is a normal experience for a man to come in and say "Well, of course, you can't fit me" . . . and go out wearing the proof that we can.

MR. GLADSTONE AT THE OXFORD UNION

APPEARANCES IN DEBATES

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TIMES

Sir,—A small volume in my possession entitled "Proceedings of the Oxford Union Society" contains what appears to be an official record of the debates from 1826 to 1834. The information given is limited to the terms of the motion on each occasion, the names of the speakers for and against, and the result of the voting. The book formerly belonged to one who became a member of the Union in 1832. It may be of some interest to extract from it the references to Mr. Gladstone's appearances in the debates.

In February, 1830, he opposed a motion approving of the policy followed by Mr. Canning in 1827. The combined eloquence of Mr. Gladstone and Mr. Manning resulted in the rejection of the motion by 64 votes to 1. On May 20 of the same year Mr. Gladstone spoke against the motion "That the civil disabilities of the Jews ought to be removed," which was also lost by 55 votes to 16. By October he had become Secretary of the Union, and as such presided at a meeting at which Mr. Gaskell moved "That the Foreign Policy of the Duke of Wellington has been derogatory to the dignity and injurious to the best interests of the country." The Secretary supported Mr. Gaskell, but on this occasion found himself in a minority of 24.

Undeterred by this, he himself a fortnight later moved another resolution condemning the Duke, and this time obtained a majority of one. At this moment he became President of the Union, and did not again intervene in the debates until February, 1831. He then spoke against a motion expressing disappointment in the results of the "Catholic Relief Bill." On May 17, 1831, Mr. Gladstone moved a "rider" in a debate, adjourned from the previous day, on a motion condemning the Reform Bill Ministry. There is a full account of this in Morley's Life (Vol. I., p. 72), to which may be added the text of the rider, as printed in this record:—"That the Ministry has unwisely introduced, and most unscrupulously forwarded, a measure which threatens not only to change the form of our Government, but ultimately to break up the very foundations of social order, as well as materially to forward the views of those who are pursuing this project throughout the civilized world." In a house of 132 this secured a majority of 56.

On June 2 of the same year Mr. Gladstone opposed a motion in favour of immediate emancipation of the slaves in the West Indies. He moved an amendment demanding that the slaves should be ultimately freed, after they had all received "a Christian education, under the Clergy and Teachers, independent of the Planters; a measure of which total but gradual Emancipation will be the natural consequence, as it was of a similar procedure in the first ages of Christianity." The amendment was carried by 31 votes to 11. Three years later we find that Mr. Gladstone was much disturbed by the possibility that the principle he had thus advocated might be taken to justify the use of public funds for all kinds of denominational religious teaching among the blacks. (Morley, "Life," I., p. 125.)

There is no further record of any speech in the Union debates by Mr. Gladstone. The fact that he took part in them only half a dozen times bears out the statement in one of his letters printed by you, that he was neither a "frequent nor a constant" speaker at the Union.

There will still be many among your Oxford readers who can recall the scene in the Sheldonian Theatre when Mr. Gladstone delivered his Romanes Lecture. At the end, as the venerable figure in the doctor's gown was passing out of the theatre, he turned and for a moment stood looking back. We felt that it was his farewell to his beloved University. Perhaps few of us realized that it was then 61 years since the same voice had been heard in the Union, in a speech of which one of his contemporaries wrote that it made them "feel that an epoch in their lives had occurred."

I am, Sir, yours faithfully,
C. T. DIMONT.

NOISE FROM AIRCRAFT

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TIMES

Sir,—One of your correspondents has written complaining of the noise of aircraft, and I should be obliged if you would let me give another view of the subject.

To begin with, whatever people may think about the noise of aircraft it cannot truly be called harsh. I myself live, and work, within a few minutes' flight of two aerodromes, so that aircraft pass over many times every day. To myself and also to many others the noise of aircraft is infinitely preferable to the harsh, clanking, roaring, hooting cacophony that many of us have to put up with when living near a frequented road in town or country. Your correspondent has been much more fortunate than most in his experience of motor-cycles, if he really believes that a high-flying aeroplane makes more noise than several loud motor-cycles.

Hendon aerodrome has been a training centre for airmen for the last 16 years, and most of the densely populated suburb surrounding it has grown up since then. To anybody who has considered living in the district in recent years it was obvious that the use of aircraft was likely to increase in the future, rather than decrease.

It is unlikely that the flying interferes seriously with study in the schools and colleges in the neighbourhood, for the following reasons. To the ears of the younger generation the sound of an aeroplane is more akin to music than to torture; also most of the flying is done during the week-end and the summer evenings, when work has ceased.

Hendon aerodrome is used (except for a short period of rehearsal for the R.A.F. display) only by the Auxiliary Air Force, which is largely composed of professional and business men, who find, in flying during their leisure hours, a welcome and invigorating change from work, and at the same time an opportunity of making themselves useful to their country.

Yours faithfully,
E. N. B. BENTLEY,

DISCHARGED PRISONERS

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TIMES

Sir,—My brother, the Rev. Thomas Little, has acted for years as his Majesty's Chaplain at Dartmoor Convict Prison, used chiefly for old offenders. I have had the privilege of sharing his social and spiritual work both inside and outside the prison gates. The only reason for this personal reference is to show that I am not unfamiliar with the subject about which I venture to write.

My brother is convinced that the best work can be done for these unfortunate men when they leave the prison. It is true that the Discharged Prisoners' Aid Society assisted by the Government give them temporary help while they seek employment. But, though employers of labour exhibit the greatest kindness to, and interest in, these men, the slightest knowledge of the state of the industrial world proves that their chances of getting work are very slight indeed. The Church and Salvation Army and other societies offer valuable help. But their assistance is largely dependent on kindly disposed employers of labour. And my experience reveals how difficult it is for these unfortunate brothers of ours to get employment. They are almost compelled to move in a vicious circle, and too many, alas! return to Dartmoor.

It seems to me that the obvious remedy is the formation of a workers' colony, where those who want work may find it and so restore their sense of personal responsibility and independence. My submission is that such a colony properly managed would be a financial success. And I am sure many of our discharged prisoners would hail it as an invaluable boon. For instance, a few days ago a poor fellow left this prison without a single friend in the wide, wide world. Were it not for friendly Christian ministers here and elsewhere he would be cast utterly adrift on the world. That man I know would welcome an opportunity to earn an honest living. My suggestion is that it should be possible for the Government to establish such a colony, and I believe the moral remedial results would be astonishing. The Wesleyan Methodist Church has such a proposal before it for its own prisoner adherents, who, fortunately, are few. But as the ex-Home Secretary outlined in his last prison report, it ought to be done on a national scale. I make this suggestion in the earnest hope that other readers of your great and influential journal will canvass the subject in your columns, and I trust good results will follow. I know many of these ex-convicts have a heavy record against them. But who of us can judge his brother in such matters? And it is their very weakness that appeals for our help. Such a scheme, I am certain, would save them that are ready to perish.

Believe me to be yours faithfully,
R. ERNEST LITTLE.

DUTIES OF THE NAVY

IN HOME WATERS AND BEYOND

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TIMES

Sir,—The statement issued by both Mr. Stimson and Senator Reed "as their ultimate appeal to commonsense" to the effect that the Naval Treaty allows the peoples of the three greatest naval Powers, England, Japan, and the United States, "to rest secure in the knowledge that no one of them can be attacked in its home waters by any navy on earth" (The Times, June 21) should, it is most respectfully submitted, not pass unchallenged. It is suggested that such a statement will, if examined, prove to be mistaken. What is more, it assumes that the home waters are the only places that matter.

Taking the last proposition first, it may be that security in their home waters is sufficient for the needs of the United States. That is their affair. But for us, not only must our trade (that is, the import of food and raw materials and the export of manufactured goods by which we pay for our food and raw materials) have security in the home waters, but elsewhere also. In particular in the Mediterranean and the great routes in the Atlantic, Indian, and Pacific Oceans in which our trade passes and on all routes on which in war we have to move our armies to assist in the mutual defence of the different parts of our scattered Empire, defence by convoy, supported where required by our Battle Fleet, is necessary. As far as the defence of the Dominions and Dependencies is concerned, the alternative would be military forces in every part, a great burden to the taxpayer and in the end no security, for the Dominions and Dependencies would still be liable to being distressed by the cutting off of their external activities of export and import.

Turning to the first proposition, we cannot "rest secure," for, if we have only the warships allowed by the Naval Treaty while the European naval Powers provide themselves with the navies suggested at the Naval Conference, we most certainly can be attacked, and successfully attacked, in our home waters. We have only to recollect the problem of the defence of the Scandinavian convoy in the North Sea in the Great War when, with fewer and less important convoys to defend against an enemy who could operate from one base only, a serious risk was run; how serious the risk was has been shown us by Admiral Scheer ("Germany's High Sea Fleet in the War," pages 318 and following). No one with a vestige of strategical sense would be under any illusion on the point even if Lord Jellicoe had not definitely stated in the House of Lords debate on May 8 that the reductions in our naval strength contemplated in the Naval Treaty "go beyond the limits of security" (Hansard, May 8, 1930, p. 458). Meanwhile, the hand is writing on the wall.

Your obedient servant,
GEOFFREY DRAGE.

WOMEN AND INDIAN POLICY

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TIMES

Sir,—I was very much interested to read Sir Frank Swettenham's letter, headed "Women and Indian Policy," in your issue of this morning. I should like, however, to make it clear that the opinions expressed by the chairman, Mrs. William Graham, and the resolutions passed at that meeting did not by any means command the support of all the women represented.

The Central Women's Advisory Committee of the Women's Unionist Organization, of which I am chairman, was invited to send delegates to the gathering convened under the name of the "British Women's Conference," over which Mrs. William Graham, the wife of the President of the Board of Trade, presided. In view of the importance of the subject, we decided to send two delegates. The second resolution on the agenda urged

His Majesty's Government to proceed forthwith to establish India, with her consent, as a free and equal community in the British Commonwealth of Nations.

Our two delegates, acting on the instructions of the committee, made an emphatic protest against bringing forward such a resolution at this juncture, since it concerned matters referred by his Majesty's Government to a Statutory Commission whose recommendations had not then been published. In these circumstances, I feel it desirable that publicity should be given to our protest, in order to make it clear that the resolutions carried at that gathering can in no way be taken as representing the considered opinion of "British women."

Yours faithfully,
GWENDOLEN IVEAGH, Chairman, Central Women's Advisory Committee, Women's Unionist Organization.

TRAFFIC IN OXFORD

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TIMES

Sir,—The congestion in the streets of Oxford is appalling. Sir Charles Oman recently wrote deploring the effect of vibration upon its historic buildings. To make a by-pass road anywhere close to Oxford is difficult, and would be very expensive. But there is surely another plan that might diminish the trouble.

At present there goes through Oxford not only the through traffic of motor-omnibuses and lorries bound for the West via Witney, Cheltenham, and Gloucester, but also that bound for the North-west via Woodstock or Banbury. The latter might be kept out of Oxford altogether if the county council would reconstruct the road which branches off at Wheatley and goes through Forest Hill, Stanton St. John, and Islip, crosses the Banbury road, and joins the Chipping Norton road between Woodstock and Enstone. At present this road is hardly used at all; it is narrow, winding, and has very bad corners, especially where it crosses the Cherwell and the Oxford Canal. No one who has come by the road from High Wycombe to Wheatley (now as good as any in the kingdom) is tempted to turn off it upon this inferior track. But it is, merely as a route, the shortest and the logical way from Wheatley to Chipping Norton, and so to Worcester, Kidderminster, Wolverhampton, Shrewsbury, and the North-west in general. To make it a practical route would be to spend money that could well be saved from spoiling the Bath road through Savernake, and would, I believe, deflect much traffic that now goes through Oxford.

Your obedient servant,
F. D. M.

MUTTON PIES

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TIMES

Sir,—Let me recall the passage in which Lewis Carroll enshrined this forgotten Victorian delicacy, with no sordid reference to its mere monetary value:—

"For instance, if I wished, Sir,
Of mutton-pies to tell,
Should I say 'dreams of fleecy flocks
Pent in a wheaten cell'?"
"Why, yes," the old man said: "that phrase
Would answer very well."

I am, &c.,

MORE SPENDING?

In a letter from the Minister of Health local authorities have been invited to discuss a number of questions with a view to relieving unemployment; what additional works can be undertaken, what can be done to advance this or that, and what, above all, can be done to engage additional staffs. The schemes to be suggested are all palliatives and remedies of a temporary and costly nature which, if adopted, will have one certain result—the ever-increasing burden of additional local rates. Branches of the N.C.U. are pressing the need for economy in local and national administration, and it is incumbent on all who share this view to do something to prevent the spread of the "squandermania" policy. The remedy for much unemployment lies in a different direction. By its stubborn opposition to safeguarding, the Government is causing anxiety and preventing development in the sound productive industries of the nation.—COLONEL H. D. LAWRENCE, general secretary, National Citizens' Union, 56, Victoria-street, S.W.1.

BOOKS FOR DISTRESSED MINERS

It is with feelings of deep gratitude that I write, on behalf of the committee of the Senghenydd Workmen's Library, to thank you for kindly publishing my appeal for books on May 21, and also to express the sincere thanks of workmen in the distressed mining village of Senghenydd to the readers of The Times for their generous response to the appeal. Over 800 volumes have been received up to date, and the secretary has acknowledged every parcel where the identity of the donor is known. I visited the library on Friday, and was myself truly amazed at the goodness shown by your readers. The librarian proudly showed me 17 long shelves packed with books dealing with every conceivable subject. "They are to be known as The Times Collection," he said.—Mr. DAVID T. LEWIS, The Merthyr Express, Tydfil House, Nelson, Cardiff.

ENGLISH SPORTS SHOES

Those who are about to buy their shoes for lawn tennis or other summer sport would do Lancashire a service if they would ask their shop assistant for sports shoes made in Great Britain and see that they get what they ask for. Lancashire supplies the uppers for all the sports shoes made in this country.—Mr. EDWARD ATACK, 79, Meadow-road, Lower Broughton, Manchester.

A TRIBUTE TO THE POST OFFICE

As the granddaughter of a Scottish postman of last century, I have felt a sense of personal regret at the deterioration of our postal system since the War, and the loss of prestige to the service. I make haste, therefore, to give an instance showing what it can still do when on its mettle. On Saturday, June 21, I received from an unknown correspondent in Amsterdam an express letter, written on Thursday, June 19. It was addressed to "Miss Jessie Forsyth, Student of mathematics, Cambridge University, Cambridge, England." That was once my name, and I was once a student (though not of mathematics) in Cambridge, over 20 years ago. The letter (which contained a charming offer of hospitality to a supposed student of small means, the name having been obtained through a student travel committee), had been sent by the Cambridge postal authorities to the University Registrary, thence to Newnham College, thence, after some inquiries—I am judging by the notes written on the envelope—to this place, which has only a village postal service. All this in less than 48 hours, including the journey from Amsterdam.—Mrs. JESSIE FORSYTH ANDREWS, King's Langley, Herts.

WONDERFUL CATCHES

As wonderful catches are being recalled, perhaps the following will be of interest. I give the account as related by a contemporary (1899):—"As Dr. W. G. Grace was walking across the cycling track enclosure at the Crystal Palace a swallow flew very close to him. He made a clutch at the bird and caught it." A few days later the following lines appeared in another newspaper:—

Though with your exploits in the past
You beat all records hollow,
We draw the line now, for this last
Is very hard to swallow.

—Mr. GERALD LODER.

MEN FOR THE MINISTRY

In one Rural Deanery in a southern diocese, to my knowledge, there are 16 clergy in 15 parishes, ministering to a total population of 13,981. Five of the clergy are attached to four town parishes with a population of 9,922, while the remaining 4,059 people are ministered to by 11 clergy in county parishes. Could not instances such as this, showing the misuse of existing man-power, be multiplied from many of our dioceses? When the Church has learned to make a right use of the clergy she has already, then the laity will more readily support schemes for the training of others.—The REV. A. E. WORSLEY, Durley, Hants.

MINISTERS' POWERS

May I correct an error in your account of my evidence on the question of decisions of Ministers and departmental tribunals, given last Wednesday before the Committee appointed to consider and report on that subject? My suggestion was that appeals from the Minister to the High Court on questions of fact—not, as was stated, on questions of law—should be subject to the permission of the Minister. On questions of law or mixed law and fact, such an appeal was to be subject to the decision of the High Court, on summons, that it was fit for argument.—Mr. EDWARD A. MITCHELL-INNES.

THE FASCIST STATE

In answer to "An Italian Liberal's Comments" on the Fascist State, I would like to say that my compatriot's "sorrows" are altogether fictitious. Is it not true that in post-War times Liberalism remained in Italy stagnant, even degenerating into a flase conception of liberty, thus giving the extreme ignorant parties an opportunity for plunging the country into chaos and disorder? Whatever my compatriot's opinions are on the new form of government in Italy, I would ask him and his friends to look at the results obtained by Fascism. The "State Book," of which my Liberal friend speaks so lightly, will teach our youths an unlimited love for their "Patria e Religione," while under Liberal past Governments Communists and Freemasons were left undisturbed to teach immorality, disorder, and the most unfair anti-clericalism. The statement that income-tax in Italy is to-day 150 per cent. higher than in 1923 is not only mischievous, but incorrect. The truth is that under past Liberal Governments most Italians escaped taxation unpunished.—CAV. G. P. ANZINO, 113, Maida Vale, W.9.

TREES IN DOMESDAY BOOK

On June 30, 1928, a number of members of the Richmond Athenaeum visited Littleton Park, Shepperton, by the kind invitation of Sir Edward Nicholl, the owner. In the course of the visit Sir Edward pointed out a tree in the grounds which had formerly served as a boundary mark, and as such, he assured the visitors, it was mentioned in the Domesday Book.—Mr. W. R. KING, hon. secretary, Richmond Athenaeum, 8, The Vineyard, Richmond.

OLD ENGLISH COOKERY

The English Folk Cookery Association, founded in 1928, is not only collecting local and national recipes, but also, as far as possible, the origins and associations of different types of English cookery from the earliest times. The object is to make a permanent national record of really good English cookery. Real old English cookery suited to modern tastes is the best and healthiest in the world, and it is a national duty to preserve it by means of a permanent historical record.—Miss F. WHITE, Hon. Secretary, English Folk Cookery Association, 1A, Nevern-road, S.W.5.

VILLAGE WELLS AND PUMPS

As local water companies extend their systems throughout our villages and hamlets, so the village wells and pumps are left derelict, and hospitality suffers. If in the old days we could erect public troughs of water for horse and cattle, so in these days charity demands that we should keep our village wells sweet and our pumps in order, so that the indigent, the traveller, the wayfarer may still draw their cups of cold water (far better than any company's water) as and when needed during the hot summer months.—Mr. E. J. F. GARNET MAN, Benenden.

HOLIDAYS IN GERMANY

Will you allow me, as an Englishman living in Berlin, to support Mr. G. R. Parker's appeal to English parents that they should be willing to take a German child for the holidays in exchange for one of their own young people? There is no country to which they could send their young people with greater confidence. German mothers are noted for being conscientious, careful, and kind, while cleanliness is worshipped here. English people are not yet alive to the practical advantages of knowing the German language. It is clear that trade between our two countries will become ever greater and more valuable. Germans give themselves untold trouble to learn English. If we do not learn their language too we place ourselves at a disadvantage in business matters. Now for English people German is a language less easy than French. Fewer people will, therefore, take the trouble to learn it, and the reward will consequently be higher for those who do. Childhood is the time to learn a foreign language.—Mr. RICHARD COLENUTT, Berlin.

IMPERIAL PRESS CONFERENCE

A VISIT TO OXFORD

LORD GREY ON FREEDOM OF DOMINIONS

(FROM OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT)

OXFORD, JUNE 23

The delegates to the Imperial Press Conference visited Oxford to-day, and, although their stay was short, they were able to see something of the beauty of the city and to come into touch with its atmosphere. It was peculiarly appropriate that they should be entertained at luncheon by the Rhodes Trustees in the fine hall of Rhodes House. After hearing a speech from Viscount Grey of Fallodon which followed the luncheon, the delegates were conducted round a number of the colleges by members of the Oxford branch of the Victoria League, and later they attended a reception at New College by invitation of the Warden, Mr. H. A. L. Fisher.

The guests were received at Rhodes House by Mr. Geoffrey Dawson, one of the trustees, and Lord Grey of Fallodon, Chancellor of the University. Lord Lothian, the secretary of the Trust, was also present. The party included Major Astor, M.P., president of the Conference, and Lady Violet Astor, and Lieutenant-Colonel J. H. Woods, the vice-president, and Mrs. Woods.

Mr. DAWSON, who presided at the luncheon, said he had been asked to express the regret of several fellow-trustees that they could not be there. Their welcome was none the less sincere because they could not be present in the flesh. It was impossible to imagine, he added, a more appropriate starting point for the visit of the delegates than Rhodes House, which had become a centre for the study of the politics, economics, and history of the English-speaking peoples. The hall was the meeting place on formal occasions of the Rhodes Scholars; it was the visible memorial in Oxford of the great South African who brought them there; it was the work of a great architect, Sir Herbert Baker, who was as well known overseas as in this country. They were highly honoured by the presence of Lord Grey. It was a far greater honour that he should have journeyed here to greet the members of the Conference on his own ground than if he had been merely one of a list of eminent statesmen who had addressed the Conference in London and elsewhere.

LORD GREY'S SPEECH

LORD GREY of FALLODON, after a tribute to The Times, said:—

The Imperial Press Conference is a most important thing in the maintenance of the British Empire. The British Empire contains many different races. Different races have naturally a different sense of values, different temperaments, and different outlooks. It is only by exchanging knowledge and getting to know each other that they can adjust their own respective views to those of the other parts of the Empire. More than that, even in those parts of the Empire which are inhabited entirely by the British race, the race is always varying and producing types, according to differences of environment and climate and the problems with which every country has to deal. It is important and essential that the members of the Empire Press, which is the great means by which public opinion can be informed and instructed, should meet together to acquire knowledge of the different parts of the Empire, to exchange views, and come to understand the different points of view of the different parts of the Empire.

The British Empire is something too complex to be talked about in one speech. The problem of India, for instance, is different from that of other parts of the Empire. I cannot help paying my tribute when I mention the problem of India to the already published part of the Report of the Simon Commission. This does not contain recommendations, but it contains a statement of the problem that has to be dealt with, the problem of Indian government. I do not mean the British government of India, but of Indian government, whatever may be the power that exercises that government. Everybody who has read the Report will realize that the problem is something more difficult and exceptional than anything which exists, not only in any part of the British Empire, but in any part of the world.

INDEPENDENCE AND UNION

What I specially have in mind to-day is the entirely different relationship between the self-governing Dominions as part of the British Empire. I have asked myself why it is I feel so much attached to the British Empire. It is well to ask such a question, because it is possible to go on using a phrase, and to become attached to it, as a matter of course, when all the time the thing may be losing its vital force. There are two reasons which make me specially attached to the British Empire. One is that the relationship of the self-governing Dominions is a new conception in the history of the world. It is a combination of independence and union; two things which on paper a man might well write a forceful essay to prove were incompatible. It would in the same way be possible to write an essay to prove that the British Constitution is unworkable. The British Constitution has not yet been proved to be unworkable, and the British Empire as a combination of independence and union is an established fact. We are proud of it. One must not think of it in any arrogant sense. It was never planned by us. It grew without being planned. There are various kinds of statesmanship. I suppose the highest kind is that which foresees and plans. Every one aims at that in statesmanship, but it is not the kind of statesmanship, however high it may be intellectually, which has been most successful in human affairs. Human affairs are so complex, mutable, and uncertain that as a rule they defy the foresight and planning of any human brain. The British Empire is not the result of planning. Indeed, if the experiences of the eighteenth-century people are regarded, the Empire in the sense it now exists, the union of the self-governing Dominions, is something beyond human achievement.

GUARANTEE OF LIBERTY

The sort of statesmanship for which the British Empire has been specially distinguished has been that sort of statesmanship which has the gift of recognizing facts after the facts are established. Take, for example, the last Imperial Conference. It issued a statement that the Prime Ministers of the self-governing Dominions were all equal. That was not a new thing. They were not made equal by that declaration of the Imperial Conference. That Conference recognized the simple fact, that they had come to be equals. We are all proud of this new conception of Empire. We all wish to make it a success, and that is one reason for our attachment to the Empire. The other reason is that the Empire in the sense I have spoken of it to-day, the British Commonwealth of Nations, is the greatest guarantee of liberty the world has yet known. There is no single self-governing part of the Empire which has anything to gain in freedom by separation. In its own internal affairs each part is as free as Great Britain itself. Beyond that, now, the self-governing Dominions, where they think it worth while, may appoint their own separate representatives at foreign capitals to deal with those interests which are the special concern of the self-governing Dominions and the foreign country in question. There is nothing to be gained in freedom by separation, and, on the other hand, there is something to be lost.

Take my feeling as an Englishman about the union with Scotland. I am attached to that union, because I believe that Scotsmen have the same passion for individual liberty as Englishmen have, and that the union of the two countries is an extra guarantee of the individual liberty of every inhabitant in either England or Scotland. Speaking as a Briton, with the same attachment to individual liberty and independence, I feel these are more secure because Britain is part of the great Commonwealth of Nations than if we stood alone. Is not that exactly the same feeling that every self-governing Dominion has throughout the Empire, that they have nothing to gain in freedom by separation, and that the freedom they have is more secure because they are a part of the Commonwealth? I think of the British Empire as a Commonwealth of Nations. I think it may be summed up by saying that as regards liberty, the good will of the whole is the bulwark for the liberty of each part of it.

Lord Grey, in conclusion, said it would strike anybody who came to Oxford that there was something venerable about the buildings. They suggested age, but he could assure them that old buildings and old traditions were no barrier against modern thought and new ideas. Those who gained distinction in the University of Oxford did so by a high level of natural intelligence, which made them open and receptive to modern thought and new ideas and knowledge, and was as fertile soil for those things as anybody could desire to have. (Cheers.)

Mr. G. A. L. GREEN, of South Africa, expressed the thanks of the delegates to Lord Grey for his welcome, for his clear understanding of the aims and objects of the Empire Press Union, and for his statesmanlike remarks on the Constitution of the British Empire. It was not unfitting, he said, that on this occasion they should be the guests of the Rhodes Trustees, because the objects with which Mr. Rhodes founded his scholarships were identical with the objects which inspired the founders of the Empire Press Union.

EXPLORATION BY AIR

LORD THOMSON ON THE ROUTE TO CANADA

The annual dinner of the Royal Geographical Society was held at the Connaught Rooms last night. Colonel Sir Charles Close, the president, was in the chair.

LORD THOMSON, Secretary of State for Air, proposing the toast of "The Society," said that it had about reached its centenary and he wished it years of increasing activity and usefulness. The new buildings nearing completion owed their existence largely to the late Lord Curzon.

Speaking of the project for linking this country with Canada by an air route via Northern Greenland, Lord Thomson said that when that scheme was put before him some time ago by a number of enterprising young men he was able to give encouragement to the enterprise, but, alas! he was unable to produce any funds. He was glad to learn that the society, which had no doubt more funds available than the Chancellor of the Exchequer, had made a contribution towards the project. The possibility of reaching Canada in two and a half days from England would be a great step forward in aerial communication. The advantages to be derived thereby both by this country and Canada were obvious.

Speaking of the great assistance of aerial navigation to survey work, Lord Thomson said he expected that the air survey of Northern Rhodesia, covering 90,000 square miles, would be completed and the results published within two years, a fact which ought to convert the doubting Thomases to the value of that form of survey. The airship was going to be of great assistance to geographical survey, because the surveyors would have the opportunity of working from a stationary vessel, with every conceivable instrument at their disposal, and would be able to hover almost indefinitely over the territory being explored.

The CHAIRMAN, in reply, said that many of the explorations of the world were now being done by air. The Greenland exploration to find out the shortest way to Canada would be under the supervision of Mr. H. G. Watkins, one of the best known of the young explorers.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL C. K. HOWARD-BURY proposed the toast of "The Medallists," and Mr. C. E. BORCHGREVINK, Mr. F. KINGDON WARD, and M. E. DE MARGERIE replied.

DR. T. G. LONGSTAFF proposed the toast of "The Guests," and PRINCE DAMRONG and the DEAN of ST. PAUL'S responded.

CAMBRIDGE AIR SQUADRON

FLYING PRACTICE IN CAMP

SALISBURY, JUNE 23

The Cambridge University Air Squadron, which is the air equivalent of the O.T.C., has begun its annual camp at Old Sarum, and though the weather for the first week has been bad its members have done almost as much flying as they did in the fine weather of the corresponding week last year. One-third of the squadron is now in camp; by the end of the six weeks' training all the 75 members will have had their turn and most of them will have qualified for solo flying.

Eight Avro training machines and four Bristol Fighters are in regular use, and as this camp is now devoted entirely to flying training the members are divided into two flights, which take turns at flying and occupy the rest of their time in visits to Service establishments in the neighbourhood and to the study of the Army cooperation work of No. 16 Squadron, on whose aerodrome they are stationed. Flying at Duxford during term is limited to half an hour a week, and intensive work is done in preparation for the proficiency certificate covering knowledge of airmanship, rigging engines, and air pilotage such as would enable a man to qualify for a commission in war time.

Here the flying practice is equally intensive. Last week, in spite of bad weather, 176 hours of flying were done, and included all that is necessary in the training of a pilot. These young men do loops, spins, and rolls under the supervision of an instructor. This afternoon in a gusty wind of 30 miles an hour one member climbed to 5,000ft. and then came down in a spin to 2,000ft. The wind was too high for first solo flights, but the four Bristols were out in the hands of more experienced members and flew to Tangmere and back in flight formation.

Special care is taken in teaching how to make forced landings. On any flight the pupil may be ordered by his instructor to make a forced landing, usually at approved points at Boscombe Down, Upavon, or Porton, but theoretically almost anywhere. Already seven members have qualified for solo flying at this camp, and as last year only four failed to reach this stage, so this year's camp promises few disappointments provided the weather permits the tests to be made.

This year the work of the squadron as a feeder for the R.A.F. will probably reach its highest point. Ten members are expected to enter the Service, and seven of them will have done over 100 hours flying and two will have flown over 150 hours solo.

R 101 AT MOORING MAST

PLANS FOR IMPROVEMENT IN SPEED

R 101 was safely taken out of her shed, walked across the aerodrome at Cardington, and attached to the mooring mast in the early hours of yesterday in the highest wind in which a British airship has been handled.

Mr. D. GIBLETT, Director of Meteorology (Airship Division), stated that the wind was 11 miles an hour and that had it not been steady and straight along the shed in direction, the operation would have been impossible. The meteorologists had prophesied suitable conditions at dawn, but while the handling party of 300 was assembling from Bedford and the R.A.F. depôt between 2 and 3 a.m. the wind was getting up to 20 miles an hour. Shortly after four, however, it fell and became steady at 11 to 12 miles an hour. At 4.38 the airship was handled straight into the wind through the shed doors and in four minutes was clear of the shed without mishap. A little over an hour later she was secured to the mooring mast.

Major G. H. Scott, who was in charge of the handling, was very concerned that the airship should be kept head to wind during the three-quarters of a mile walk across the aerodrome, because if it had swung broadside to the wind the handling party, large though it was, would have experienced considerable difficulty in holding the airship down.

R 101 will undertake some local flights during the week, and on Saturday will appear in the pageant at Hendon. Slight damage to the fabric near the top of the airship was noticed yesterday afternoon, but it was learned that "it was nothing to worry about."

Since her last appearance before Christmas the lifting capacity of the airship has been increased by six tons owing to alterations to gasbags and the discarding of certain mechanism. In the middle of next month R 101 will return to the shed for further improvements, which consist of the installation of another bay amidships and of a complete new set of improved oil engines capable of a reverse action. These alterations will give R 101 the biggest air transport capacity of any craft in the world, and will increase her speed in the air to between 70 and 80 miles an hour. Her main disadvantage has been lack of speed, but the new reversible engines overcome that difficulty.

R 101 is experimental throughout. She is the first airship built in steel, and stainless steel tubing is the chief material in her hull. The cutting in two of the hull and the insertion of an additional bay would be impossible with any other airship.

DERBY DAY DISPUTE ON OMNIBUS

SUMMONS AGAINST SIR B. CLARKE DISMISSED

At Epsom Police Court yesterday Major Victor Beaufort, of the Goring Hotel, Ebury-street, S.W., summoned Sir Basil Clarke, of Cadogan-gardens, Chelsea, for common assault. In the wording of the summons, it was alleged that Sir Basil Clarke "did unlawfully assault and beat the said Major Victor Beaufort at Epsom Downs on June 4."

Mr. B. THOMAS, for Major Beaufort, said the summons arose out of an incident on the top of an omnibus at the Derby. Major Beaufort and his wife and stepson bought three tickets for places on a St. Dunstan's omnibus, and Major Beaufort took up his position in the gangway between the two front seats, intending to watch the race. Seated on his left were Admiral Sir Henry Bruce and a lady, and behind them were Sir Basil Clarke and Lady Clarke. The Admiral complained that he could not see the race with Major Beaufort standing in the position he was. Major Beaufort asked another smaller man to stand in front of him, which he did, and when the race finished there was some dispute as to the winner, and for the general information of those on the omnibus Major Beaufort stood with one foot on the left seat and one on the right to see the number. Whether he fell or whether the Admiral pushed him inadvertently or not, Major Beaufort fell forward, as if to go over the front of the omnibus. Saving himself, he asked the Admiral what he thought he was doing.

Before he could recover, Sir Basil Clarke dealt Major Beaufort a blow in the face, a blow of such force that he cut the inside of his mouth against his false teeth, and blackened his eye for a week afterwards. Sir Basil followed it up by attempting to throw Major Beaufort off the omnibus, coming at him with raised knee as if to kick him in the stomach. Major Beaufort, in self defence, took Sir Basil's head under his arms and held him "in chancery," until he saw there was no more fight left in him.

Counsel said he could only describe it as ruffianly conduct, and for a man in Sir Basil's position it aggravated the offence. If a man of his position behaved in a ruffianly way he should be treated as if he were a ruffian.

Major Beaufort gave evidence bearing out the story related by his counsel.

Questioned about his size, Major Beaufort said that he stood 6ft., and was 40in. round the chest. He denied that he was standing in a way calculated to make everything unpleasant for those not as big as he. If any witness stated that he adopted a threatening attitude towards the Admiral it would be a lie.

Mr. FOX-ANDREWS, on behalf of Sir Basil Clarke, said that, under the impression Major Beaufort was about to strike the Admiral, Sir Basil was of the opinion that it was his duty as a gentleman, and in law, to prevent an unjustifiable assault. He did what any decent Englishman would have done, and hit Major Beaufort. Sir Basil took that course, and having done it did not regret it.

Sir Basil Clarke gave evidence that Major Beaufort obstructed the view, and his answer to various requests to sit down was always, "You shut up." When asked by the conductor to go to his seat he said, "I am going to stop here." Major Beaufort strode up in a manner which gave every evidence that he was about to strike the Admiral. The witness continued, "I stepped forward and gave him a blow with my left fist. He turned round on me, and I gave him another with the right. Blows fell very quickly, both right and left." There had been previous trouble with Major Beaufort and an hour and a half of arguing.

Cross-examined, Sir Basil Clarke denied that he went at Major Beaufort with his knee raised. The major tried to pull his ear off, and he had to have it dressed.

Dismissing the summons, the CHAIRMAN said there would be no order for costs.

THE SALE ROOM

ROSES FROM WINDSOR

As for several years past, Messrs. Christie will commemorate Alexandra Day by selling two bouquets of roses from Windsor Castle, presented by the Queen. There are two auctions at Christie's to-day, in one room jewels and in the other the Breitmeyer furniture. At 2.30 each sale will be suspended until the roses have been disposed of.

At Hurcomb's, Calder House, Piccadilly, yesterday, a Queen Anne red lacquer and gilt bureau bookcase fetched £400 (Mallett); a set of six Hepplewhite mahogany arm chairs, £270 (A. J. Cohen); a William Kent console table, £120 (J. A. Lewis); a Louis XV. Kingwood writing table, £120 (Cameron); and a Sheraton mahogany and inlaid serpentine-front sideboard, £102 (H. M. Lee).

FORTHCOMING AUCTIONS

Some important country sales have been fixed for July. Mr. C. C. Cadle, of Canterbury, will sell on July 1-3 the extensive interior and exterior fixtures and fittings of Dulford House, Kentisbeare, Cullompton, Devon. Among the various lots are many mahogany doors, the finely-carved mahogany staircase, mantelpieces, &c.; and the fabric of the building will be sold for demolition.

On July 7, and four following days, Messrs. John D. Wood and Co. (6, Mount-street, W.) will sell on the premises the whole of the contents of Kyre Park, Tenbury Wells, Worcester, mostly got together by Jonathan Pytts, who died in 1781. The Old English furniture is especially noteworthy, and comprises examples of the sixteenth and two following centuries. There are also arms, a pair of Cromweilian stirrups, carpets and other textiles, and an extensive library of eighteenth century and other books. The library was in part formed by Sir Edward Pytts, a famous Elizabethan knight, and includes the deeds and documents of the Pytt family, and a manuscript note-book of the founder, as well as various other manuscripts. There are also a few pictures, mostly portraits, and drawings.

In the interval Messrs. William Willett (Sloane-square) are selling on Monday next and three following days, by order of the executors of the late Dowager Lady Furness, the contents of Hamels Park, Buntingford, Herts. This sale comprises Georgian and other furniture, objects of art, pictures, and books.

SERVICE OF MASS ON A FOOTBALL GROUND

BISHOP OF LONDON NOT TO ATTEND

Mr. J. A. Kensit, of the Protestant Truth Society, presented to the Bishop of London yesterday a petition, signed by 24,563 persons, asking him not to attend the service of Mass arranged to be held on the Chelsea football ground on Sunday, on the occasion of the Anglo-Catholic Congress. The petition appealed to the Bishop "to withdraw your promise to attend the Anglo-Catholic 'High Mass' at the Chelsea football ground for the inauguration of the Anglo-Catholic Congress, as we consider that this Mass is a direct challenge to the Reformed character of the Church of England."

The Bishop, after a conversation with Mr. Kensit, wrote him the following letter:—

"Dear Mr. Kensit,—I have received your protest, signed by 24,563 persons, this morning and have made time to see you myself to show proper respect to the opinions therein expressed. I shall not be attending the service myself, as I have already informed the president of the congress. I shall be attending the opening service in St. Paul's Cathedral until 1 p.m., but I cannot withdraw my sanction to the service in question. Only communicants of the Church of England will be present, most of whom will have received Communion in the morning, and there will be a number of communicants at the service. The Prayer-book of the Church of England will be used. It seems, therefore, unreasonable to prohibit a service which is designed to be a devotional prelude to a specially devotional congress.—Yours very sincerely, A. F. LONDON."

ATTACK ON ROMFORD SCHOOLGIRL

The Essex police, who are trying to trace the assailant of Mary Celia O'Connor, the 15-year-old Romford schoolgirl, attach importance to an axe handle discovered on Sunday near the place where the girl was found unconscious. There are marks on it resembling bloodstains and strands of hair, and it has been submitted to experts for microscopical examination. The girl is making slow but definite progress, and has now good chances of recovery. Men at Dunstable, Linton, near Cambridge, and Hackney were questioned yesterday in connexion with the affair, but satisfied the police, and no one was detained.

LARGEST BRITISH MOTOR-SHIP

WHITE STAR LINER BRITANNIC

LIVERPOOL-NEW YORK SERVICE

(FROM OUR SHIPPING CORRESPONDENT)

Next Saturday the White Star motor-liner Britannic, of about 27,000 tons gross, is to sail from Liverpool on her maiden voyage to New York. She is the first motor-vessel of the White Star Line, and is to be joined next year by a sister ship, which is now being built at Belfast. She is the largest British motor-vessel and the biggest ship to be based on Liverpool.

Officially the Britannic is a cabin ship—a technical term used by the North Atlantic Shipping Conference for rating purposes. Briefly, it implies a liner of moderate size and of moderate speed. The ships at present in the Liverpool-New York service, for which the Britannic has been designed, are the Adriatic, Baltic, and Cedric, all of which are very popular vessels.

The Britannic has accommodation for 1,550 passengers in the cabin, tourist third, and third classes. The ship was inspected during the week-end by a number of visitors, and none could fail to be impressed by the well-furnished public rooms in the cabin class, which include a large dining saloon in the Louis XIV. style, a handsome lounge, a dainty drawing room, a card room, a verandah café, and an old-fashioned smoking room, all connected by a beautiful and broad, long gallery. The other features include a children's playground, a gymnasium, and a swimming bath. There are suites and many large state-rooms, and a fine sports deck for deck tennis and other games, and anyone studying carefully all the amenities might well ask what more could be desired in the form of comfort by any passenger wishing to travel first-class. Yet the fares charged for passages in these cabin ships are much below those quoted for the larger and faster ships employed in the service between the Channel ports and New York.

SMOKING-ROOMS IN FUNNEL

The whole of the accommodation was thrown open to the company which boarded the vessel at Belfast on Sunday morning and spent the day cruising in the Irish Sea and off the Scottish coast. In the evening a cinematograph performance was given with talking films. The visitors saw the public rooms in the tourist third cabin, including a lounge, smoking-room and children's room, and then they inspected another set of somewhat similar rooms in the third class. The lowest-rated accommodation in the ship represents a very great improvement on that in the older, and even in many modern ships. As one indication of consideration for the comfort of passengers, hot and cold water is laid on to every state room or cabin in the vessel. The comfort of the deck and engineer officers has also been studied, and an unusual feature is the provision of two airy smoking-rooms for the deck and engineer officers in the forward funnel, which, unlike the other squat funnel, has no mechanical uses.

Speaking on board the ship Mr. A. B. CAUTY, general manager, described how the White Star Line had always been a pioneer in ordering ships of large size and in providing comfortable travel. Some suggestions which were recalled for adding to comfort at the time when the first Britannic, of 5,000 tons, entered the service in 1874, sounded primitive in view of what had since been done. By happy coincidence, the Commander of the first Britannic, Sir Bertram Hayes, was on board the third Britannic, and, likewise, Commodore Barlett, who commanded the second Britannic, which, as a hospital ship, was destroyed by enemy action during the War.

Mr. W. R. ROBERTS, manager of the company, expressed the view, well founded, that the Britannic would stimulate interest in the service between Liverpool and Boston and New York. Mr. F. E. REBBECK, managing director of Harland and Wolff, the builders of the ship, while recognizing the progress now being made in both steam and motor engines, gave some remarkable figures bearing on the propelling machinery of the new Britannic. The most economical steamer of similar size designed at the same time as the vessel would, he said, require about 50 per cent. more fuel; all the machinery in the ship would run for three minutes on a barrel of oil; and the energy required by the motor engines for the propulsion of the vessel at full speed was less than that wasted in a steamship of similar size of the most up-to-date type. The propelling machinery of the Britannic consists of two 10-cylinder double-acting four-cycle motor engines of the Harland-B and W type of 10,000 horse-power each. The vessel is to have a speed of 17 or 18 knots.

Among those who spoke on board in high terms of what they had seen were Brigadier-General F. H. Williamson, Director of Postal Services, and Mr. Philip Holland, American Consul-General in Liverpool.

The company crossed from Liverpool to Belfast on Saturday in the motor-vessel Ulster Queen, only completed this year, of 3,500 tons gross, belonging to the Belfast Steam Ship Company, which is one of the three motor-ships that are about twice the size of the steamships they have replaced in the regular service.

BRITISH INDUSTRIES FAIR

ARRANGEMENTS FOR 1931

The Department of Overseas Trade announces that the British Industries Fair, 1931, will open in London and Birmingham as usual on the third Monday in February (February 16), and will close on Friday, February 27.

In a letter to manufacturers, the Comptroller-General, Department of Overseas Trade, Sir Edward Crowe, writes:—

"The London Section of the Fair, which, as you are no doubt aware, is organized by this Department, will again be held at Olympia, where all the buildings, including the whole of the Empire Hall, will be available for the first time. His Majesty's Government have again made a grant of £25,000 for advertising the Fair, and the services of the Trade Commissioners, the Commercial Diplomatic Officers, and the Consular Service will be available for making the Fair known to trade buyers in all parts of the world. In view of the success of the last Fair, it is anticipated that all the available space will be taken up at an early date, and consequently no guarantee can be given that space will be available in respect of applications received later than July 31, 1930."

By the addition of two floors of the Empire Hall, Olympia, which were not available last February, the exhibiting area of the buildings is increased by 50,000 sq. ft. to a total of 300,000 sq. ft.

Following a recommendation by the exhibitors' advisory committee, it is announced in the official regulations that the Fair in London will open and close half an hour earlier than in previous years. That is to say, the hours will be 9.30 a.m. to 7.30 p.m., and the public, instead of being admitted from 4 p.m. to 8 p.m., will be admitted only from 4.30 p.m. to 7.30 p.m. and from 1 p.m. to 7.30 p.m. on Saturday, February 21.

SCHOOL FOR DAUGHTERS OF NAVAL OFFICERS

Speaking yesterday at the meeting of the Royal School for Naval and Marine Officers' Daughters, ADMIRAL of the FLEET SIR OSMOND BROCK said that at no period in the history of the British Navy had there been so many officers with children in need of education. Even after the Napoleonic wars, when naval officers were discharged in thousands, the need was not so great. Officers between 30 and 40 years of age were being sent ashore through no fault of their own and compelled to take up employment in civil life, which was very difficult to find. In addition, naval officers were now marrying much younger; it was an exception to find an officer unmarried after the age of 30. That might be a good thing for the country, added Admiral Brock, but it meant there were officers with families they could only with difficulty support. He hoped it might be possible to admit to the school a larger number of pupils at reduced fees. ADMIRAL SIR WILLIAM GOODENOUGH, chairman of the committee, in an appeal for more support from the younger officers and their wives, said the school was the only school for the daughters of naval officers.

The new blue air mail boxes in London came into use for the first time yesterday. Each box shows details of the air services.

ALDERSHOT SHOW REHEARSAL

TRICK RIDING BY HUSSARS

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT)

ALDERSHOT, JUNE 23

The Aldershot Tattoo ground this morning had already lost its tattoo aspect when the cavalrymen and the bands, which are to provide entertainment at the Aldershot Show next week, paraded for their first rehearsal in the arena. In spite of an increase of nearly 2,000 motor vehicles at Saturday's performance, the last car park was cleared at 2.5 a.m. yesterday—cleared that is of all who were willing to leave. Several parties, after a meal on the grass beside their cars and coaches, decided to "make a night of it" and delayed their departure until day broke.

As they left the work of dismantling began and was carried on all through yesterday. When the rehearsal took place to-day Tilbury Fort, the Elizabethan houses, the Armada ships, and much of the car park fencing had disappeared, and the poles of the huge marquees which are to house the Empire Exhibition next week were already in position and the hurdles for the hound pens were on the ground.

Rehearsals of the horse show, the hound show, and the Empire exhibition were, of course, unnecessary, even if they had been possible; but the entertainment features—trick riding by detachments from two cavalry regiments, evolutions by the drums of the 1st (Guards) Brigade, and an instrumental concert by massed regimental bands—were all presented for the approval of the Show Committee. The 1st Brigade contains the 2nd Grenadier Guards, 2nd Coldstream Guards, 1st Green Howards, and 2nd Cheshire Regiment, and, because the drums all parade in review order, the two line battalions introduce as head-dress the old spiked helmet, which has not been seen at Aldershot since 1914.

The 8th King's Royal Irish Hussars and the 14th/20th Hussars furnish the trick-riders for displays which at the rehearsal were more hazardous than usual, because of sun-baked turf, which the Tattoo performances had left too slippery for taking-off with any degree of safety. The horses of the 14th/20th, with calkins, went through without misplacing a foot; but the 8th Hussars, riding with plain shoes, came near to disaster more than once. The former, in their team of 12, include three officers, and their display is on the lines made familiar to Royal Tournament visitors by the Equitation School from Weedon. As, however, the Aldershot arena gives much more space than Olympia can afford, the Hussars can perform feats impossible to the Weedon riders. One of their best is a ride over a ramp, a bank and a bush fence, with a drop of between 3ft. and 4ft. on the landing side. The most daring is a jump through a frame, the rails and stiles of which are human.

These extraneous features should enhance the attraction of a show which without them might be considered sufficiently attractive. The Horse Show and the Hound Show have proved attractive to exhibitors, for the entries for the former have risen to 790 from 661 last year and the hound exhibits have gone up from 115 to 137. The Show will run from Wednesday, July 2, until Saturday, July 5.

FINANCIAL BURDENS OF CLERGY

OLDER CURATES' NEEDS

The annual meeting of the Curates' Augmentation Fund, which exists for increasing the stipends of the older curates of the Church of England, was held yesterday at the Church House, Westminster.

The BISHOP of STEPNEY, who presided, said he had had a unique opportunity of seeing the difficulties of the clergy. He had been greatly impressed by the patience with which those difficulties were being borne, and he had determined to use every opportunity he could to fight the battle of his brethren. Much had been done by the London Diocesan Fund to raise the stipends of incumbents, but it had been unable to lift the burden from where it pressed heaviest—the middle-aged assistant clergy. That was a very serious omission, and illustrated the need for the work which the Curates' Augmentation Fund had been doing for 64 years, a work which was needed now as much as ever. He wished to pay a very sincere tribute to the quality of the devotion shown by the assistant clergy, the men who found themselves after many years' faithful work in a subordinate position, and disappointed at being unable to realize their natural ambition of having a little kingdom of service of their own. He had had opportunities of observing the patience shown by these men, and, though he had heard many expressions of disappointment, he could not remember once coming across a man who was embittered by his disappointment. The poverty of the clergy was due, if not to the meanness, to the ignorance, of the laity, an ignorance which was not free from blame.

The REV. J. F. MARR, hon. treasurer, reported a deficit of £784 on the year's working of the fund. They had distributed £723 more than in the previous year. In addition to the usual grant, they had paid the pension premiums for their beneficiaries for the year. The council were faced with the possibility of having to reduce this additional grant in the coming year.

SIR WALTER BADOCK, in moving a resolution commending the fund to the liberal support of all Churchpeople, emphasized the fact that the increase of the salaries of assistant curates did not come within the province of diocesan funds or of the Central Board of Finance.

The resolution was unanimously carried.

CREWS OF MERCHANTMEN ON LEAVE

REDUCED FARES GRANTED ON RAILWAYS

It is announced that the railway companies have conceded cheap fare facilities to officers and crews of vessels of the British Mercantile Marine travelling on leave from their ships. These privileges existed during the War, but were withdrawn in 1920.

As the result of negotiations carried out by the Marine Engineers' Association, the Imperial Merchant Service Guild and Mercantile Marine Service Association, the railway companies have agreed to issue tickets at the ordinary single fare and one-third for the double journey (fractions of 3d. reckoned as 3d.)—minimum fares first-class 4s., third-class 2s. 6d.—to officers and men or female members of the Mercantile Marine travelling on leave from ports in England, Scotland, and Wales. Vouchers signed by a responsible official of one of the above associations or the captain or chief officer of a vessel, must be surrendered at the booking offices. These cheap tickets will be available for 30 days, including the day of issue. The facility will come into force from July 1.

TWO MEN DROWNED AT LAND'S END

ATTEMPT AT RESCUE WITH LIFEBOAT

The Sennen (Cornwall) lifeboat was launched yesterday in an unsuccessful attempt to reach two young men who were swept out to sea and drowned. One of them, who was bathing, has been identified as F. H. Bulmer, son of Captain J. R. Bulmer, marine-commander, Holyhead, R.M.S. The second, about 25 years of age, was apparently a friend of Bulmer and had gone to the rescue, for he had taken off his coat, which was picked up by a lifeboatman. There are no marks of identification on the coat. The men had seemingly climbed down the cliff at a spot where the water, because of the many currents, is regarded as dangerous.

PROPERTY LOST AT THE TATTOO

When seven men were charged at Aldershot yesterday with idling on War Department land on Friday and Saturday, Police Superintendent Jacobs said the men visited the Tattoo grounds and car park to find articles left by visitors. Hundreds of people had left things behind, and at the police station there were two carloads of lost property. Five men were fined 5s. each, one man 15s., and one was discharged.

FRANCIS LORANG'S ARRIVAL IN LONDON

Francis Lorang, who has been extradited from France, arrived at Victoria Station yesterday. He was accompanied by Chief Inspector Giles and Detective-Sergeant Jerning, of the City Police, and was taken in a taxi-cab to Moor-lane police station, where he will be charged, and to-day he will appear at Justice Room, Guildhall.

WILD DUCKS IN LINCOLN'S INN

STORY OF A STRANGE NESTING PLACE

(FROM A CORRESPONDENT)

New-square, Lincoln's Inn, in spite of its name a haunt of the law for over three centuries, has recently enjoyed an experience without precedent in its history. Its buildings enclose one of London's most beautiful gardens, in the middle of which is a small artificial pond. This was the spot recently chosen by a pair of wild ducks as their breeding-ground. At tulip time, when the garden was looking its best, it appeared so attractive to a drake and duck mallard that, after circling above the spot inquiringly, they dropped on the pond for a closer inspection. After sampling these quarters for an hour or two, they flew away. This was on April 29. On the following morning they returned, and it was soon evident that they had come to stay. The drake was a fine specimen of the mallard in mating plumage, with a handsome green head, his mate a soberly dressed brown lady, appreciably smaller in size.

The devotion of this couple, or at least of the drake to the duck, was unconcealed and remarkable. They were never to be seen separated on the tiny pond, but always swam side by side, not 2ft. apart, or basked side by side on the bank. If the lady got out to shake herself flutteringly, clean herself with her beak, and then sleep in the sun, the drake followed suit in every particular. Being much the heavier bird he was more clumsy in surmounting the stone rim which edges the water. He did this by charging it, swimming fast and bumping his breast up far enough to give his scrambling feet a chance. If he were lazy, he fell back and had to repeat the collision more vigorously. Early each morning he would fly off in a northerly direction, but he would invariably be back within two or three hours.

In the meanwhile human provision was made to assist, or entice, the birds to nest. A rectangular hamper was turned on its side at the edge of the pond, its open front jutting out over the water. Straw was heaped in it, and duck food placed daily on a board that led into it. The first egg was laid on May 3, on an open patch of lawn at the edge of the pond. The ducks took little interest in the event, but on one occasion they were to be seen sitting on the grass, asleep in the sun, beak under wing, with the egg between them. On May 6 a second egg was laid elsewhere on the grass. The two eggs were then moved by hand to the straw in the basket. On the following morning, from an upper window in New-square, the duck was observed scrambling in a business-like way in the straw, making herself a nest. This she completed by lining it with feathers from her breast in the best professional manner. Henceforth all eggs were laid in the nest.

THE SITTING

A third egg was laid on May 11, a fourth on May 14, a fifth on the 17th, a sixth on the 19th, and a seventh on the 21st. On May 24 the duck became broody and began to sit. Thenceforward she never left the nest except to feed. The drake took now to leaving her for four or five hours each day. These intervals of absence increased; but on Sunday, June 8, at 1.45 p.m., he was seen to return, push his mate off the nest, and sit on the eggs while the duck was feeding in the pond. This was his last act of matrimonial fidelity. He has not been seen since June 9.

On Saturday, June 21, at about 8.30 a.m., three ducklings were hatched, all of a dark colour (black with yellow markings), and were very soon afterwards taken out for a swim by their mother. On examination the remaining four eggs were found to be unfertile.

For fear of depredation by cats, a fence of string netting has been staked in a semi-circle behind the basket, the sanctuary thus provided enclosing a strip of lawn. The ducklings are still so light that they can walk on the water-lily leaves in the pond without quite sinking them.

A photograph will be found on page 18.

PRAISE FOR WHITEHALL

By CALLISTHENES

Recently in this column we referred to the slowness with which Government Offices answer letters. We said that sometimes days would pass before a formal acknowledgment was received and sometimes weeks be fore a real reply was received. We ventured to refer to our own practice of answering letters the same day on which they are received and said that any system which made it necessary for a week to pass before despatching an answer to a letter needed drastic overhauling.

Since then we have had an experience with Whitehall which shows that a Government Office can be as prompt as any Business House and we take pleasure in acknowledging it.

A customer and correspondent in France made an inquiry of us about a passport. We took up the matter with the Home Office.

We have already in this column criticized and expressed emphatically our dislike for the unnecessary passport system and we would not have been surprised to find in a survival of war-time bureaucracy an equally unbusinesslike delay in dealing with correspondence. It was then with surprise and delight that we received a completely adequate and satisfactory reply two days after our letter had been received by the Home Office.

This would be a workmanlike performance in such a matter had the Home Office been able to deal with it without reference to another Government Office. It becomes worthy of further praise when it is added that before the Home Office could reply it had to receive a reply to an inquiry it directed to the Passport Office.

We were so pleased, and so desirous of giving credit where credit is due, that we wrote to the Civil Servant concerned and said we would like to refer to the matter in this column. He said in his reply that he had "never heard of anyone asking permission before publishing an unfavourable experience" and that he could see no reason why it should be necessary about a favourable experience.

In this House we endeavour to be at least as ready to give praise as to find fault, whether it be in dealing with members of our own Store or with Government officials, and we publish this favourable experience as readily as we would publish an unfavourable one.

Our Home Office correspondent ended by saying: "I should be sorry to think that this promptness was not characteristic of every Department of the Civil Service so far as circumstances permit." We are afraid we cannot quite agree with him, but if ever we should have occasion to change our opinion we shall not hesitate, any more than in this case, to make it public.

"A LADY TO LOVE"

NEW FILM AT THE EMPIRE

Pertness and, more especially, coyness are not qualities normally to be associated with characters played by Miss Vilma Banky, but Lena (Miss Banky) on her arrival at Tony's home was, regrettably, both pert and coy. She had her excuses, it is true, for the man whom she thought she had accepted, through the post, had shown no signs of taking any of those advantages that belong to the prospective bridegroom, but, much as one sympathized with Lena, it was impossible not to feel that Miss Banky had been mis-cast in this Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer version of Mr. Sidney Howard's play They knew what they wanted. That feeling was never entirely overcome, even though Miss Banky, in those scenes in which pity for Tony, the elderly Italian who had sent her, with his written proposal, the handsome Buck's photograph instead of his own, had changed into a protective and maternal love, is obviously happier in her part; and her voice, which at the beginning had been a little hard, showed it as well as her acting. Tony, a man in whom love had let loose a quite ridiculous passion of devotion and sentimentality, is rather too much for Mr. Edward G. Robinson, who charges—no word implying a quieter movement will do—up and down between pathos and comedy and leaves an impression at the end that he had spoken at the top of his voice throughout the film. That consistently good actor Mr. Robert Ames is admirable as Buck, who, with the power to break up Tony's and Lena's happiness, refrains as much because of indifference as good nature.

THE LYRIC THEATRE, HAMMERSMITH

MARIE RAMBERT DANCERS

Mme. Marie Rambert, having tested the capacity of her dancers in the matinée which she gave at the Lyric, Hammersmith, in the spring, has taken the bolder step of giving a short season of ballet at the same theatre. The programme last night contained a good many of the same dances as were given before: Mr. Frederick Ashton's Botticellian ballet Leda and the Swan, Miss Susan Salaman's mime ballet Our Lady's Juggler, and a set of dances to Warlock's Capriol Suite. The performance was crisper and the programme had been further strengthened by the addition of Les Sylphides with Mme. Thamar Karsavina as première danseuse. Midsummer Eve was an appropriate time on which to rediscover the charm of the perfect romantic ballet, and though the smallness of the stage made the dancers' tasks more difficult, the inspiration of Mme. Karsavina's style animated the younger dancers and gave to the ballet its own decisive character. Mme. Karsavina also appeared in several short character studies and divertissements—La Belle Viennoise; Mademoiselle de Maupin, and a gallop in which she was partnered by Mr. Harold Turner.

A DELIUS MANUSCRIPT FOR THE BODLEIAN

Through the kind offices of the Master of University College, Oxford (Sir Michael Sadler), the Friends of the Bodleian have received from Frederick Delius a double sheet of orchestral manuscript in the composer's own handwriting, being part of a sketch for his latest orchestral work, "A Song of Summer." This work has just been completed and is not yet published. The sketch, accompanied by an autograph letter from the composer, is now on exhibition in the special case devoted to gifts of the Friends of the Bodleian in the Bodleian Picture Gallery; it will be formally handed over to the library at the annual meeting of the Friends on October 21.

Entertainments

THE MUSICIAN'S GRAMOPHONE

MOZART, BERLIOZ, BACH

That the Flonzaley Quartet's performance of Mozart's tragic work in D minor (H.M.V. DB. 1357, 8) is achieved and even masterly goes without saying. But a work like this cannot be squeezed, and will not go on two records. The repeats in the first and last movements are all organic; the power and dignity of the themes and treatment are not developed if the repeats are suppressed. Moreover, the players seem conscious of pressure, and have allowed an appreciable perfunctoriness to creep into their style. The second subject cadences come heartlessly, jauntily almost; while the lovely pastoral andante has only half its tenderness and in phrasing is sometimes almost curt. There are wonderful moments—the development in the first movement, the coda in the last; but even these are not what they would have been had they been duly surrounded and prepared for. The G major Quartet is no longer than the D minor, though it requires another page or two of print. But the Lener Quartet devote four disks to it and need all the space (Columbia LX. 24-27). The repeats are taken; they are less vital than those of the D minor, but they are all enjoyed. A more responsive curve of phrase, a more attentive discrimination of colour and bloom is possible in playing Mozart than the Lener Quartet ever give us; but there is sweetness and contentment in their rendering of this most gracious work, and their practised ensemble makes the swiftness and decision of the fugal finale a delicious thing to listen to.

The Overture is the least interesting part of Schubert's Rosamunde music, but, being Schubert's, it has warmth and melody and resourceful happiness, and Mr. Malcolm Sargent with his unspecified Symphony Orchestra plays it well (H.M.V. C. 1873, 4). The Prelude to La Traviata (Verdi) attempts more, but achieves less, and even with Toscanini and the New York Philharmonic moves us very little (H.M.V. D. 1672). But Berlioz's Rackovsky March is a very different kettle of fish. This is the music of pastime, but brimful of gaiety and energy. Taken a shade slower, it might have had still more flame and splendour, but disk space is limited, and even the Philadelphia Orchestra can make concessions (H.M.V. D. 1807). Yet the brilliance and clarity of the playing take us back to the famous Scheherazade records, the more, no doubt, because another recording of Scheherazade has just been completed, from a performance by the Orchestra of the Conservatoire at Paris, under Philippe Gaubert (Columbia DX. 1-6), a very lame thing in comparison, though the disks are pleasant in tone.

Two great organ works of Bach have also been added to our repertory, the Toccata in F, played by Anton van der Horst in the Central Hall, Westminster (Columbia DX. 36) and the Prelude and Fugue in A minor, played by Dr. Bullock in the Abbey (H.M.V. C. 1876). Neither is clearly audible as recorded; the first in its reedy blare is like a house on fire, in the second the more muffled echoes are still very disturbing. One hears enough to know that the performances were both excellent; but that only increases the disappointment.

VARIETY THEATRES

THE COLISEUM

Noni's varied talents make him an entertainment in himself: with equal dexterity he can clown, parody the jazz musician, conduct a jazz band, and play more or less serious music seriously. And when he has Horace as a foil, or his Jazz Serenaders as a background, his performance becomes almost an epitome of variety. Except when he is playing the concertina, which he does excellently, Horace is little more than a foil to the eccentricities of Noni. The Jazz Serenaders, however, contribute something of their own. Collectively and individually they play a number of the lesser-known jazz tunes, and give a well-staged parody of Marilana; and with the aid of a skilled troupe and two amusing eccentric dancers, they provide an irreverent commentary on some popular songs. Mr. Karl Hermes and his company, which includes a cleverly trained Borzoi, have chosen for their tableaux vivants this week a series of Royal Academy pictures.

THE PALLADIUM

Agility is the chief feature of this week's programme at the Palladium, the kind of agility that begins by eliciting murmurs of pleasure from the audience and ends in gasps of incredulous and delighted distress. Messrs. Johnson and Graham content themselves with the former for their very clever stepdancing. Messrs. Anstell and Arthur, whose muscles are evidently made of the same material as the roller skates of Messrs. Finks and Ayres, run through the whole gamut; but the palm must be awarded to the breathless affair that is given such an incomprehensible name, "The Hazelle and Klatoff Foursome." Originators of sensational character adagio." "Adagio" is certainly a most awe-inspiring occupation, and the lady who takes the chief part in this foursome cannot easily be overpraised.

The other items in the programme count for less than their more famous names suggest. Miss Nellie Wallace opens her turn at the top of her form and then spoils it by attempting burlesque of a sort that others much less gifted can do better. The Texas Cowboy Band fails to justify its position at the top of the bill. Mr. George Clarke appears in the sketch The New Car, which would be funnier if the tempo were quickened and the maid-servant's lines cut. He is supported by a very young lady, Miss Gladys Gilbert, who seems to know all there is to know about the art of acting. Finally Miss Norah Blaney and Miss Gwen Farrar reappear together to every one's satisfaction.

"COMUS" IN EAST KENT

MILTON'S MASQUE TO BE PLAYED FOR CHARITY

Milton's masque of "Comus," with music, processions, and dances, will be played in the gardens of Betteshanger, near Sandwich, Lord Northbourne's seat in Kent, on Friday and Saturday next, June 27 and 28, in aid of the New Building Fund of the Kent and Canterbury Hospital.

The part of Comus will be played by Mr. Ernest Milton, and that of The Lady by Miss Jean Forbes-Robertson. The producer is Miss Esmé Church. The performance, staged in a beautiful garden setting, will begin each day at 5.30 p.m., the price of seats being 10s., 5s., and 2s. 6d., tax included.

PLAYERS' THEATRE

"THE TOWER"

By MARY PARKINGTON

On the top of a medieval tower its founder quarrelled with its builder, and murder was done; this play shows these two antagonists, reincarnated as rival architects, resuming their conflict in a modern setting. It is not easy to make such a tale plausible and significant in the theatre, but Miss Parkington handles her material well. If the play were acted as competently as it is written, it might be good entertainment; but the performance it received at the Players' Theatre last night obscured rather than revealed its dramatic quality. Only Miss Margaret Halstan, as the well-meaning arbitrator between the architects, seemed to be expressing the intentions of the author.

The actors appearing in Badger's Green, Mr. R. C. Sherriff's new play, it was announced last night, have agreed to accept for a time a reduction in salary amounting roughly to 40 per cent.

CARDINAL WOLSEY PAGEANT

SUFFOLK'S TRIBUTE TO ITS GREATEST SON

IPSWICH, JUNE 23

This afternoon the first of nine performances of a tribute by the county of Suffolk to its greatest son, "that great child of honour, Cardinal Wolsey," took place. The pageant, which Ipswich is to present throughout this week, and which the Prince of Wales will witness on Thursday afternoon, is conceived and carried out on a most imposing scale. The souvenir programme (a model of its kind) makes one realize that the whole town seems to have united in the enterprise. The schools, the shops, the Y.M.C.A., the cinemas, the banks, the clergy, the Corporation of Ipswich are all represented in the hundreds of names there given.

Mr. Nugent Monck, whose work in the neighbouring county is now at last getting its due recognition, has provided an ingenious libretto for his pageant. The first part, largely written and wholly invented by himself, shows Ipswich market square on the Festival of Corpus Christi in the late eighties of the fifteenth century. Part of a Mystery Play (taken from the Chester cycle) is performed, and among the crowd who witness it are young Thomas Wolsey and his parents and friends. From their gossip the audience learn of his abilities and ambition and watch him take leave of his fellow townsfolk and set out for the University of Oxford.

The second and third parts of the pageant are made up of the appropriate scenes from Shakespeare and Fletcher's play King Henry VIII., with two interpolated episodes dealing with the founding of Wolsey's college at Ipswich and his funeral at Leicester Abbey. It is a most excellent scenario for its purpose and, as Mr. Monck claims, greatly superior to the turgid "book" of most historical pageants. There are, nevertheless, disadvantages. Henry VIII. is full of famous verse of Jacobean opulence and has three centuries of theatrical history behind it: but it is not an easy play for amateur actors to undertake, and the scenes that on the professional stage are most moving are less effective than the processions and masques and country dances and tableaux which on this occasion so liberally relieve them. "We are too open here to argue this," says a noble, cutting short his companion's conversation; and one is inclined to agree. Mr. Monck is a remarkably clever inventor of pageantry: and the best things in the Ipswich pageant are his and not Shakespeare's.

The production is full of imaginative details, such as the game of chess which Griffith and Patience resume during the dying Queen's vision, the state of the two Cardinals' entrance to the trial at Blackfriars, and the crash of church bells during the concluding merry-making. It has also, of course, its defects, some of them remediable. The players are too apt to anticipate such things as Catherine's decision to refire from the Court, or her command, "Call in more women," or Griffith's directions to the musicians. It is disconcerting, too, to see Tudor courtiers and Ipswich citizens of four centuries ago wearing pince-nez, and recognizing, across the barriers and the intervening generations, their friends and relations in the audience.

But it would be ungrateful to stress these things when the performance as a whole is of such a high standard and so worthily achieves its aim of commemorating the remarkable man whose unmatched abilities and ambition have made his career unique in English history. From the petite bourgeoisie of a small market town Wolsey rose to be Lord Chancellor, Prime Minister (the term is sufficiently accurate), and Papal Legate. In other words, for some years before his fall he held in his hands more absolute power than anyone before or since his day has wielded in these islands. And this week the descendants of his fellow-townsmen in front of a mansion that was being built during the last years of his life are portraying in song and dance and poetry the chief events of his career. Everyone knows Wolsey's palaces of Hampton Court and Whitehall. Here is the best of opportunities to become acquainted with his East Anglian background and Mr. Nugent Monck's genius for pageantry.

SCARBOROUGH CHESS CONGRESS

TOURNAMENTS BEGUN

(FROM OUR CHESS CORRESPONDENT)

SCARBOROUGH, JUNE 23

The twenty-third Annual Congress of the British Chess Federation began in the Grand Hotel here this evening, the players and visitors having been previously welcomed in the Town Hall by the Mayor of Scarborough, Mr. A. Moore. Owing to an unusual number of withdrawals at the last moment on account of illness or other causes, the second-class section had to be entirely rearranged. Dr. Tartakower's illness prevented his coming over for the Masters' Tournament, and his place was taken by Miss Menchik. Mr. J. J. O'Hanlon took her place in the Major Open Tournament. Miss L. Harrison filled the twelfth place in the British Ladies' Championship Tournament.

Play began in all the tournaments after Mr. I. M. Brown, president of the Yorkshire Chess Association, had briefly opened the congress. In the Masters' Tournament five games out of the six were finished, with hardly satisfactory results from the home point of view, but Sir G. A. Thomas fought Maroczy to a draw. Sultan Khan played well against Sergeant.

The pairings and results in the first round of the Masters' Tournament were as follows:—

White	Opening	Black	Result
Miss Menchik	Queen's Pawn	Winter	Adjourned
Maroczy	Four Knights	Thomas	Drawn
Alhues	Queen's Pawn	Grunfeld	Black won
Yates	Alekhine's Defence	Colle	Black won
Rubinstein	Queen's Pawn	Michell	White won
Sultan Khan	Sicilian Defence	Sergeant	White won

Miss Menchik played one of the normal variations of the opening against Winter, the position becoming somewhat complicated until a series of exchanges relieved the pressure. Eventually each had a knight and six pawns for the end game, and the only question is whether Miss Menchik can make any use of a passed pawn in the centre.

Maroczy against Thomas was also one of the normal variations of the opening, Thomas being quite content to gain a little time when he could exchange material, particularly of the heavy kind. The players came to the end game with bishops of the same colour and seven pawns each, and Maroczy could not break through the defence. Ahues played against Grunfeld one of the recognized drawing variations of the opening, and a series of exchanges brought about the draw in 15 moves.

Yates got quite a reasonably good game at first against Colle, and then began to go seriously astray. His attack on the king's side was not well planned, and a counter-attack on the other side enabled Colle to force the win in 29 moves. Rubinstein played very quietly against Michell until he could force one of his favourite pawn positions in the centre. The result of this was to drive the protecting knight away from the king's side, so allowing the entry of Rubinstein's queen, which forced a mating position in 29 moves.

Sultan Khan also won by a king's side attack, but this came only after he had won a pawn on the other side, almost compelling Sergeant to exchange queens. Then a well-planned advance of the king's side pawn made a complete clearance on that side, and the winning combination came through the clever placing of Sultan Khan's two rooks and a knight. Sergeant had to lose a piece, whichever way he played, so resigned in 35 moves.

In the other tournaments the results were:—

British Ladies' Championship.—First Round.—Miss Hooke beat Miss Houlding; Mrs. Holloway beat Miss Hutchison-Stirling; Mrs. Michell beat Miss Eveling; Miss Harrison beat Miss Abrahams. Miss Gilchrist's game against Miss Andrews and Mrs. Wheelwright's against Mrs. Stevenson were both adjourned.

Major Open Tournament.—First Round.—Heath beat Roughton; Watts drew with Drewitt; Mortlock beat O'Hanlon. Fairhurst's game against Seitz, Saunders's against Wenman, and Jackson's against Noteboom were all adjourned.

The Government of the Irish Free State has decided to commemorate the official handing over of the Shannon electricity scheme by Messrs. Siemens-Schuckert, Limited, by the issue of a special two-penny stamp. The stamp will be issued next week, and will bear a picture of the power station at Ardnacrushs.

CARS OF TO-DAY

THE ESSEX

(BY OUR MOTORING CORRESPONDENT)

The American, in the main, builds his cars on a principle different from that of our manufacturers, and the Essex is a good example of the American system.

The engine is just over 2½ litres capacity, being 2,632 c.c., with its six cylinders of 69.85 and 114.3 mm. Its nominal horse power is 18.2, but at 3,300 r.p.m. it is said to give 58. The crankshaft, which has counterweights forged integrally, has three bearings and a vibration damper in front. The split skirt aluminium alloy pistons have four rings each, two for compression and two for oil regulation. The valves are at the side. The cylinder head is easily raised; there is a six-branch water manifold attached to it, and the film and honeycomb radiator is in a shell. The water circulates naturally. The filler is under the bonnet; there is a handy drain tap. The fan belt can be tensioned and the lower water pipe is of good size and bolted to the cylinder block. The radiator shutters and scuttle ventilator are worked by handles from the front seat. There is a thermometer in the seat instrument panel; the temperature is taken from towards the back of the cylinder head. There is dual flow circulating splash lubrication; the plunger pump feeds oil to the front and rear ends of the crankshaft. Breathing is done by a separate pipe, and there is a combined filler and diprod. There is no gauze in the filler, and the filter is a tray in the base. The starter is partly built-in. Timing is by chain, which can be tensioned from outside.

On the offside of the engine are the vertically-driven distributor and make-and-break; beside is the oil pump, and farther aft and joined by a hose coupling is the generator. By disconnecting an oil pipe and removing the air cleaner the generator can just be withdrawn after the coupling has been freed. The coil is in a cool place, held by a bracket to the front of the head. The sparking plugs are easily unscrewed, and although the tappets are probably not easy to adjust without removing the carburettor and mixing chamber, which are held by five nuts, it should be possible to regulate them after removing only the air filter. The ignition has wholly automatic advance. The two-jet carburettor has an acceleration pump. The mixing chamber is exhaust-heated; the amount of gas by-passed can be controlled. The exhaust manifold has six down-swept branches. The pipe is attached to the old-fashioned place. The inlet is all part of the cylinder casting. The main supply of petrol is at the back in a 9½ gallon tank, on the dash is an autovac, and a glass bowl filter is attached to the bottom of the tank. Should the glass get broken or be removed a needle valve drops down and prevents the tank emptying itself undesirably.

The steering box contains worm and sector with a 15 to 1 ratio, and is mounted on the top channel of the frame. The column can be adjusted. The clutch, a single aluminium alloy disk with cork inserts, works in oil. The gear-box is of the usual three-speed pattern controlled by a central flexible lever. There is no stop for reverse. Engine, clutch, and gear-box are bolted up together and held at four points by two bridge pieces. The clutch and brake pedals are free of the frame; the assembly is rubber cushioned. The propeller shaft is open (torque being taken by the springs), and has metal universal joints, and sliding can take place. The back axle is half-floating, and has spiral bevel drive, four differential pinions and roller bearings. There is the usual level plug. The floorboards in the front compartment are of metal and are held down by many screws.

The suspension is half-elliptical and with the least camber. The rear springs are a good deal splayed and outside the frame the whole way; they are also under the axle. Forward the springs are held out of centre. Both sets work with double acting hydraulic shock absorbers. There are no stops to the back shackles of the front springs, but the shackle movement is small. The chassis has only four brakes, which are worked by rods by hand or foot. They are Bendix two-shoe, self energizing, internally expanding brakes, and the chief parts are cadmium plated to prevent rust. Some adjustment can be made on the primary rod from the pedal, but the main regulation for each is through a hole in the lower part of the shield. This is clearly not as convenient for back brakes as it is forwards. I should prefer a straight primary rod. The cross-shaft is partly floating as it is neatly carried where it passes through the frame at either side between three vertically-set steel rollers. The hand-brake lever is on the offside. It might have a better catch. The rear petrol tank has a filler to the offside, but no gauze in the mouth. There is a combined petrol and oil gauge in the instrument panel which shows the amount of petrol when the ordinary electric switch for the engine is "on," while, by pressing a small button adjoining, the quantity of oil is indicated.

The model for test was a four-door four-window full five-seated saloon. The body gives good seating space and while neither ground nor head clearance are sacrificed, sits low on the chassis and so adds to stability. This has been obtained by a special bridge-double drop centre frame. The seat backs are soft and give good support: the front seats are adjustable and have hinged backs. The inside of the body is plainly but pleasingly finished. There is a locker behind the back squab, otherwise the only pocket or cupboard is on the driver's door. Entrance by all four doorways is quite good and the driver can get to his seat from either side, though one's coat may touch the wing on getting in by the back doorways. The four window glasses wind practically right down. The one-piece screen has a neat and easily worked handle, but the glass extends outward only enough for ventilation. The two scuttle ventilators can be drained of any water when they are shut. As they open up forwards they cannot well be used in wet weather. The spare rim and 29 by 5in. tire are kept at the back.

The car runs quietly on top and soon reaches 50 miles an hour on the level. The engine makes itself heard rather more at higher revolution on the lower gears and the car would be improved with a fourth speed. At the same time, the engine is not unduly noisy, and has a rapid pick-up with good balance for its class, and plenty of courage. It kept cool. The clutch worked well, but was a shade eager when taking up the load on first, and the change speed was normal. The steering was light yet firm and the lock is good, the turning circle being given at 40ft. 9in. The brakes were responsive and therefore want sympathy in application, but they were even and amply powerful both ways. The suspension was unusually good. About 20, 32 and 60 miles an hour are the highest comfortable speeds on first, second and top. The roads were dry, there was a moderately strong adverse wind on the way out, and two persons were in the saloon. On the stretch 57 miles an hour was attained, the rates on the new Dashwood Hill were 30 and 49, and with a standing start on top on the old Hill the car soon got to 20 miles an hour, which rate was steadily maintained the whole way up.

Wheelbase, track, front and rear, and ground clearance are 11ft. 3in., nearly 5ft. 6in. and 5ft. 7in., and 9in. The forward gear ratios are 5.4, 10.98, and 18.16 to 1. Eight models in all are made. The chassis costs £195 and this saloon £299.

"Cars of To-day"—the seventh annual edition—containing 94 complete reviews, and a new and enlarged 24 edition of "The Art of Driving" are published by The Times Publishing Company, Printing House-square, E.C.4, at 2s. and 1s. 3d. respectively, or can be had from booksellers, newsagents or bookstalls.

PLAYING FIELDS FOR HAMPSTEAD GARDEN SUBURB

The Lyttelton Playing Fields—25 acres of public open space in the Hampstead Garden Suburb—are to be saved, according to a statement made by COUNCILLOR A. T. PIKE, chairman of the Town Planning Open Spaces Committee, at a meeting of the Finchley Urban District Council last night. The preservation of the fields as a public open space was one of the principal questions considered at the public inquiry held by the Ministry of Health into Finchley's town-planning scheme, and Mr. Pike announced that the Ministry proposes to retain the projected reservation on the assumption that the Finchley Council and the owners will negotiate terms. It is contended by the council that development on the suburb provides for a future population of over 15,000, and that unless these playing fields are secured there will be no open spaces for recreation.

A VISION OF ENERGY

SIR A. EDDINGTON'S ADDRESS

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT)

BERLIN, JUNE 23

The general address at the World Power Conference to-day was delivered by Professor Sir Arthur Eddington. It was entitled "Sub-atomic Energy." Sir Horace Rumbold, the British Ambassador, presided, in accordance with the custom followed throughout the Conference, as the diplomatic representative of the lecturer's country.

Sir A. Eddington said he was about to occupy one of their hours of leisure from technical discussions on the discovery, economical supply, and utilization of power by a tantalizing vision of resources so illimitable that the idea of economy in fuel need not be thought of. The source was sub-atomic energy. Einstein had shown how to calculate it. There was enough energy, he said, in a drop of water to furnish 200 h.p. for a year; if the day ever arrived when this could be used, barges, trucks, and cranes would disappear and the year's supply of fuel for a great generating station—namely, 30 grammes of water—could be carried in a tea-cup.

To the astronomer, he said, each one of the thousand million stars visible through telescopes was a celestial furnace apparently defying the law which limited terrestrial undertakings—namely, that if a furnace were not continually replenished it would die out. Geological, physical, and biological evidence assured us that the sun had warmed the earth for at least a thousand million years, but the calculation originally made by Helmholtz and Kelvin remained incontrovertible, that the sun's heat could not have been maintained for more than twenty million years unless it was being fed from some secret source of energy of a kind hitherto unknown.

Before assuming that stars must be using sub-atomic energy, it was necessary to discuss the possibility that the sun was being kept warm from an outside source by meteors of some kind of radiation falling on it. But such sources provided only for keeping the surface hot and did not provide for renewing the intense temperature in the deep interior. The temperature of the sun's surface was about 6,000 degrees (Celsius), that of its interior about 40,000,000 degrees—an impossible heat to maintain were the source external.

All ordinary kinds of energy would be used up in twenty millions of years or so, and no one could possibly believe that the sun was as young as that. But if sub-atomic energy were calculated, as Einstein had shown it could be, the possible life of the sun was extended about a millionfold. That did not mean that the sun would last for fifteen billion years and then go out. The liberation of the sub-atomic energy implied an actual disappearance of matter, and as the sun lost mass so its rate of discharging heat would slow down and its life be prolonged.

RELEASE OF ENERGY

Sir Arthur Eddington then discussed the two possibilities at present known of the liberation of sub-atomic energy in the sun and stars. The one was the actual annihilation of matter, the other the transmutation of elements, and he doubted whether there was at present the means of deciding between them. In studying the stars as individuals, he said there was much to attract us to the extreme time-scale allowed by the annihilation of matter, the collapse of electrons and protons into each other. But when systems of stars were considered, all the evidence pointed to much less antiquity. He was sorry to be so vacillating, in the one argument putting the beginning of things as we knew them billions of years ago, and, in another, lopping three or four noughts off the age. The ordinary stars formed one great system towards the limits of which they thinned out in numbers, and around the system there was vacancy. But across this vacancy other island universes could be discerned which were known as the spiral nebulae. These other island systems were moving away from us at very high speeds, and we could scarcely place the event which started them off on this strange dispersal farther back than 10,000 million years ago.

Turning to the possibilities of releasing sub-atomic energy, Sir Arthur Eddington, arguing from the conditions in the interior of the stars, suggested that it would be necessary to heat terrestrial matter up to 40,000,000 degrees (Celsius). If this method were necessary the chance of making it commercially successful was not very great. Such a temperature was perhaps not beyond attainment in laboratories. At the Cavendish laboratory in Cambridge, Dr. Kapitza had produced momentary magnetic fields in which the concentration of energy corresponded to about 1,000,000 degrees (Celsius). If he should be able to raise that to 40,000,000, it was doubtful if sub-atomic energy would come pouring out, but, just to be on the safe side, he would take care not to be too near the laboratory when the experiment was first tried.

Sir A. Eddington concluded his address by an account of that kind of radiation of extreme penetrating power which the experiments of Millikan in America have shown to come into the earth's atmosphere from outside. This radiation, which can pass through thicknesses of metal or water sufficient to shield off ordinary X rays or γ-rays, is, according to some authorities, most in evidence when the Milky Way is overhead. Assuming a stellar origin for these rays, Sir A. Eddington considered what sub-atomic process could be the source of them.

PENETRATING RAYS

Their extreme penetrating power led him to infer that the process must be that of atomic annihilation—the destruction of the hydrogen atom by cancellation of its proton and electron. It would seem that "out in the depths of space, atoms are divesting themselves to the last shreds of their energy of constitution and passing out of existence. . . . In all directions through space are passing the rays proceeding from countless self-slaughtered atoms." This revelation of cosmic activity had come, he said, not by looking through big telescopes, but "because it was noticed that gold-leaf electroscopes were never perfectly free from leak, however carefully they were shielded from all familiar sources of ionization."

"The penetrating radiation," he continued, "which reaches us directly must start, possibly from the cool outer atmospheres of stars, but more probably from the thin gaseous nebulae and the general cosmic gas thinly scattered through interstellar space." Thus, in order to release sub-atomic energy, it would seem that there was no need to heat up matter to 40,000,000 degrees; energy appears to be given off in the diffuse clouds of interstellar matter which has no great heat.

"The possibility, or perhaps the probability, that the matter of the universe is slowly dissolving into radiation raises the question whether there is any counter-process. May not the radiation traversing the world somehow re-collect and form itself anew into protons and electrons? On this point you may guess what you will: I have no light to throw. But do not forget that, although we might provide in this way for the renewing of the matter that has dissolved away, and for the renewing of the stars that have died out, there is an inexorable running down of the universe as the energy is degraded from an organized to a more disorganized form. Sub-atomic energy may extend the life of the universe from millions to billions of years: other possibilities of rejuvenation may extend it from billions to trillions. But unless we can circumvent the second law of thermodynamics—which is as much as to say, unless we can make time run backwards—the universe must ultimately reach a state of uniform changelessness."

The last of the general addresses will be delivered to-morrow by Dr. A. F. Enstrom (Sweden) on "Machine Power as a Factor in Culture." The Conference will end on Wednesday, and for some 10 days afterwards the delegates will be engaged in touring Germany for the inspection of power enterprises. On Friday the visiting groups gave a dinner at which thanks were expressed to the German hosts for their hospitality and organization.

TIENTSIN CUSTOMS DISPUTE

MANCHURIAN MOVE

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT)

SHANGHAI, JUNE 23

The Customs House at Tientsin is reported to be operating under Mr. Lenox Simpson, Yen's nominee, who promises a satisfactory organization within a few days. The regular office staff remain aloof, but a number of Chinese outdoor employees have returned to work. The Consular body has made recommendations to the Diplomatic body in Peking in regard to the relations with the Customs during the present crisis.

Chinwangtao Customs House, which is an adjunct of the Tientsin Customs, having been closed, thus necessitating inconvenient emergency measures for the clearance of shipping, Chang Hsueh-liang, the Governor of Manchuria, has undertaken the protection of the regular staff when the Customs House is reopened. As Mukden troops have been in occupation of the Lan River triangle [an area adjoining the southern part of Manchuria within the Great Wall] for several years, Chang is de facto ruler of this slice of Chihli, and his word in it is law. With the regular staff reinstalled it can be assumed that the revenue will be remitted to the Customs at Shanghai as usual—unless the Mukden War Lord takes a fancy to part of it.

An interesting point in this minor development is whether Chang is coming out on the side of Nanking or is merely using his authority for the practical purpose of facilitating the course of business. Both sides have been badgering him for months to declare himself, but he remains stoutly neutral and his present action does not necessarily imply any departure from that attitude.

Nanking claims that the invaders from the south are hemmed in on the Hunan-Kiangsi border and will soon be exterminated. The Northern troops are stated to have completely failed in their effort to occupy Shantung, while on the Lunghai railway front they are reported as having been thrown back so decisively that Kaifeng is panic stricken. It has always seemed that Nanking had a bit up its sleeve and might be capable of an unexpected military coup on the Lunghai front, but independent information is to the effect that the North is strongly posted and is confident of success. The present optimism of the Nanking Government may be no better founded than on previous occasions.

In a written reply to a question in Parliament, Mr. Henderson says:—According to my latest information, the Customs House at Tientsin, where a person named Simpson has taken charge on behalf of the Shansi authorities, was closed by instructions from the National Government on June 20.

AUSTRALIAN FINANCES

COMMENT ON BANK OF ENGLAND MISSION

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT)

MELBOURNE, JUNE 23

The Melbourne Age, a highly Protectionist organ, in a leading article, refers to the "unexplicable suddenness" of Sir Otto Niemeyer's coming visit to Australia, and expresses warm appreciation of his impending services while not admitting that Australia lacks among its own citizens those who are able to manage national affairs with the highest efficiency. But the newspaper asks:—

What spheres in our affairs does he propose to invade? Does he come purely as an adviser, or partly as a dictator? Possibly members of the Federal Government know; the people of Australia are not permitted to know. It cannot, however, be too emphatically said that if this Bank of England Mission is in the slightest degree an attempt based on the consciousness of its financial strength to direct Australia's economic industrial policy there are disappointments and discouragements ahead of the missionary. It is true that Australians are not unmindful of the truth that this country has heavy commitments oversea. The advantage at present lies with certain financial institutions in Great Britain.

Australia is not in pawn to anyone. Her every obligation will be honoured. The Prime Minister has again and again affirmed the nation's determination and capacity to pay every creditor. It has been made clear that in the measures taken to prohibit and ration imports the Government has the support of the great majority of the people. Inevitably that policy is likely to affect adversely certain British industries. It is possible that those controlling these industries, and the financial interests behind them, believe that because of Australia's temporary financial plight they may hold a pistol at Australia's head, requiring the Government, at the risk of being forced into financial embarrassment, to readjust the tariff and reshape the nation's economic and industrial policy as required.

"CLASS PRINCIPLES" IN SOVIET JUSTICE

SAMARKAND LAW OFFICERS SENTENCED TO DEATH

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT)

RIGA, JUNE 23

A Soviet tribunal has sentenced to death Kasymoff, the former President of the Supreme Court of Uzbekistan; Sharipoff, the former Prosecutor for Uzbekistan; and two other persons, after a trial which began last March in a theatre at Samarkand.

The prisoners were accused of "failing to observe class principles when administering justice and being sometimes swayed by anti-Soviet Nationalist leanings." The Soviet Press describes the trial as the greatest local event in recent times. The theatre was packed with young people, who frequently interrupted the proceedings with applause and other expressions of their keen interest. A specially composed tribunal had been sent from Moscow.

THE WAILING WALL COMMISSION

SITTINGS TO BE PUBLIC

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT)

JERUSALEM, JUNE 23

The Wailing Wall Commission held a private preliminary session in its room in the Government Offices opposite the Damascus Gate, in the presence of representatives of Moslem and Jewish interested parties, besides Government officials, Mr. Davis, the Treasurer, Mr. Norman Bentwich, the Attorney-General, and Mr. Mavrogordato, the Commandant of Police, in order to determine the lines of its procedure.

Judge Lofgren, the President, stated that as it was the Commission's duty not merely to hold an inquiry but to give a judgment finally deciding between two conflicting claims, its procedure must therefore conform with judicial methods. It would accordingly hear fully authorized bodies pleading on behalf of either side, give permission for the cross-examination of witnesses, and admit the Press and the public.

The Moslems claim 14 accredited representatives—namely, six on behalf of the Supreme Moslem Council and the other eight on behalf of Moslems from India, Iraq, Egypt, and Syria, who will soon arrive. The Jewish representation will probably be similarly enlarged. The public sessions will begin on Wednesday morning, when Dr. Eliash is to present the Jewish case.

SAXON ELECTIONS

"FASCIST" SUCCESS

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT)

BERLIN, JUNE 23

The elections to the Saxon Diet have resulted, as was foreseen, in a victory for the National-Socialists. The success of this party of pseudo-Fascists has surpassed its own hopes, as the party has nearly trebled its poll and its seats in the Diet. But it has done so at the expense of the Conservative parties, with which alone it could expect to ally itself, so that it will not find its ambition to control the new Government, and thereby turn Saxony into another Fascist stronghold like Thuringia, easy of attainment.

Broadly speaking, the Socialists and Communists have held their own. The National-Socialists have polled 376,724 votes, compared with 133,958 in last year's State elections, and this will give them 14 seats in the new Diet. They had only five in the old. The moderate bourgeoisie, split up into a dozen groups, has been badly beaten. The German People's Party has suffered most, the number of its seats being reduced from 13 to eight. The Nationalists have lost three seats.

The Saxon election is regarded as of unusual political importance and has been looked upon as a test of political currents throughout the country. It is known that the Chancellor, Herr Brüning, has been counting on the parties becoming more amenable when freed of the demoralizing influence of the Saxon campaign and convinced of the suicidal probabilities of a Reichstag dissolution and a general election at the present juncture. For this reason he has not hurried to settle the little crisis brought about by the Finance Minister's resignation.

The Nationalist losses are looked upon as further proof of the waning prestige of Herr Hugenberg as leader and as the fruit of his dalliance with the National-Socialists in the campaign against the Young Plan. As for the German People's Party, few political observers would deny that it has itself to blame. By toying with the idea of a coalition with the National-Socialists, as in Thuringia, the Saxon branch brought about the Saxon dissolution. In the campaign the party presented a lamentable spectacle by beginning as advocates of the programme of the Reich Finance Minister, Herr Moldenhauer, who is one of themselves, and ending by opposing it and abandoning the Minister himself.

The National-Socialist success need not be taken as a measure of the rapid and irresistible progress of that party. Everything was in their favour. The disillusionment of the bourgeoisie even brought them financial support from the Right industrial wing, and the delays in setting the Reich finances in order had culminated just before the election in the overthrow of Herr Moldenhauer.

POLITICAL ROWDIES IN BERLIN

"WATER CURE" ADOPTED BY POLICE

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT)

BERLIN, JUNE 23

The Berlin Chief of Police has felt compelled, by recent National Socialist disturbances, especially on the public bathing beach at Wannsee, to tighten up the regulations for the enforcement of the uniform prohibition.

In future any member of the party, which aspires to rule Saxony, and, according to Herr Hitler, its leader, will now advance towards the conquest of the Reich, will be liable to a fine of 150 marks (about £7) or 14 days' detention if found wearing the semi-military uniform, or any badge or armlet indicating his membership. Any person carrying a swastika flag in open-air demonstrations will be subject to the same punishment, as also will newspaper sellers who wear National Socialist badges or the uniform cap with which the National Socialists have recently supplied the purveyors of their publications.

The police have acquired a new sort of armoured car designed to damp the ardour of political rowdies. In place of a machine-gun the car carries a water nozzle, fed through a steel pipe from a dome-like armoured tank, with which a stream of water, strong enough to prevent virtually any approach, can be sprayed in any direction for nearly 50 yards. To guard against surprise assaults from close at hand, the car is also equipped with a douche arrangement by which streams of water can be projected all round from small openings in the sides.

GENERAL STRIKE AT SEVILLE

CLASH WITH POLICE

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT)

MADRID, JUNE 23

A general strike was declared at Seville to-day as a protest against alleged police rigour towards strikers in an olive oil factory.

It is reported that the police were obliged to use their weapons and that several hundred persons were injured this afternoon.

THE EAST AFRICAN PROPOSALS

SETTLERS MESSAGE TO THE COLONIAL SECRETARY

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT)

NAIROBI, JUNE 23

The conference of unofficial delegates from Tanganyika and Kenya closed last night after consideration had been given in detail to the British Government's memorandum on native policy. It was said that very few principles had been enunciated which were not already in operation in East Africa; but the strongest objection was taken to the manner in which some of these had been interpreted.

In particular, criticism is levelled against sections of the land policy, suggesting that in future any areas that are alienable must not be reserved for any particular race, as in the case of Kenya Highlands. This was held to endanger the expansion of white settlement in districts peculiarly suited to European occupation. There was also criticism of the taxation and education proposals, which, if literally interpreted, it was believed, would lead to the emergence of the African as a spurious imitation of the European. It was declared that the White Paper says nothing about the formation of African character.

The conference dissented from the view as expressed in the memorandum, that its contents only mean an honest and effective fulfilment of the duties of trusteeship.

The conference agreed in principle to the sending of a joint delegation to the Secretary of State for the Colonies if necessary.

A telegram in the following terms has been sent to the Secretary of State:—

A conference, representative of the Europeans in Tanganyika and Kenya, including members of the Legislatures of both territories, presided over by Lord Delamere, is unanimously of opinion that the statement of conclusions of his Majesty's Government as regards the closer union of East Africa and the memorandum on native policy in East Africa are unacceptable. The attitude of the Imperial Government, as now expressed, involves a breach of previous pledges. The East African Colonists stand on the principle that the white race is the only people which has proved its capacity to govern mixed races. They must challenge the doctrine of the political and economic paramountcy of the natives as interpreted in these documents, and the claim for closer association in the trusteeship, as foreshadowed in the 1927 White Paper.

The white settlers permanently domiciled in East Africa cannot accept the designation, "immigrant community," as applied to themselves, or the right of Indian immigrants to participate on the same basis as Europeans in the government of East Africa, and they regard Indian representation on the local legislatures as being desirable only as a convenient method of enabling the Indian sectional views to be voiced. They also consider it imperative that closer union should be accompanied by an unofficial majority at least in one territory. The principles of a common electoral roll, and a racially mixed Federal Council cannot be accepted. Although closer union, involving constitutional changes, is still desirable, the Conference regrets that the retrogressive spirit of the new proposals has definitely antagonized European opinion.

SITUATION IN INDIA

THE GOVERNMENT'S SURVEY

The Secretary of State for India yesterday circulated the appreciation of the situation by the Government of India for the week ended June 21. (In the course of the report it was stated:—

NORTH-WEST FRONTIER PROVINCE.—The tribal situation is improving, but still gives cause for anxiety. Several arrests have been effected which furnish concrete evidence of the statements made last week regarding propaganda among the tribes. On the Peshawar district border the Utman Khel lashkar has completely dispersed. This is a result of the air action taken, after due warning, on June 16-17, against the lashkar and against certain villages from which the contingents came, and of action by troops who, on June 19, moved out to the neighbourhood of Pallai village, about one mile inside the administrative border. Casualties inflicted on the Utman Khel are estimated at about 20. Our troops had one man slightly wounded.

Hostile Mohmands on the Shabkadr side have not yet dispersed and continue to receive reinforcements in small numbers. Air action has been kept up against them as occasion offered. The Afridi jirgah at Bagh on June 13 was well attended by young hotheads of the tribe, who refused to admit the Maliks and Elders to the jirgah. Communication between Tirah and malcontents in Peshawar is believed to be active, and hostile elements are busy with attempts to arrange a cessation of private feuds in Tirah with a view to combined action against the Government.

ARREST OF LEADERS

INTERNAL SITUATION.—The internal situation is generally better, but agitators are still at work, and meetings have been held at various centres. The deterioration of the situation in the Swabi Tahsil of the Peshawar district necessitated the dispatch of a small column to various villages and the arrest, without incident, of selected leaders of the agitation. The situation is greatly improved in Charsadda.

There have been no serious disturbances during the week, but information has been received of events in several districts which show that the Congress leaders are unable to control local organizations, and that the trend of the movement as a whole is towards violence. Detailed reports have been received regarding a series of disorders which have taken place during the past few weeks in various parts of the Midnapore district. They leave no doubt that these were organized by Congress volunteers, inspired from Calcutta, and that widespread attempts were made, with considerable temporary and local success, to pervert the countryside. The situation in this district has been brought under control, and an adequate force of additional police is being stationed in affected areas at the cost of the inhabitants.

A similar situation, but of less serious character, threatened to develop in part of the Bhagalpore district in Bihar and Orissa. Congress volunteers set up a camp in an area notorious for its spirit of lawlessness. Regular barracks were erected where volunteers drilled and practised lathi play. Early in the month the camp was seized by the police without difficulty, but subsequently large crowds assembled, which consisted, not only of sightseers, but of persons armed with staves who had been collected by volunteers from neighbouring villages. It has been necessary to disperse the crowds on several occasions, but a considerable area is disturbed and reinforcements of police have been sent there.

The campaign for non-payment of taxes does not appear to be making progress, and, except in Gujerat, it has nowhere succeeded in obtaining a firm footing. Picketing of foreign cloth and liquor shops has intensified in some places during the week. In Bombay City European shops have been picketed with the deliberate intention of defying the authorities, and the arrest of picketers has been accompanied by demonstrations necessitating the dispersal of crowds on several occasions.

TERRORIST OUTRAGES

A marked feature of the week has been the increase of activities designed to seduce the troops and police from their loyalty. Attempts of this kind have been carried on for some time on an organized scale, but reports from several provinces show that new methods are being adopted, and that special attention is being devoted to this part of the civil disobedience programme. So far as the police are concerned, the weapon of social boycott is also being used in many places in the hope that this will compel resignations. Neither methods of persuasion nor of compulsion have had effect. In the Punjab the revolutionary party has put into operation a new plan, the object of which appears to have been to terrorize the police by organized outrages on a large scale. The scheme was, briefly, to explode a bomb in a rented house or serai, and to arrange for a second bomb to explode some time later, the interval between the two explosions being so calculated as to cover the arrival of the party of investigating police, who would, in the ordinary course of their duty, proceed to the place on receipt of news of the first explosion. In the early morning of June 19 this plan was put into execution in no less than six towns of the Punjab. Fortunately, it failed in four places, but in the remaining two the police suffered injuries, which were serious in the case of an inspector and constable. Before this there had been six or seven sporadic explosions in the Punjab during the past month or two, and there are indications that terrorist outrages are likely to increase.

Mention has been made in the appreciations of the past few weeks of mobilization of sane and loyal opinion against the civil disobedience movement. This continues to gain strength. The Punjab Government, for instance, report that opposition to the Congress programme is increasing in vigour and effectiveness, and that they have been inundated with resolutions of loyalty and assurance of help from all communities, including Hindu organizations. Similar reports of loyal offers have been received from elsewhere.

NEW MALTESE ORDINANCE

GOVERNOR'S POWER CALLED IN QUESTION

MALTA, JUNE 23

In the case in which the validity of the Electoral Law was being contested, counsel for the plaintiff this morning pleaded that the Governor had acted ultra vires in enacting Ordinance II. of 1930 on Saturday. The junior Treasury Counsel asked for two days' adjournment to enable him to reply on behalf of the Minister of Justice. The Court granted the request. The Ordinance in question lays it down that no Court shall entertain any plea of invalidity in the case of Acts of the Maltese Legislature, of which the Electoral Law is one.

In the case Micallef v. the Minister of Justice and others the plaintiff sought the annulment of the election of a member of the Senate and of a member of the Legislative Assembly of the late Parliament on the ground that they had been returned under an Electoral Law passed while two members of the Senate had continued to sit after having been unseated by the Court of Appeal in Malta pending the confirmation of that decision by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council. By his Ordinance II. of 1930 the Governor of Malta declared that all the Acts of the Legislature of Malta should have full effect until the Legislature might re-enact, repeal, or amend them.

THE CONFESSION OF AUGSBURG

FOURTH CENTENARY FESTIVAL

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT)

MUNICH, JUNE 23

The elaborate programme of festivities, the Reformation Exhibition, pageants, religious congresses, services and processions, civic functions, concerts and dramatic performances, with which Augsburg is celebrating the 400th anniversary of the Confessio Augustana, began over the week-end with the consecration of the Lutheran Church of St. John.

In addition to demonstrating the significance of Augsburg in the Reformation, the festivities will give a comprehensive picture of the town's varied contributions to German culture at the time of the Renaissance, and of its many historical associations. Besides the Reformation Exhibition, containing books, engravings, autographs of Luther, and an interesting exhibit of Bibles, there will also be a Renaissance Exhibition, which should prove one of the most attractive features of the summer programme.

CONSTITUTION OF SPAIN

SENOR ALBA'S AUDIENCE OF THE KING

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT)

PARIS, JUNE 23

Don Santiago Alba, a former Spanish Minister for Foreign Affairs, and leader of the Liberal Left, who has been living in Paris since he left his country, yesterday waited upon the King of Spain at his Majesty's request, and had a long and frank conversation, which, it is believed, may have an important influence upon the political future of Spain.

Señor Alba has issued a statement, giving a brief summary of his conversation with the King, from which it appears that both spoke at once freely and cordially of the major problems confronting their country without any intrusion of personal considerations. Señor Alba states that the King congratulated him on his sober and patriotic behaviour since the end of the Dictatorship, and asked for the fullest expression of his views on the present situation and possible future developments.

Señor Alba replied that the maintenance of General Berenguer's régime seemed to promise the best method of achieving the stability required at the moment, as the General and his advisers had shown their patriotic zeal in the face of great difficulties, but pointed out that no palliatives would accomplish anything unless plans were made for the execution of reforms at once fundamental and sweeping. It was essential, he said, first to review the whole system of voting in order to ensure that elections should be absolutely free. The Cortes, when elected, must proceed to a revision of the Constitution, which should be changed peacefully, but none the less radically, into a democratic and parliamentary Monarchy, such as those of Great Britain or Belgium. The whole success of these measures depended upon the guarantees offered by the Crown for their fulfilment.

He went on to say that his own participation in the work of reconstruction would be entirely dependent on the reaction to his ideas. If all parties in Spain were prepared, by seeking bases of general agreement, to work for the common good, constructive work would become possible. But if they confined themselves to criticism and the mere utterance of formulas nothing would be done, and, for his part, he would have nothing to do with it. In conclusion Señor Alba informed the King that he had recently had letters from the Marqués de Alhucemas and Count Romanones offering him their unconditional support. He had, nevertheless, been awaiting the assurance that general cooperation rather than a reconstitution of old parties under new names was at hand.

The statement, which is assumed to be authoritative, gives no indication of the King's replies to his former Minister, and the full significance of the interview cannot therefore yet be realized.

EUROPE AND THE NEW U.S. TARIFF

ITALIAN AND FRENCH VIEWS

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT)

MILAN, JUNE 22

The Popolo d'Italia, in a note from Rome which it publishes with the special prominence usually given to the anonymous communications of the Duce, states that "one notices in Europe the tendency to transform the economic problem raised by the new United States tariff into a political one. Evidently France would like to head a crusade against the United States in order to resume again the leadership of European politics. Italy will not lend herself to such a manoeuvre."

The note goes on to affirm that it would not be possible to constitute a single front against the United States, and that in any case Italy would refuse to join it. The note continues:—"Italy will defend herself in this way: We will only make purchases in those countries which will buy our agricultural products, our marble, our cars, our ships, our silk, our wool, and cotton manufactures. We will buy in the United States only the amount of goods equivalent to the amount of goods the United States will buy in Italy. We will purchase the rest elsewhere. Our ships will load foreign goods for Italy only if they will be allowed to return to the same ports with Italian goods. These are the precise limits of the new problem."

PARIS, JUNE 22

In a communication to the Press about the new United States tariff, M. Flandin, Minister of Commerce, announces that as soon as the necessary investigations have been made by his Department, the French Government will officially request the United States Tariff Commission to modify the duties on goods which have been unduly affected by the new measure. He points out that if the request be granted, there can be no further objection so far as France is concerned. The consequences of a refusal are only vaguely indicated by the statement that "normal relations between the two States can only be maintained by applying the principle of strict reciprocity." M. Flandin gives the figures of trade between the two countries since 1928 to show that the balance adverse to France is increasing.

KING FEISAL ON HIS WAY TO EUROPE

A LONG VISIT

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT)

BAGHDAD, JUNE 23

Sir Francis Humphrys, the High Commissioner, and the Air Officer Commanding, the Middle East, were among the large assembly which gathered at the aerodrome to-day to bid farewell to the King of Iraq, who, on medical advice, is to spend a few months at European health resorts, and will visit London. An R.A.F. aeroplane is conveying his Majesty and his staff to Amman, where he will stay with his brother, the Emir of Transjordan, to-night before continuing his flight to-morrow to Alexandria.

The Prime Minister, General Nuri Pasha as Said, will soon leave Baghdad for London, according to an official announcement, "for the purpose of conducting negotiations with the Iraq Petroleum Company in order to amend the company's concession in a manner advantageous to the interests of Iraq," and will take advantage of his presence in London to settle outstanding questions between the British and Iraqi Governments, including those concerning the Iraqi railways and the Port of Basrah. He will also get into touch with banks and financial houses in order to discuss the possibility of establishing a National Bank and an Agricultural Bank for Iraq.

Laszlo Szabo, as an accomplice in the murder of his father-in-law and his wife's uncle, was sentenced to penal servitude for life. His wife, convicted of having murdered her father and her uncle, as well as of having persuaded the Madarasz couple to commit the murder of which they have now been convicted, was sentenced to death. The assistant village midwife, Christina Csordas, who furnished the poison for these murders, was sentenced to death.

At the cost of over £800,000 the BELGIAN Government has decided to increase by half after July 1 the pensions of disabled ex-soldiers who served in combatant units during the War and of War widows and orphans.

FRENCH MILITARY CREDITS

TO-DAY'S DECISION

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT)

PARIS, JUNE 23

The Finance Committee of the Chamber, at its meeting to-morrow, will have to accept or reject the Government's scheme of national equipment and M. Blum's motion for an inquiry into the state of the Treasury by the Finance and Army Committees of the Chamber. Although M. Tardieu has now explained the position of the Treasury, the demand for a supplementary credit of nearly £8,000,000 for national defence, which is bound up with the national equipment scheme, has by no means ceased to be a potential danger to the Government. The meeting of the Finance Committee should give some indication of immediate possibilities.

The prospect of trouble for M. Tardieu has been made more serious by the unusual action of M. Renaudel, who has publicly revealed that the original proposal of the Government was for a total sum, additional to normal requirements, of 10 milliards of francs (£80,000,000) to be spread over eight or 10 years, with a first instalment of nearly £8,000,000 this year. M. Renaudel is a member of the Finance Committee, was present when M. Tardieu made his statement last week, and could hardly be misinformed. As this demand comes on top of the extra credits of over £24,000,000 for the fortification of the frontiers—a measure which many hold to be unnecessary—it is not surprising that it should meet with opposition.

The case of the Socialists, who are taking the lead against the Government in this dispute, is that the depletion of war stock some years ago was concealed from Parliament because the Government of the day would not admit the cost of the operations in the Rif and the gravity of events in Syria, and that it should be made impossible for this to happen again. They are afraid that, in spite of efforts to prevent it, a new period of heavy expenditure on armaments, burdensome to the nation and bad for the international repute of France, is about to begin.

The Government and its supporters have so far treated the controversy over the supplementary credits as a manoeuvre designed by the Opposition to delay the passage of the National Equipment Bill. In a speech to ex-soldiers yesterday, M. Tardieu said they had to govern France at a time when the whole world was suffering from an economic crisis which many countries felt more severely than their own. Their enemies were those of all Governments: agricultural crisis, industrial crisis, and commercial crisis. They asked to be left free to fight them. They asked that their opponents should not add to their real and well-known difficulties invented stories of vanished milliards and absurd tales unworthy of serious people. He appealed, amid great applause, for unity, by which, he said, they would defeat their common enemies as they had done before.

He said nothing of such prosaic and controversial matters as military expenditure.

COLONEL LINDBERGH'S SON

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT)

NEW YORK, JUNE 23

A son was born to Colonel and Mrs. Lindbergh yesterday afternoon. The day was the twenty-fourth birthday of Mrs. Lindbergh, who is staying at Englewood, New Jersey, with her father, Mr. Dwight Morrow.

Within five minutes of the announcement, which was made two hours after the birth, the ordinary wireless programmes all over the country were interrupted in order to allow songs of celebration, composed long in advance, to be broadcast. President Hoover, Señor Ortiz Rubio, the President of Mexico, Admiral Byrd, and other distinguished persons telegraphed their congratulations. For two or three weeks hawkers have been doing an extensive business selling congratulatory postcards, addressed to the Lindberghs, costing 10 cents (5d.). These began to pour into Englewood by thousands this morning. Mrs. Lindbergh accompanied her husband on his exhausting record flight across the continent only a few weeks ago.

THE INDIAN REPORT

SECOND VOLUME ISSUED

A FEDERAL SCHEME

FULL PROVINCIAL AUTONOMY

The unanimous recommendations of the Indian Statutory Commission are published to-day in Volume II. of the Commission's Report, a Blue-book of 340 pages (Cmd. 3569, price 3s.). The recommendations and the reasons upon which the Commissioners base their conclusions are set out in detail in the Special Supplement issued with The Times to-day.

In brief, the Commissioners recommend :—

(1) Full autonomy for the provinces, which should have Ministries responsible to the Legislatures for all departments of provincial government, including that of Law and Order. The Governors should retain over-riding powers for certain emergencies.

(2) A "Federal Assembly" in place of the present Central Legislative Assembly, and the retention of the present Council of State.

(3) A Central Government free from any system of divided responsibility and capable of giving support to the provinces in case of need.

(4) The recognition that the defence of India is partly an Imperial problem, and as such must remain in the hands of the Viceroy, as agent for the Imperial Government, while the Indianization of the Army is pressed steadily forward.

(5) The creation of a Consultative Council of Greater India, consisting of, say, 30 members, of whom 10 would be representatives of the States, to "make a beginning in the process which may one day lead to Indian federation."

(6) The maintenance of the Security Services (I.C.S. and Police) as All-India Services recruited by the Secretary of State ; and the centralization of the High Courts.

(7) The separation of Burma from India.

The Commission consisted of Sir John Simon (chairman), Lord Burnham, Lord Strathcona, Mr. E. C. G. Cadogan, M.P., Mr. Vernon Hartshorn, M.P., Colonel Lane Fox, M.P., and Major C. R. Attlee, M.P.

GENERAL PRINCIPLES

In Volume I. of their Report, which was the subject of a Special Supplement issued with The Times on June 10, the Commissioners surveyed the problem before them. In the light of the facts set out in that Volume the Commissioners have reached some "general conclusions in matters of principle," which they explain before they put forward their recommendations.

The general principles laid down are :—

The new constitution should so far as possible "contain within itself provision for its own development."

Any constitutional changes now recommended for British India must have regard to a future development when India, as a whole, not merely British India, will take her place among the constituent States of the Commonwealth of Nations united under the Crown. The States and British India "must stand or fall together." The ultimate development of Indian policy must lie in the direction of a solution embracing all India, but the States cannot be compelled to come into any closer relationship than exists at present. The new constitution should provide an open door whereby, when it seems good to them, the Ruling Princes may enter on just and reasonable terms.

The ultimate constitution must be federal. Only in a federal constitution can units differing so widely in constitution as the provinces of British India and the States be brought together while retaining internal autonomy.

It is a "paramount necessity" that full provision must be made for the maintenance and efficacy of the fundamentals of government. Proposals that would "permit of government being replaced by anarchy" must not be put forward. Invasion through the gateway of the North-West must be guarded against and internal order must be secured ; and there must be safeguards for minorities.

GOVERNORS' PROVINCES

The first set of recommendations apply to the Governors' Provinces. The present boundaries of the provinces do not make them "ideal areas for self-government," and the Commissioners propose that a Boundaries Commission should be set up to examine the cases where readjustment seems called for. In the meantime they take the provinces as they are and recommend the following constitutional reforms :—

There should be provincial autonomy. The "rigid division into reserved and transferred subjects"—that is to say, the system of dyarchy—should disappear. In each province there should be a Cabinet of Ministers jointly responsible to the Legislature for the whole policy of provincial government.

The Governor should, on the administrative side, have statutory power to direct that, for certain purposes, action should be taken otherwise than in accordance with the advice of his Ministers. The chief of these purposes are :—

(1) The preservation of the safety and tranquillity of the province.

(2) The prevention of serious prejudice to any section of the community.

The Governor should also have powers to deal with such emergencies as the following :—

If it were impossible to form or maintain in office any Ministry enjoying the support of the Legislature ;

If there were a widespread refusal to work the normal constitution ;

If a policy which aimed at bringing government to a standstill were generally adopted.

In any such emergency there should rest in the Governor all the powers normally possessed by the Governor and his Cabinet and he should have the right to appoint persons to assist him and to nominate members of the Legislature. He should further have powers to restore rejected demands for grants and to certify legislation. This is no denial of self-government, it is "an ultimate resource if self-government is repudiated." The abolition of dyarchy would mean that police would cease to be a "reserved subject." The objections to this change are frankly stated by the Commissioners, but, the Commissioners say, "we must face the fact that responsible government in the provinces cannot be achieved without the change," and therefore, while preserving the safeguards which common sense dictates, they recommend that the department of Law and Order should not be an exception to the general rule of provincial responsibility.

Other proposals are :—

The normal life of the Provincial Legislatures should be five years. (At present the maximum term is three years.) The Councils should be enlarged ; for the more important provinces 200 to 250 members might be sufficient for the present.

In the absence of any agreement between the Hindus and Moslems on the "very thorny question" of communal representation—the provision whereby a particular religious community is represented in a Legislature solely by members of its own body, with a guarantee of a certain number of seats—the system of separate communal electorates must continue. As long as the Moslems have separate electorates in the provinces it is impossible to deny the Sikhs similar treatment in the Punjab. There should be some reservation of seats for the "depressed classes."

European representation must continue to be secured by separate electorates.

The official bloc in the Legislatures should not be maintained ; it militates against real responsibility being shouldered by the Legislatures.

The Provincial Legislatures should have power, under proper safeguards, and "within a certain range," to modify their own constitution.

The franchise should be broadened. At present only 2·8 per cent. of the population of the areas returning members to the Provincial Councils are registered as voters. Steps should be taken to enfranchise 10 per cent. of the total population.

No recommendation one way or the other is made on the question of Second Chambers for the provinces.

NORTH-WEST FRONTIER

The Commissioners recommend that provision should be made for the constitutional advance of the North-West Frontier Province by setting up "suitable representative institutions." The same measure of responsible government as is proposed for the Governors' Provinces cannot be recommended for this province. What is suggested is :—

A Legislative Council of some 40 persons with powers of legislation, interpellation, and discussion of resolutions and with the power of imposing certain taxes and voting supplies in respect of those services which are maintained out of provincial revenues.

Executive responsibilities to rest, as at present, with the Chief Commissioner.

The Council to consist of an elected and a nominated element in about equal proportions, the nominated element being selected by the Chief Commissioner.

Due provision to be made for the representation of minorities, including Hindus and Sikhs.

Law and Order and Land Revenue to be excluded from the purview of the Council.

Provision to be made for confirming and strengthening the representation of the province in the Central Legislature.

A "FEDERAL ASSEMBLY"

The Commission recommends that a new body to be called the "Federal Assembly" should be constituted to take the place of the present Central Legislative Assembly. The members—who should number between 250 and 280—should not be directly elected by constituencies ; the Provincial Councils would select those whom the provinces would send to the Assembly by the method of proportional representation. This method, the Commissioners say, would make it possible, while securing adequate protection for all important minorities, to get rid of specific provisions for separate communal representation in the Assembly.

The Assembly should have an official element. Members of the Governor-General's Council should be ex officio members and not more than 12 other officials should be nominated members.

The Council of State will continue with its existing functions as a body of elected and nominated members chosen in the same proportions as at present.

The existing legislative and financial powers of the two Chambers of the Central Legislature will remain as at present, but the Federal Assembly will also have the special function of voting certain indirect taxes, collected by a central agency, the net proceeds of which will fall into a Provincial Fund for the purpose of being distributed among the different units represented in the Federal Assembly.

The Central Executive will continue to be the Governor-General in Council, but the Governor-General will henceforward be the authority who will select and appoint his Executive Councillors.

Among the members of the Governor-General's Council should be one whose primary function it would be to "lead" the Federal Assembly. The Commander-in-Chief should no longer be a member of the Governor-General's Council or of the Central Legislature.

The Commission also suggests that the Government information service should be greatly extended and improved.

DEFENCE AND SECURITY

In dealing with the "constitutional problem in relation to the defence of India" the Commissioners say that the "issues involved are too vital" to justify a "precipitate embarcation on a wholesale process of substituting Indian for British personnel in the Indian Army." They press home the following points :—

In the North-West India is exposed to a constant and pressing danger of a magnitude which is quite without parallel in any other part of the Empire.

At least for a very long time to come it will be impossible for the Army entrusted with the task of defending India to dispense with a very considerable British element, including in that term British troops of all arms, a considerable proportion of the regimental officers of the Indian Army, and the British personnel in the higher command.

The Army in India is the only effective barrier between India and the dangers without her gates. Having regard to the Indian and Imperial interests involved, to the dangers to be faced, and to the composition of the force, Parliament cannot wash its hands of all responsibility for this Army.

India and Britain are so related that Indian defence cannot now, or in any future which is within sight, be regarded as a matter of purely Indian concern. The control of the Army must remain in the hands of the agents of the Imperial Government.

OTHER RECOMMENDATIONS

The immediate separation of Burma from India is recommended mainly because of the strength of the Burman demand for separation and because of the difficulty of giving to Burma a satisfactory place in any centralized system designed to advance the realization of responsible government in British India.

In proposing that there should be a Council of Greater India, in which there would be 10 representatives of the India States, the Commissioners explain that this body should be consultative and deliberative and should deal with "matters of common concern." The machinery for joint consultation must precede anything in the nature of executive or legislative action on federal lines.

The financial recommendations follow the general principles of the Report of the Financial Assessor, Mr. (now Sir) W. T. Layton, who makes two general assumptions :—

(1) That it is possible, as well as desirable, to improve the economic and social conditions of India by a substantial increase in nation-building services ; and

(2) That it is possible to raise additional revenues for the purpose, provided that the incidence of further taxation is adjusted to the capacity of taxpayers to pay.

CLOTH BOYCOTT IN BOMBAY

CONGRESS PLANS

NEGOTIATIONS WITH MILLOWNERS

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT)

BOMBAY, JUNE 23

The second volume of the Simon Commission's Report was issued here too late for detailed comment.

The Times of India says that the recommendations of the Commission lift India's political problem from the cockpit of racial strife and place it in an arena where all can labour for India's advancement with the certain knowledge that now at last progress no longer depends on how much the British authorities will concede, but on how much Indians can, without let or hindrance, achieve. What had been hoped for was that the Report would provide not so much elaborate details of prescription as a broad progressive idea, which would appeal to the Indian imagination and satisfy Indians that they possess the freedom and power of self-determination with which to work out their own political destiny. The recommendations do in fact offer that scope and power. The newspaper appeals to Indians to remember that these proposals are no more than recommendations, and urges that they should be most carefully considered.

Over 6in. of rain fell in Bombay yesterday, and the rain continues spasmodically to-day. This has probably had an influence in restricting the Congress Committee's activities, although picketing continues as usual.

FOREIGN CLOTH BOYCOTT

Pandit Motilal Nehru, acting president of the Congress, has changed his plans, and is still here, conferring with millowners and others about the enforcing of the total boycott of foreign cloth. He is reported to have told the millowners that the Congress would actively assist them in selling Indian mill-made cloth on certain conditions. He wants the millowners to guarantee that they will not aim at a profit higher than 5 per cent. The Congress would then allow dealers to stock and sell Indian mill-made cloth. If the millowners refused, however, their product would be boycotted, and shops stocking their goods would be picketed. The products of millowners agreeing to these terms would bear a Congress stamp. It is reported that some millowners have agreed, but that other powerful groups have turned down the proposal. Various merchants having decided on a three days' hartal as a protest against the police action on Saturday, supporters of the Congress toured the city this morning appealing for the hartal, but with only partial success.

A number of boys who are going about in the congenial task of endeavouring to persuade their fellow-students from attending schools and colleges have not met with much success. Addressing a meeting of students to-day Pandit Motilal Nehru declared that their greatest education was to enter the present campaign of civil resistance. "Throw away your books, leave your colleges and schools," he said. "You have to make up your minds now or never. Put your shoulders to the wheel, help your brothers and sisters who are making tremendous sacrifices to win freedom."

Gujarat College, Ahmedabad, on which local extremists are concentrating their attention, has received applications for admission from 500 students who are not disposed to boycott their studies.

COMMENT IN CALCUTTA

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT)

CALCUTTA, JUNE 23

Commenting on the second volume of the Simon Report, the Statesman says :—

"All the forecasts of those who prophesied that the Commissioners were going to produce a reactionary report have been falsified. If these recommendations are carried through India will make a tremendous political advance, and be committed to tasks which will try the sagacity and statesmanship of her sons to the utmost. The two volumes constitute a great State paper and the recommendations display not only statesmanship but a lofty vision of India's future."

While the newspaper thinks that the recommendations will be criticized, both in India and in England, by those who think they go too far and those who think they do not go far enough, it believes that Sir John Simon and his colleagues are entitled to gratitude. They have of set purpose left much work for the Round Table Conference and the subsequent Parliamentary Joint Committee to do. It considers the proposals for provincial autonomy are sweeping, and adds : "We do not see that there is anything left which the most ardent Nationalist could ask as regards the Provinces."

SIMON COMMISSION BURNT IN EFFIGY

KARACHI, JUNE 23

Local satyagrahis celebrated the "Garhwali soldiers' day," here, yesterday. After a procession of youths in Gandhi caps had passed through the city a public meeting was held, at which effigies of members of the Simon Commission and of the Abbotabad Court-martial were publicly burned, along with copies of the Daily Gazette newspaper which vigorously opposes the Congress's revolutionary activities. The satyagraha leaders made speeches against the Simon Report and a dummy copy of the Report was burned before cheering crowds.

AMERICAN MISSIONARY EXPELLED

MADRAS, June 23.—Mr. Raphael Kaiphen, an American missionary at Pasumalai, attached to the Christian College of the American Mission at Madura, has been ordered by the District Magistrate to leave India within a month. BIG DEMAND FOR THE REPORT

WESTMINSTER, MONDAY

At question-time to-day MR. BENN, Secretary of State for India, said there had been a great demand for copies of the Indian Statutory Commission's Report and promised to consider both its translation into foreign languages and its circulation in the United States. Present circumstances, he added, made the suggestion of an amnesty to political prisoners impracticable.

CONSERVATIVE PARTY

MR. CHAMBERLAIN AS CHAIRMAN

TO-DAY'S MEETING

(From Our Parliamentary Correspondent)

At the urgent request of Mr. Baldwin, the Leader of the Conservative Party, Mr. Neville Chamberlain has accepted the position of chairman of the party organization which was recently vacated by Mr. J. C. C. Davidson.

In accepting Mr. Davidson's resignation on May 29 Mr. Baldwin stated that he proposed to review the whole position immediately, and asked him to remain in office until he had reached a decision. Mr. Chamberlain has made it a condition of taking over the chairmanship that he shall be released from the office as soon as he can report that he has carried out such measures of reorganization as he may find to be desirable, and that the work may be expected to proceed smoothly without him.

The following letters, which have passed between Mr. Baldwin and Mr. Chamberlain, were issued last night :—

37, Eaton-square, S.W.1, June 23, 1930

My dear Stanley,—I have given much anxious thought to your pressing request that I should, for a time at least, undertake the chairmanship of the party. In ordinary circumstances I should never have considered the acceptance of a post which is at best a thankless one, involves much additional work, and must inevitably necessitate frequent absence from the House of Commons. But I am anxious, as always, to serve the party wherever my services may be most useful, and, since you think that, by taking over the responsibilities of the chairman, I can best help the cause, I am ready to meet your desires.

I only wish to make one stipulation—namely, that I may be released from the office as soon as I can report to you that I have carried out such measures of reorganization as I may find to be desirable, and that the work can be expected to proceed smoothly without me. If you agree, I would suggest that I should take over immediately after the conference on July 1, in order that I may have time to put things in train before the holidays.

Yours ever, N. CHAMBERLAIN.

MR. BALDWIN'S THANKS

House of Commons, June 23, 1930

My dear Neville,—Your letter of this morning has given me great pleasure.

I am convinced that you can render our party a service at this moment which no one else is capable of giving. I thank you for the self-sacrifice which you are showing in accepting a post so onerous and so thankless.

I agree to your stipulation and it will be for the general convenience if you take over immediately after the forthcoming conference.

Yours ever,

STANLEY BALDWIN.

The conference of the National Union on July 1 to which the letters refer is a special meeting which has been called to consider the revision of rules with the idea of making the annual conference a less unwieldy body. Mr. Chamberlain is this year's president of the National Union, and it had been arranged that the annual conference in the autumn should be held in Birmingham. It is unlikely, however, that there will be time to make the necessary arrangements for the conference after July 1, and in the circumstances it is expected that the annual conference will not be held this year at all, and that instead it will be held in Birmingham in the autumn of 1931. It is understood that Mr. Chamberlain will continue to act as chairman of the Conservative Research Department which was set up at the end of last year.

THE LEADERSHIP

Mr. Chamberlain's first appearance in his new office will be at the meeting of the Conservative members of the House of Commons and prospective candidates which Mr. Baldwin will address at Caxton Hall this morning. A full attendance of members is impossible, as three Bills are under consideration by standing committees this morning—the Consumers' Council Bill, the Housing Bill, and the Scottish Housing Bill—and it is essential that the Conservative Party should be well represented at each of these committees. But every member who can be spared from his Parliamentary duties will be present, as there is a keen desire to hear the Leader of the Party's analysis of the present political situation. There were many conferences on the subject last night, and the general impression seemed to be that three main points will emerge—that the party will decline to accept dictation as to policy from any outside source ; that food taxes will not be included in the programme for the next General Election ; and that there must be an appeal to the nation, either by a referendum or by a second General Election, before any policy involving the taxation of foreign foodstuffs is adopted. It is understood that for the time being, at any rate, the referendum is to be retained as a part of the official policy, and that the resolution which will be submitted to to-day's meeting expressing confidence in Mr. Baldwin's leadership will also urge that the referendum is the most satisfactory way of obtaining the views of the country on a specific issue of this kind. There are many members who might desire to criticize the recent leadership of the party, but they refused to be associated in any way with the behaviour of Lord Beaverbrook and Lord Rothermere. In the circumstances it may be difficult at to-day's meeting to discuss leadership when the thoughts of those present will be concerned mainly with Press dictatorship. There is no doubt that the vote of confidence will be carried by a very large majority, though there was a good deal of grumbling yesterday at the fact that Conservative Peers have not been invited to attend the meeting.

Lord Beaverbrook issued the following message to his supporters last night :—

Now, in the midst of the campaign to save the soul of the Conservative Party from atrophy, I desire to issue one final appeal to my friends and supporters among the members and candidates who are to meet Mr. Baldwin at the Caxton Hall to-morrow. I ask them to make no defence for me. No matter what charges may be brought against me, there is at stake something more important than anyone's opinion of my actions or of my conduct. That is all. I can do no more than wish my friends and supporters the best of luck and that success in their efforts which the justice of their cause assures them.

ATLANTIC FLIGHT ATTEMPT

SOUTHERN CROSS READY TO START

DUBLIN, JUNE 23

Captain Kingsford Smith, having received a favourable weather report, has decided to start his flight from Dublin to America to-morrow morning at dawn. He left Baldonnel aerodrome in the Southern Cross at 6.30 to-day for Portmarnock Strand, where the flight will start. Portmarnock has been chosen because the strand affords more than two miles of runway. The Southern Cross will be filled with petrol this evening and the take-off will be made at about 4 a.m.

U.S. AND NAVAL TREATY

SENATE COMMITTEE'S APPROVAL

THE NEXT STEP

WASHINGTON, JUNE 23

The Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate this morning, by 16 votes to four, approved the London Naval Treaty and instructed Senator Borah, chairman of the Committee, to return it to the Senate with a recommendation that consent be given to its ratification. The dissenting voters were Senator Johnson, of California, Senator Robinson, of Indiana, Senator Moses, of New Hampshire, and Senator Shipstead, of Minnesota.

There will be no majority report of the Committee, but Senators Johnson and Shipstead are preparing a minority statement, the former repeating his assertion that the treaty is "unjust and un-American," and the latter urging that the refusal of the State Department to furnish the Committee with all the documents in the case should move the Senate to withhold its approval. It is worth noting that the number of the dissentients in the Committee has remained fixed, and, in fact, the general understanding is that in the Senate as a whole there will be no more than 15.

The treaty will be sent back to the Senate to-day and will await action when that body is called in special session. If, as is still likely, Congress should adjourn this week, this special session may begin on Monday, June 30, but there is always the possibility that a few days of grace may be given in order that the deliberations may not be interrupted by the national holiday, July 4.

THE EGYPTIAN PARLIAMENT

ENTRY FORCED BY WAFDISTS

CAIRO, JUNE 23

The Cabinet forbade this afternoon's meeting of Parliament, as the President of the Chamber had declined to give an undertaking that there would be no discussion after the reading of the King's decree proroguing Parliament. In spite of this prohibition Senators and Deputies forced their way into the Houses of Parliament.

It is understood that when the Royal Decree was issued on Saturday proroguing Parliament as from that day, the Cabinet did not expect that the members would attempt to sit in spite of it, but, hearing that they intended to meet, Ismail Pasha Sidky, the Prime Minister, wrote a letter to Wissa Bey Wassef, the President of the Chamber. In this he explained that he did not object that the Decree of Prorogation should be read in the Chamber as had been done on June 28, 1928, when Mohamed Pasha Mahmud had effected his coup d'Etat, provided that the President undertook that there would be no discussion after it had been read ; but that if this undertaking were not given the Government would take what steps it might consider necessary to prevent any sitting at all. The President of the Chamber replied that no such promise could be given, and that the Prime Minister had no right to make such a demand about a matter which concerned the President of the Chamber alone.

The result of this was that when the Deputies began to assemble about 6 o'clock this evening they found the end of the road leading to the Houses of Parliament guarded by steel-helmeted policemen, who allowed them to approach the iron gates of Parliament, which were locked, but permitted no one else to do so. When Mustafa Pasha Nahas, the late Prime Minister, and Makram Bey Ebeid arrived in front of the locked gates, they shouted "Long live the Constitution." The Deputies replied, "Down with the despotic Government." Wissa Bey Wassef then arrived, and Nahas Pasha asked him to order the police officer in charge to open the gate. The officer, after much hesitation, agreed that his police should break the lock, as he had no key. Amid intense excitement the lock was broken, whereupon the Deputies rushed through and poured into the Chamber.

When they arrived in the Chamber there was an excited meeting, but nothing more was done than in the Senate, and no discussion followed the reading of the decree proroguing Parliament. The most exciting part of this short meeting was when Nahas Pasha rose at the opening of the proceedings and asked all present to swear that they would be true and sincere to the Constitution and would continue to keep their oath to defend the Constitution with all their power. This was greeted with almost fanatical enthusiasm. After about half an hour the Deputies dispersed.

Dr. Hamed Bey Mahmud, the Egyptian Chargé d'Affaires in London, resigned his post on Saturday on Constitutional grounds. His resignation has been accepted.

THE KING OF SPAIN

ARRIVAL AT VICTORIA STATION LAST NIGHT

The King of Spain arrived at Victoria Station last night on a private visit to London.

He was met by the Prince of Wales, on behalf of the King, by Princess Beatrice, by the Marquess and Marchioness of Carisbrooke, and the Marquisa de Merry del Val, in addition to a number of members of the Spanish colony in London. The Spanish Ambassador met the King at Dover, and travelled up with him.

A dinner will be held at the Spanish Embassy to-night, in honour of the King of Spain, at which the King and Queen will be present.

SUB-ATOMIC ENERGY

SIR ARTHUR EDDINGTON ON ITS POSSIBILITIES

At the World Power Conference in Berlin yesterday Professor Sir Arthur Eddington delivered on behalf of Great Britain a general address to the whole assembly, taking as his subject the possibility of employing sub-atomic energy.

The body of the address was a vivid review of the more recent conceptions in astronomy which led to the conclusion that sub-atomic energy was actually being emitted from stars.

The address is reported on page 13.

REOPENING OF ST. PAUL'S

TO-MORROW'S SERVICE

When the King and Queen attend St. Paul's at noon to-morrow to take part in the service of thanksgiving for the preservation of the Cathedral, they will be accompanied by the Prince of Wales, the Duke of York, Prince George, the Duke of Connaught, Princess Louise, Duchess of Argyll, Princess Beatrice, and Prince Arthur of Connaught. It is expected that the following will also be present :—Lord Carnegie and Lady Maud Carnegie, Princess Helena Victoria, Princess Marie Louise, the Marquess and Marchioness of Carisbrooke, and Colonel and Lady Evelyn Gibbs.

The Bishop of London (who will conduct the service) with the Dean of St. Paul's and the Lord Mayor and Sheriffs and the choir and the Cathedral clergy will receive the King and Queen at the west door. In the procession into the Cathedral their Majesties will be immediately preceded by the Lord Mayor carrying the pearl sword. An address will be given by the Bishop of London.

CHURCH AND EMPIRE

SPECIAL NUMBER TO-MORROW

To commemorate the reopening of St. Paul's Cathedral to-morrow The Times will publish a Special Church and Empire Number, which will also serve as a guide to the seventh Lambeth Conference, which will assemble at Lambeth Palace early in July, and as a brief survey of the work of the Churches oversea within the Empire.

The Archbishop of Canterbury will contribute to the Number a message to all Christian people emphasizing the significance of these two events in the life of the Church of England. The Number will contain a brief historical sketch, by the Bishop of Worcester, of St. Paul's Cathedral, not only as London's great church, but also in its relation to the Empire. There will follow a description of the architectural features of St. Paul's, by Mr. Mervyn Macartney, architect to the Dean and Chapter, illustrated by a drawing of the Cathedral in isometric projection, reviewing Wren's work and surveying the recent work of reparation, showing what was needed and what was done. The Dean of St. Paul's will write on the preaching tradition of the Cathedral, another qualified contributor will write on the musical tradition of St. Paul's; and St. Paul's organ will be briefly described by Dr. Stanley Marchant, the organist.

In another section of the Number the history of the Lambeth Conference from 1867 to 1920 will be given ; together with a historical sketch of Lambeth Palace, portraits and biographical notes of the Metropolitans of the Empire who will attend the Conference, and a survey of the momentous questions which will be discussed next month. Some account will also be given of the work of the Church of England, the Free Churches, the Church of Scotland, and the Roman Catholic Church in the missionary fields of the Empire.

The Dean of Westminster will write on Westminster Abbey, with an account of the work which is carried on systematically, year by year, to maintain the fabric in a state of repair ; and another notable work of church restoration, the repair of the collegiate Church of St. George's, Windsor, which has taken 10 years to complete, will also be briefly described. Other subjects of particular interest to members of the Anglican Communion which will find a place in the Number are the modern idea of a cathedral ; the Church in the towns and in the country ; parish church music ; church organs ; the English tradition of church art ; the care of church fabrics ; and the church bells of England and the ancient English craft of bell-ringing.

The Number, which will be fully illustrated, will be published, gratis, as part of the ordinary issue of The Times to-morrow.

THE KING AND QUEEN

RETURN TO BUCKINGHAM PALACE

The King and Queen, and the Duke of Gloucester, left Windsor Castle for Buckingham Palace by motor-car just after 10 o'clock yesterday morning. They proceeded by the private way to Old Windsor, and thence by Staines to London, and arrived at Buckingham Palace before luncheon.

The Queen paid a visit to the exhibition of English Church Art at Caxton Hall, Westminster, yesterday. Her arrival was unexpected, and when the Royal car drove up the chairman of the exhibition, the Rev. Dr. Jocelyn Perkins, was attending a committee meeting. Her Majesty spent nearly two hours at the exhibition.

THE PRINCE OF WALES

THIRTY-SIXTH BIRTHDAY

The Prince of Wales celebrated his 36th birthday yesterday. He spent the morning at Fort Belvedere, Sunningdale, where he had stayed over the week-end, and in the afternoon motored to York House. In the evening he met the King of Spain at Victoria Station, and afterwards attended the annual dinner of the Dogra Brigade (Indian Army), of which he is Colonel-in-Chief, at the Army and Navy Club.

Hundreds of telegrams reached York House during the day, besides messages from members of the Royal Family and personal friends, and there was a constant stream of callers who signed the visitors' book.

The Prince sent the following reply to a message of greeting from the Lord Mayor :—"Please convey my grateful thanks to my fellow citizens of London for their birthday congratulations, which I much appreciate.—EDWARD P."

The bells of St. George's Chapel, Windsor Castle, and Windsor Parish Church rang out at intervals during the day, and a salute of 21 guns was fired by Court Bombardier Benoit in the Long Walk, Windsor Great Park, at noon. The public buildings were beflagged.

POLITICAL NOTES

THE CONFERENCE ON UNEMPLOYMENT

A WIDE SURVEY

Last night the Prime Minister sent a short letter to Mr. Baldwin regretting the inability of the Leader of the Opposition to take part in the suggested three-party conference on unemployment. This presumably closes the correspondence, and it is expected that the letters will be published without further delay. The Prime Minister stated at question time yesterday that a two-party conference would "very likely" go on, and he has decided to proceed with this attenuated conference if Mr. Lloyd George desires to do so. There has been some confusion about the precise scope of the conference. It was originally proposed that it should be concerned solely with agriculture, but as discussions and conversations proceeded it was realized that any conference on agriculture must be largely concerned with unemployment, and that if one aspect of unemployment were brought under review it would be better to deal with the full problem. The two-party conference will accordingly range over a wide field.

The Conservative Parliamentary Agricultural Committee decided last night to give a general support to the Land Drainage Bill, which comes up for second reading to-day, subject to any necessary amendments when the Committee stage is reached. A resolution was carried unanimously expressing appreciation of the statement on agricultural policy made by Mr. Baldwin on Whit Monday. It was reported that the statement had evoked much satisfaction in many parts of the country. In this connexion there are reports that the Cabinet is seriously considering the possibility of making the use of a fixed proportion of home-grown wheat a condition of all future contracts for flour for the Defence Forces.

A delegation of Red Indians from Canada visited the House of Commons yesterday and occupied seats in the Distinguished Strangers' Gallery. They have come to London to call attention to certain grievances under which they are alleged to suffer regarding the limitation of their territory and the use of certain trust funds by the Canadian Government. They will state their case to a meeting of members, and the Secretary of State for the Dominions will be asked to receive a deputation.

LAWN TENNIS

THE CHAMPIONSHIPS

The competition for the Lawn Tennis Championships was begun on the All-England courts at Wimbledon yesterday. The weather was fine, and there was an unusually large attendance for the first day. The best play of the afternoon was on the Centre Court, and the stands were well filled during the great part of the time.

The first match brought the defeat of the first of the seeded players, E. F. Moon, the champion of Australia, who fell to W. Allison, of the United States. Then came the champion, H. Cochet, and he had no easy victory over the Dutchman, H. Timmer. At one time Timmer was leading by two sets to one, and Cochet had to play his best to win. He showed that he had lost none of his cunning, and his volleying and half-volleying were magnificent. H. W. Austin, the only British seeded player, then made a bad start against the Cambridge captain, E. R. Avory, who won the first set, and had the second in sight when he failed, and Austin ran out an easy winner.

We announce to-day the deaths of SIR ISRAEL GOLLANCZ, the Early and Middle English scholar ; Signor EUGENIO CHIESA, the Italian Republican leader ; LIEUTENANT-COLONEL E. R. ROST, a British Buddhist ; DR. CECIL WEBB-JOHNSON, a well-known heart and diet specialist ; and Mrs. MARY DAVIES, formerly a favourite singer in concert and oratorio.

THE NEW WAY IN INDIA

With the publication of the second part of their Report, the work of the Indian Statutory Commission comes to an end. If their recommendations are followed, there will be an end also to the method of procedure which brought them into existence. The first principle which the Commissioners lay down in their constructive volume—and it dominates all that follows—is that any form of constitution devised to-day must, so far as possible, contain within itself the seeds of its own future growth. They are profoundly convinced that the prospect of periodical investigations has had a disastrous effect on the working of the constitutional changes introduced ten years ago. Some politicians declined from the outset to take any part whatever in reforms which were avowedly temporary ; some used them merely to gain advantage of position ; every rivalry of race and religion was intensified, and the whole course of politics was distorted, by tactical preparation for a date of revision inexorably fixed beforehand and at the best far too soon for any real test of progress. From whatever motive it may proceed there will probably be general agreement on this primary conclusion which SIR JOHN SIMON and his colleagues draw from their experience. In the light of their emphatic opinion no one is likely hereafter to maintain a programme of autonomy by instalments—in the sense of a series of disturbing jerks—as against their own belief in steady progress by natural evolution. It is safe to say that there will never again be a "Simon Commission," and that the delicate plant of self-government will be allowed in future to prove itself by its fruits, and to develop according to its capacity from the various soils of India, without being dug up at regular intervals for a standardized inspection. Here at least is common ground on which British trusteeship and Indian nationalism should be willing to meet.

That, however, is by no means to suggest that the present inquiry was justified only by the fact that the British Government were publicly pledged to it. As matters were left in 1919—with a number of essential questions either ignored altogether in the tumult of enthusiastic settlements which followed the War or deliberately shelved for future consideration—it was clearly necessary, the sooner the better, to give a new direction and a wider outlook to "the progressive realization of responsible government" in India. The Statutory Commissioners do this by grouping their recommendations round four fundamental principles. Their first is to be found in the axiom, already noted, that their scheme must be susceptible of development to the fullest extent by the progress of Indians themselves. Their second is that Indians in this connexion must be taken as meaning the peoples of all India—that is to say, of the States, which occupy one-third of the whole, as well as of British India. Their third follows naturally from the second and holds that so complete a solution of the Indian problem—embracing the States as well as the provinces, and infinite variety in both—is only to be found in that form of constitution which is called federation. Their fourth is that the circumstances of India demand full provision during the transitional period for the maintenance of orderly government against dangers without and within. All these four principles might have been deduced without much difficulty from the plain statement of facts of which the first volume of the Report consisted. They might even have been deduced, for that matter, from the account of the contemporary situation on which the present constitution was based a dozen years ago. MR. MONTAGU'S successors give full value to such hints and phrases—e.g., "the eventual future of India is a sisterhood of States," "a congeries of self-governing Indian provinces . . . with possibly what are now the Native States of India finally embodied in the same whole," and so on—as they are able to find in the proposals which he and LORD CHELMSFORD put forward at that time. They are careful to refrain from criticism of earlier workers in this stubborn field. Their own ideas at bottom are the same ; their "governing purpose" is to carry out the declaration of 1917 ; there is no divergence whatever about the goal staked out by a British Parliament and steadily kept in view by British policy. But it is impossible not to recognize that the Statutory Commission have in truth set a new course towards the goal by translating mere ideas into a definite scheme of federal union—just as it is impossible not to rejoice that these ideas, which many of us have long cherished, should at last have been confirmed by so much expert research and analysis.

From the main belief in federation as the true means of expressing essential unity certain important conclusions follow. There is no longer any reason, for instance, why States and provinces, both categories illustrating every stage of political progress, should all be expected to fit a common mould. COLONEL WEDGWOOD spoke sound sense on that subject in the last Indian debate in the House of Commons. The elasticity of a federal constitution is held with good reason to be one of its chief advantages for the manifold peoples of India. There is every reason on the other hand, in so vast a country, to abandon the farce of direct election to a remote central Parliament at Delhi, and to assign to the provinces far greater importance as the effective centres of administration. The Commission point out that "there is a very definite correspondence between dimensions of area and population and the kind of constitution that can be operated successfully. . . . . If self-government is to be a reality it must be applied to political units of a suitable size." And, since they are determined to give reality to self-government, it follows further that the new importance of the provinces demands the abandonment of dyarchy with its "blurred responsibility." That device disappears under their scheme, and each province becomes, so far as possible, "mistress in her own house." It need hardly be added that dyarchy is condemned a fortiori for the Central Executive, where "unity must be preserved at all costs" and the importance of the VICEROY'S functions will not be diminished. Finally, since the need for a Central Legislature remains, the method of federalism will enable India to meet it—as the United States and most of the British Dominions have met it in the past—by the co-operation of a number of autonomous units, grown to political self-consciousness through responsibility for their own affairs and able to determine for themselves the ultimate form of the common structure. Such, in the briefest summary, is the new way proposed for the "progressive realization of responsible government." It may not appeal to politicians whose vision is obsessed by the Westminster model. But it seems on the face of it more practicable, better calculated in the end to be expeditious, incomparably wider in outlook, and closer akin to that pattern—it should more accurately be called a process—which is associated with the idea of a Dominion.

It has become the fashion during the last week or two to speak of this second volume of the Report as more important than the first. So in a sense it is, but it is largely the importance which comes of curiosity ; for the constructive proposals, though they form a remarkably coherent whole, are admittedly more tentative, and more susceptible to the influence of public opinion, than the hard facts of the situation which were set out as their basis in Volume I. It is still conceivable that these proposals may be profoundly modified hereafter as they pass through the mesh of all the refining and critical procedure—the Conference, the Joint Committee, the Parliamentary debates—which is to be interposed before there is any question of legislation. There is the greater leisure, therefore, in which to consider the extraordinarily detailed and thorough constitutional scheme which is presented to us as the logical outcome of the facts. Such features of it, to name no others, as the case for transferring the responsibility for every sphere of government (including even the department of Law and Order) to the Provincial Ministers ; the reluctant but definite conviction that communal representation must continue ; the machinery suggested for indirect election to a Central Legislature and for the gradual accession of the States to a Council for Greater India ; the separate report on Indian finance, offering larger resources to the provinces, for which the Commission are indebted to SIR WALTER LAYTON ; the special provision for the removal of the great obstacles presented by the problems of defence, for the maintenance of the public services, the centralization of the High Courts, and the separate treatment of Burma and of the North-West Frontier Province—all these are matters of the deepest and most controversial interest, which will require separate attention as time goes on. Their treatment in the Report is certainly not to be dismissed with the parrot-cry that they are "an insult to India," for there is not a word in it from first to last which is not inspired by the most obvious sympathy with the Indian national movement. In the case of a document which is open for every one to read, as SIR JOHN RAMSAY pointed out in these columns the other day, public criticism of it becomes a peculiarly glaring test of the political competence of the critics. Moreover the Report retains to the end the unanimous adherence of seven impartial Commissioners of widely different political antecedents—for such rare individual incursions as MAJOR ATTLEE'S ingenious plan of "primaries" for the protection of minorities and LORD BURNHAM'S useful note on publicity merely emphasize an astounding agreement on fundamental principles—and it retains also that freedom from meaningless generalities which proves that unanimity was not bought by weak concessions. The broad impression which it leaves this morning is that the conclusions do fit the facts with unanswerable logic, and that the result is a scheme of self-government, fitted to the special conditions of the case and unlimited except by safeguards against its own collapse, which marks the most hopeful advance of our generation towards the solution of the problem of India.

A Problem for the Lords

This afternoon the House of Lords will receive back from the House of Commons the Coal Mines Bill, stripped of all the amendments to which the Government's representatives did not agree during the passage of the Bill through the Second Chamber, and an important decision must be taken. The amendments made by the House of Lords were of unequal merit as they were also, of course, of unequal importance. All of them, however, had the same undiscriminating treatment at the hands of the Government and of the House of Commons. It therefore becomes necessary for the House of Lords to choose between insistence on the more important of its amendments, or acquiescence in the reiterated decisions of the Commons, notwithstanding the degree of unwisdom which characterized some of them. First in order of importance is the amendment which would have given to each coalmining district the opportunity to weigh the advantages of a "spread-over" of working time so as to allow of shorter shifts on Saturdays without curtailing the full permitted number of working hours in the week. The miners have raised objections to the "spread-over," which may be well-founded in certain districts, but which certainly do not apply with the same force everywhere ; and, after all, the amendment which the Government have rejected was no more than permissive. It must not be forgotten that, notwithstanding all that the marketing arrangements may accomplish, it may yet be necessary to review the rates of payment for seven-and-a-half hours of work and of output in districts where an eight-hour day is now worked. Every one agrees—there is no controversy about it—that the "spread-over" would allow of more economical working, and would ease the transition to a shorter day in the areas that have to sell a large proportion of their coal in competition with the rest of the world.

The Miners' Federation has decided to accept the risk of a reduction of wages in those areas rather than agree to their having the option, as an alternative, of a "spread-over" of hours. The Government support the miners both here and at Geneva, where the SECRETARY for MINES is at present giving his assistance to the effort to exclude the principle of the "spread-over" from the Convention on hours of work. If the interests of the miners alone had been at stake, the House of Lords could have been well content to accept the decision of the Miners' Federation ; but the interests of a large section of the industry are also deeply involved. The Lords, however, have warned all directly concerned, and the nation at large, of a real danger, and have indicated a way of reducing, if not of entirely removing, it. Warning and advice have been alike unheeded. Responsibility for the consequences therefore cannot rest upon the Lords. They have fulfilled a necessary public duty. The occasion does not require them to go farther.

Britain in Pictures

An exhibition to be held to-morrow (Wednesday) at the Savoy Hotel from 12 to 6 may be commended both to the traveller and to the stay-at-home. For there they will see a selection, enough to be typical and yet not enough to be a surfeit, from the large-scale photographs of the British Isles which the Travel Association of Great Britain and Ireland are sending abroad for display in the Dominions, in the capitals of Europe, and in the United States of America. These pictures of cathedrals, castles and abbeys, of London and Oxford and Cambridge, of our sport and games, and, above all, of the quiet beauty of the ordinary country scene, with its old inns and its old mills, must give a perception, as enlarged as the photographs, of our national inheritance, not only to foreigners but also to many Britons oversea and, we would add, to many at home whose knowledge of the British Isles reveals regrettable gaps. The pictures come from many sources, including railway companies and film companies, with a fair proportion from the photographic studios of The Times, and they will surely remove whatever lingering delusions about our country may still be entertained abroad. The legend of perpetual rain and fog is no doubt fairly dissipated by this time, but here is proof that the English scene is not wholly bungaloid ; and how can the intelligent foreigner help reflecting that a people capable of such architectural majesty and dwelling amid such scenes of natural beauty must have more than one sauce ?

Midway

To how many people did it occur last Saturday morning, with a mild shock of surprise, that the longest day of yet another year had dawned ? Midsummer has a way of coming with an effect of unexpectedness in our English climate, especially after a belated spring. It seems almost incredible that the year which only began to move visibly so short a time ago should already have run half its solar course. The qualifying adjective is needed, for no one is ready to admit that in other ways the year from which so much was expected is half-spent. There is still so much that we must have from it. The excitements and delights of Wimbledon, Henley, Goodwood, Cowes, Test Matches, and summer and autumn holidays are due to us before the shades of the winter prison house begin once more to close about us. For all these purposes we have only just begun to rally from our last spell of hibernation. Then perish the thought that a year which is still so deeply in our debt is past its grand climacteric ! The discrepancy springs from the distinction between bare duration and the quality of duration's content. "Better fifty years of Europe than a cycle of Cathay." Whatever the calendar may tell us, we shall still measure time past, present, and to come by what it holds of interest and enjoyment.

Something of the same sort is true of the individual life. There, too, the measurement of the mortal span is no mere matter of actuarial calculation. No man has the feeling that because he has an expectation of life of seventy years, he is half-done at thirty-five. On the contrary, he is probably only then beginning to escape from the blind impulse of youth, to be fully conscious of all that he intends and hopes to be, and to give definite direction to ambition and aspiration. All the balance of his life is on the farther side of that which arithmetic would tell him is the midmost point. But it is just there that he must be on his guard against pressing too closely the analogy between his own life and the course of the revolving year. Short of a world cataclysm, he is safe in taking it for granted that six months will follow Midsummer Day. He cannot be so sure of his own persistence. The difference calls for a different technique of treatment. In his own life he must always have an eye to the inevitable end, which may indeed be as far away as his life's beginning, but may equally, for all he knows, come to-morrow or to-day. In the attitude towards that unknown factor of duration differences of character come out strong. The great mass of men behave as if they were quite unconscious of it. They eat, drink, and are merry just as if this life stretched before them everlastingly. If their work and service proceed on the same sublime assumption, they are at least in better case than those who are so over-sensitive to the approaching end that they are paralysed for all that lies between, and are, like Merlin lying spellbound in the hollow oak, "lost to life and use and name and fame." That selfish form of soul saving is no more in line with the tenor of the universe than the blindness of the man to whom the thought never comes that this night his soul may be required of him. As usual, the right course is the difficult one of reconciling incompatibles—to be conscious of the end and yet to live intensely in the present. It is, in fact, to see the pressing things of the moment, both small and great, "sub specie aeternitatis," and, so seeing, to find in them not less, but more, of colour and interest and all that makes life worth while.

SCHOOLS WITH COLOURS

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TIMES

Sir,—Your account of the colours of the Eton College O.T.C., "undoubtedly . . . presented . . . in 1860," suggests that it would be interesting to know which school may lay claim to have first carried regimental colours. This honour may perhaps lie with the Lawrence Royal Military School at Sanawar, in the Simla Hills, which received its first colours from the Governor-General (Lord Dalhousie) in 1853. These were carried on all ceremonial occasions till 1922, when they were replaced by new colours presented by H.R.H. the Prince of Wales at Dehra Dun.

Other schools which carry colours include the Royal Military College and the Duke of York's Royal Military School ; but I do not know when the practice dates from in these instances.

EMPIRE FREE TRADE

A CENTRAL OFFICE LEAFLET

"WHERE ARE THE FIVE 'IFS'?"

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TIMES

Sir,—Lord Beaverbrook, in speeches, letters, and articles, has frequently condemned what he calls "the notorious circular No. 3153 with its five 'ifs'" which was issued by the Conservative Central Office, and has put it forward as a justification for the breach of his agreement with Mr. Baldwin.

Seeing that Lord Beaverbrook is now renewing these tactics, is it not time that the public was made aware of the true facts ? The paragraphs of the leaflet to which exception is taken read as follows :—

What Baldwin asks is that you should give him power to go into conference with the Dominions in order to make a bargain which will enable us to sell more manufactured goods to them, and so create more employment and more wages for our workers.

If, in return for those benefits to our workers, the Dominions say to us that they can supply us with food and raw materials that we need, and ask us to help them by putting taxes on foreign foodstuffs and allowing theirs in free—then Baldwin will put that bargain before the electors of the country by means of a Referendum.

Where are the five "ifs" to which Lord Beaverbrook refers ? Moreover, what essential difference is there between the wording of the leaflet and the following quotation from the speech which Mr. Baldwin delivered at the Annual Demonstration of the Primrose League at the Albert Hall on April 5 last :—

If in the negotiations for such treaties or such arrangements the Dominions, in exchange for substantial benefits for our manufacturing industries, require some corresponding benefits for themselves, in the way of such foodstuffs as those with which they can so amply provide us, we are resolved, if that be the outcome of the conference, after the Unionist Government comes into office—we will submit that principle to the people of this country, so that they may see exactly what it means, and vote by poll upon it "Aye" or "No."

That speech was welcomed by Lord Beaverbrook. Why then should the leaflet, which is identical in its substance and meaning, be dished up as a means of screening Lord Beaverbrook against a charge of breach of faith with Mr. Baldwin ?

Yours faithfully,
VIVIAN L. HENDERSON.

BOWLERS OF THE PAST

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TIMES

Sir,—In the very interesting review of "The Game of Cricket" (The Lonsdale Library) in The Times of June 21 one reads these words :—

Certainly Mr. Robertson Glasgow . . . . believes that Alfred Shaw, Lohmann, Lockwood, C. T. B. Turner, perhaps even Spofforth himself, bowling as they bowled in their day, would have a very thin time against Hobbs and Co. . . . These were all off-break bowlers. Another of their kind was J. T. Hearne.

One may, perhaps, be permitted to point out that Lohmann, for instance, was not merely an off-break bowler. Personally I never played against a bowler with a more difficult flight, and he could, and did, bowl a very good ball which turned from leg. He was indeed a great bowler—a master of flight and spin with a thinking brain behind every ball.

Of J. T. Hearne I can speak with long personal experience, having played on the same side with him day after day from 1894 to 1914. He was primarily an off-break bowler, but he also made the ball—even from the Pavilion end at Lord's—run away from the bat, and he did this so often that on a fast, true wicket he always had two slips. If he did not make the ball go with his arm, how can we account for the "c. MacGregor, b. Hearne ; c. Stoddart, b. Hearne ; c. Trott, b. Hearne," that we read of so often in Wisden ? I never played Turner or Shaw, but would to heaven we had a fast bowler like Lockwood, with his inimitable slow ball, in the England XI. to-day.

No one has a greater admiration than I have for Hobbs, Hammond, Woolley, K. S. Duleepsinhji, and other masters of the art of batting ; but the bowlers mentioned by Mr. Robertson Glasgow would at least have no thinner time against the incomparable Hobbs than the bowlers of to-day. It is not necessary to disparage the bowlers of a past generation to extol the batting of the moderns. Perhaps some future writer will one day urge that "Barnes, the best of the lot, would have a thin time, &c., &c." ! My own view, for what it is worth, is that a great batsman or bowler in any one generation would be great in any other. Hannibal knew nothing of machine-guns, tanks, heavy artillery, or the magazine rifle, and Nelson never dreamt of 16-in. guns, mines, torpedoes, submarines, and battle-cruisers steaming 30 knots ; but I take it that Hannibal would be a great general in modern warfare and Nelson a great admiral in a modern sea fight. The really great are always adaptable.

INLAND REVENUE METHODS

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TIMES

Sir,—I have been following with interest the correspondence in your columns regarding the refusal of the Inland Revenue to refund income-tax on moneys recovered through the medium of the Mixed Arbitral Tribunal.

In a case in which I was concerned my clients owned at the outbreak of the War a branch establishment in Germany which was placed under compulsory administration and duly liquidated. As a result of the judgment of the Tribunal my clients received a considerable sum as compensation in respect of the damage they had sustained by the deprivation of their business. Notwithstanding that this sum was compensation in respect of injury inflicted on their property, my clients were assessed for income-tax on this amount, and paid it.

When the case of Simpson v. Executors of A. E. Bonnor Maurice was decided, they applied to the authorities for the matter to be revised in view of the decision. This application was refused, on the ground that the assessment had not been "appealed against within the time limited on the ground now stated." I might add that the time limited for appeal against the assessment had expired before the case referred to was decided by Mr. Justice Rowlatt.

Yours faithfully,
H. LYELL.

ON THE ROAD TO SCOTLAND

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TIMES

Sir,—In the course of a recent motor trip of 1,389 miles to Scotland and back I made the following notes :—

Pedestrians on road, facing vehicular traffic, 174. These were largely tramps and other wise walkers, who know that one does not get run over if one faces the traffic.

Pedestrians on road with backs to vehicular traffic, 318. These were mainly dreamers and the kind who, on hearing a car coming up behind, jump either in front of it or into the hedge.

In cases where a footpath existed, it was often in such bad condition that the road was better going.

Inconsiderate drivers, one only, a man. This surprised me. The standard of driving has certainly improved since a year ago. But motor-cyclists hugging the crown of the road are a constant source of anxiety, and pedal cyclists who look round and wobble half across the road are equally common and detestable.

Horses, 830, mostly concerned with road repairs or with Scottish agriculture.

Dogs not under control, three only, all in Scotland.

I saw no accident, but did kill a cock pheasant with my windscreen.

Your obedient servant,
HUBERT WALTER.

THE SOVIET DICTATOR

STALIN'S POWER IN DISPUTE

A VITAL CONGRESS

(From Our Riga Correspondent)

During the whole period of the Bolshevist régime, since the peace of Brest-Litovsk was signed with Germany in 1918, no such decisive importance has been attached to any gathering in Soviet Russia as to the "Sixteenth Congress of the Communist Party of the U.S.S.R." which is fixed for June 26. The importance of the Congress is two-fold ; both the fate of the "new social-agrarian revolution" which is being forced on the peasantry and the dictatorship of Stalin himself will be discussed.

The Communist Congress is the supreme organ of Government in Soviet Russia. Under the present rules of the party it should assemble once every two years and carry out the functions of a short-term Parliament, debating and sanctioning the past stewardship and future plans of the executive organs of the dictatorship, the Politbureau (Political Bureau), the Orgbureau (Organization Bureau), and the other institutions of the Communist Party. The last Congress met two and a half years ago, and the present one is somewhat overdue. The Tsik (Central Executive Committee of the Soviets, composed of Communist and non-Communist delegates), the Congress of Soviets, and other nominal organs of the Soviet Government which are formally distinct from the party assemblies, are merely ornamental, the real ruling organ being the Party Congress, which is also the supreme tribunal for all State officials. If the Congress expels a member from the Communist Party, this member loses not only all Government posts which he may have occupied but also the ordinary rights of citizenship. The last Congress, by its sentence on Trotsky, Rakovsky, and others, showed that it could mete out this kind of punishment to members even in the highest places.

Even the leaders of the party no longer hide the general anxiety over the agrarian revolution and the retreat which was begun at the end of March. The party is in an unprecedented state of ferment, and the demand for drastic measures against the resurgent opposition groups has again become the order of the day. The Opposition is, as formerly, officially described as of two directions, the right-wing and the left-wing. The right-wing Communists maintain that the policy of militant collectivization on the countryside was a mistake, and consider that the retreat was in some degree a victory for their views ; the left-wing group regard the retreat as the mistake, as a capitulation to the "opportunists" of the party and the kulak elements of the countryside.

THE INVINCIBLE MACHINE

With sharp tension generated by these two forms of opposition, with Stalin become the centre of the general discontent, with such discord in the Politbureau that recently (so it is stated on good authority) members drew revolvers and subjected Stalin to physical violence—it might be expected that the Congress would be a scene of storm and struggle, and that the Dictator might fall. Moreover, the whole country is suffering from a prolonged food crisis in which even factory workers, the aristocrats of the Soviet republics, have for a long time received very meagre rations of bread, milk, meat, and other commodities, and these rations have recently been subjected to further limitations. Nevertheless, assumptions that the Sixteenth Congress will be fatal to Stalin are not likely to be justified.

As in all previous crises of the party, the Congress will probably produce a victory for the machine, for the party organization which concentrates all control is in the hands of the golovka, dominated by Stalin. This golovka, (little head) is at present composed chiefly of Stalin, Kaganovich, Yaroslavsky, and Molotoff. It has the right to appoint candidates to be "elected" as secretaries of local Communist committees, and by means of these secretaries it finds it comparatively easy to compose a congress of "loyal" members who, whatever attitude prevails in the masses of the party, will approve the policy of the golovka, calling it the "general line of the party."

Stalin began organizing the Sixteenth Congress some months ago. Through the Central Control Commission, or supreme disciplinary organ dominated by his staunch friends Yaroslavsky and Orjonikidze, he began a new general "purge" of the party. In the most recent stages of this purge the chief question by which Communists are tested is whether they are loyal to Stalin. Yaroslavsky stated at the beginning of June that 117,000 Communists, or more than 10 per cent. of all fully qualified members, had been found unsatisfactory, and had been excluded from the party.

SIFTING THE DELEGATES

Another stage in preparing the Congress is represented by the local conferences which "elect" the delegates for the Congress. Delegates pass through a whole series of these conferences before qualifying for participation in the Congress, at the peak of the conference-pyramid. In one or the other of these conferences disloyal candidates generally "give themselves away," thus enabling the Stalinist secretaries to bring about their elimination from the final list of delegates. In rising importance the chief conferences or "sieves" through which delegates must pass are called conferences of regions, districts, territories, and republics respectively. The Congress has been postponed more than once because this process of sifting the delegates had not been completed. Judging by the proceedings at the most authoritative of the preliminary conferences at Moscow and Leningrad and the preliminary Congress of the Ukraine, Stalin will have his packed assembly fairly well in hand. The preparatory process has, however, shown that Stalin's enemies are numerous ; some of these may manage to get through to the Congress, in spite of all precautions, and try to make their voices heard.

At the Moscow district conference Yaroslavsky, who is virtually head of the purging commission, although Orjonikidze is nominal president, reluctantly revealed some details of the discord in the party. The most interesting fact was that Trotsky's adherents are actively at work again. According to Yaroslavsky, they expected a peasant rising in March, and were even prepared to lead it against the forces of Stalin. A group of the Trotsky faction also presented a demand for the revision of the whole programme of the party, the re-admission of Trotsky to membership of the Communist Party, and his return to Moscow to take part in the Congress. A striking feature of this opposition movement is that Trotsky is making a bid for popularity among the discontented masses, and, in spite of his extreme left-wing principles, advocates a "cessation of the industrialization steeplechase," the abandonment of the watchword "The five-year plan in four years," and moderation in Third International "Red Days" abroad.

Yaroslavsky pointed out that these are really right-wing slogans, and that the right-wing tendencies are the greatest danger in the party. All the preliminary conferences have insisted upon this danger, but speakers have confined themselves to generalities, avoiding mention of the leaders of this heresy, although their names are an open secret. Rykoff, Kalinin, Bukharin, Tomsky, and recently also Voroshiloff, the Commissar for War, are regarded as the real leaders of the right wing, although they remain outwardly loyal to the official programme as expounded by Stalin. A group of these prominent leaders are said, on good authority, to have presented a memorandum recently to the Central Committee demanding a cessation of "right-wing scares" designed to discredit loyal Old Guard Communists merely because they do not see eye to eye with Stalin on all questions of tactics and policy. The main plank in the programme of this section of the Opposition requires a certain amount of liberty for the peasants in the choice of their system of agriculture. This section is very strong in the party, and the Stalinists ironically refer to it sometimes as "the silent Opposition," because at the preliminary conferences suspected members have shown a reluctance to come forward and speak openly in response to taunts from the Stalinist leaders. They are accused of reserving their fire for "a more favourable occasion."

The preliminary conferences and the official "theses" which have been published show that the agenda for the Congress is being reduced to a small number of "problems," for the solution of which the Stalinist Central Committee wants its plans endorsed. The Congress must first of all record its view that the efforts to exterminate the kulaki and to substitute collective farming for individualist agriculture were right in conception and in strict accordance with the programme of the Party: that these efforts must, therefore, continue. The excesses and "distortions" which prevailed on the countryside are to be put down to the account of local authorities, and Stalin and the Central Committee to be exonerated from all blame for the violent methods which were employed to coerce the peasantry. The Congress must, moreover, pass a resolution that in March and April Stalin and the Central Committee made no change in the official collectivization policy, but took reasonable and timely measures to correct mistakes and to stop the "distortion" of the policy. After Stalin and his associates have received the vote of confidence they demand, the Congress will probably formally condemn a number of unrepentant right-wing heretics, including Uglanoff, who has been given warnings and chances to recant, but has hitherto remained an implacable political and personal enemy of Stalin's.

Stalin has, indeed, prospects of another formal victory over his opponents at this Congress, but his victory will do little towards solving the real problems which encumber the Party and the Government. The adherents of Stalin have already begun to spread the good tidings that "a new comrade" has enrolled himself on their side, that "Comrade Harvest" has given their policy a definite promise of strong concrete support. These tidings appear to be based more on hope than on fact, for Comrade Harvest has not spoken yet; what the quality and the quantity of his voice will be is still uncertain, but the part he has to play this year in the destiny of the Communist Party and the Soviet Government of Russia is hardly less important than that of Stalin and the present Congress.

PROCESSIONAL HYMN

BLESSED city, heavenly Salem,
Vision dear of peace and love,
Who of living stones art builded
In the height of heaven above,
And, with Angel-hosts encircled,
As a bride doth earthward move;

From celestial realms descending,
Bridal glory round thee shed,
Meet for Him Whose love espoused thee,
To thy Lord shalt thou be led:
All thy streets, and all thy bulwarks
Of pure gold are fashioned.

Bright thy gates of pearl are shining,
They are open evermore;
And by virtue of His merits
Thither faithful souls do soar,
Who for Christ's dear Name in this world
Pain and tribulation bore.

Many a blow and biting sculpture
Polished well those stones elect,
In their places now compacted
By the heavenly Architect,
Who therewith hath willed for ever
That His Palace should be decked.

Laud and honour to the Father,
Laud and honour to the Son,
Laud and honour to the Spirit,
Ever Three, and ever One,
Consubstantial, Co-eternal,
While unending ages run. Amen.

Their Majesties having taken their places, and the Lord Mayor and Sheriffs having been conducted to their Stalls, then shall be sung:

GOD save our gracious King,
Long live our noble King,
God save the King.
Send him victorious,
Happy and glorious,
Long to reign over us,
God save the King.

THE BIDDING.

The Congregation standing, the Dean shall say:

I BID you welcome to our Cathedral Church of St. Paul on this day of its completed restoration, asking you to join with me in earnest thanksgiving to Almighty God, Who has inspired and guided this work through long years, and has now brought it to an end.

Let us remember before Him all those by whose skill and labour and sacrifice the strength of His House has been renewed, to our help and comfort and to His better and purer service.

Here, in our Mother Church of London, I call upon you to dedicate yourselves afresh to the Lord Christ, His Kingdom and His Cause; pledging your whole selves, body, soul and spirit, to the honour of His Name, the Sovereignty of His Rule, and the fulfilment of His Will, in loyalty and singleness of heart.

All praise be to God that He hath called us to take our part in the joy and adventure of His glorious Kingdom. May He grant us grace to prove ourselves worthy of so great a dignity.

And after that, these Prayers following, all devoutly kneeling; the Minor Canon first pronouncing with a loud voice,

The Lord be with you.
Answer. And with thy spirit.
Let us pray.

Lord, have mercy upon us.
Christ, have mercy upon us.
Lord, have mercy upon us.

OUR Father, Which art in heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, As it is in heaven. Give us this day our daily bread. And forgive us our trespasses, As we forgive them that trespass against us. And lead us not into temptation; But deliver us from evil. Amen.

O LORD JESU CHRIST, Son of the living God, Who art the very and true God, the splendour and image of the eternal Father; vouchsafe, we beseech Thee, to accept and bless this work of our hands, which we now dedicate to Thy honour; Who with the Father and the Holy Spirit livest and reignest, God world without end. Amen.

O LORD JESU CHRIST, in Whose most blessed Name this house of prayer is built and sanctified; grant, we beseech Thee, that, as we have restored this place for the manifestation of Thy love, so we also may be built up a spiritual house for the offering of service acceptable unto Thee, Who livest and reignest with the Father and the Holy Spirit, one God, world without end. Amen.

BLESSED be Thy Name, O Lord our God, that it hath pleased Thee to put into the hearts of Thy servants to offer willingly to the glory of Thy House. Bless, we humbly beseech Thee, all those by whose pains, care and cost this work has been carried on. Bless their families and their substance. Remember them concerning this. And grant that all who shall enjoy the blessing of this place, may use it thankfully to the glory of Thy blessed Name: through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

*WE offer our devout praises and thanksgivings to Thee for this Thy mercy, humbly beseeching Thee to perfect and establish Thy good work. Thou, O Lord, dwellest not in houses made with hands; heaven and the heaven of heavens cannot contain Thee; but though Thy throne is in heaven, earth is Thy footstool; vouchsafe therefore, we beseech Thee, Thy gracious presence in this Thy House to hear our prayers, and accept our sacrifices of praise and thanksgiving, through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

After a brief silence, then shall be said by all:

ALMIGHTY GOD, Father of all mercies, we Thine unworthy servants do give Thee most humble and hearty thanks for all Thy goodness and loving-kindness to us, and to all men; particularly to us who desire now to offer up our praises and thanksgivings for the completed restoration of this Thy glorious House. We bless Thee for our creation, preservation, and all the blessings of this life; but above all, for Thine inestimable love in the redemption of the world by our Lord Jesus Christ; for the means of grace, and for the hope of glory. And, we beseech Thee, give us that due sense of all Thy mercies, that our hearts may be unfeignedly thankful, and that we shew forth Thy praise, not only with our lips, but in our lives; by giving up ourselves to Thy service, and by walking before Thee in holiness and righteousness all our days; through Jesus Christ our Lord, to whom with Thee and the Holy Ghost be all honour and glory, world without end. Amen.

Then shall the Minor Canon say,

THE grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, and the love of God, and the fellowship of the Holy Ghost, be with us all evermore. Amen.

After which shall be sung,

HYMN

PRAISE, my soul, the King of heaven,
To His feet thy tribute bring;
Ransomed, healed, restored, forgiven,
Evermore His praises sing;
Alleluia! Alleluia!
Praise the everlasting King.

Praise Him for His grace and favour
To our fathers in distress;
Praise Him still the same as ever,
Slow to chide, and swift to bless;
Alleluia! Alleluia!
Glorious in His faithfulness.

Father-like, He tends and spares us,
Well our feeble frame He knows;
In His hands He gently bears us,
Rescues us from all our foes;
Alleluia! Alleluia!
Widely yet His mercy flows.

Angels in the height, adore Him;
Ye behold Him face to face;
Saints triumphant, bow before Him,
Gathered in from every race;
Alleluia! Alleluia!
Praise with us the God of grace. Amen.

Here followeth

THE ADDRESS

THE LORD BISHOP OF LONDON

During the singing of the following Hymn, the Bishop of London, the Dean, the Canons Residentiary, and the College of Minor Canons shall be conducted to the Sanctuary.

HYMN

ALL people that on earth do dwell,
Sing to the Lord with cheerful voice,
Him serve with fear, His praise forth tell,
Come ye before Him, and rejoice.

The Lord, ye know, is God indeed;
Without our aid He did us make;
We are His flock, He doth us feed,
And for His sheep He doth us take.

O enter then His gates with praise,
Approach with joy His courts unto;
Praise, laud and bless His name always,
For it is seemly so to do.

For why? the Lord our God is good;
His mercy is for ever sure;
His truth at all times firmly stood,
And shall from age to age endure.

To Father, Son, and Holy Ghost,
The God Whom Heaven and earth adore,
From men and from the Angel-host
Be praise and glory evermore. Amen.

Then shall be sung:

TE DEUM LAUDAMUS

to music by Dr. Stanley Marchant

WE praise Thee, O God: we acknowledge Thee to be the Lord.

All the earth doth worship Thee: the Father, everlasting.

To Thee all Angels cry aloud: the Heavens, and all the Powers therein.

To Thee Cherubin, and Seraphin: continually do cry,

Holy, Holy, Holy: Lord God of Sabaoth;

Heaven and earth are full of the Majesty: of Thy Glory.

The glorious company of the Apostles: praise Thee.

The goodly fellowship of the Prophets: praise Thee.

The noble army of Martyrs: praise Thee.

The holy Church throughout all the world: doth acknowledge Thee;

The Father: of an infinite Majesty;

Thine honourable, true: and only Son;

Also the Holy Ghost: the Comforter.

Thou are the King of Glory: O Christ.

Thou art the everlasting Son: of the Father.

When Thou tookest upon Thee to deliver man: Thou didst not abor the Virgin's womb.

When Thou hadst overcome the sharpness of death: Thou didst open the Kingdom of Heaven to all believers.

Thou sittest at the right hand of God: in the Glory of the Father.

We believe that Thou shalt come: to be our Judge.

We therefore pray Thee, help Thy servants; whom Thou hast redeemed with Thy precious blood.

Make them to be numbered with Thy Saints: in glory everlasting.

O Lord, save Thy people: and bless Thine heritage.

Govern them: and lift them up for ever.

Day by day: we magnify Thee.

And we worship Thy name: ever, world without end.

Vouchsafe, O Lord: to keep us this day without sin.

O Lord, have mercy upon us: have mercy upon us.

O Lord, let Thy mercy lighten upon us: as our trust is in Thee.

O Lord, in Thee have I trusted: let me never be confounded.

Then shall the Bishop say the following Collect.

O GOD, Who, through the preaching of the blessed Apostle Saint Paul, hast caused the light of the Gospel to shine throughout the world; Grant, we beseech Thee, that we, having his wonderful conversion in remembrance, may shew forth our thankfulness unto Thee for the same, by following the holy doctrine which He taught; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

Then shall the Bishop give

THE BLESSING.

After the Blessing, the Lord Mayor and the Sheriffs shall be conducted from their Stalls, and shall precede Their Majesties to the West Door of the Cathedral.

At the same time, the Bishop of London, the Dean and the Canons Residentiary shall be conducted from the Sanctuary, and escort Their Majesties to the West Door

Then shall the Cathedral Clergy be conducted from the Sanctuary and, followed by the Cathedral Choir, pass to the South Choir Aisle.

The arrangement of the Processional Hymn is by Dr. Charles Macpherson and that of the "Old Hundredth" by Dr. Edward C. Bairstow.

PRESERVATION OF THE CATHEDRAL

ARCHITECTS' LECTURE

A lecture by Captain C. Stanley Peach and Mr. W. Godfrey Allen, dealing with the restoration of St. Paul's Cathedral, was given before members of the Royal Institute of British Architects last night. Captain Peach is the representative of the Institute on the committee which administered the funds for the restoration work, and Mr. Allen is the resident architect.

Reference was made to the assistance The Times gave to the appeal for funds made early in 1925. The restoration work carried out by the Works Committee, the authors pointed out, might be roughly classified into engineering and architectural surveys and research; and work to the structure, including grouting and reinforced metal work, the repair of masonry and structural work incidental thereto. Hard and fast lines could not be drawn between these sections of the work, nor could they be considered in water-tight compartments. In practice each benefited by the results and experience of the other.

The engineering survey and the observations connected with it, which were inaugurated by the Commission of 1921, were reorganized and extended under the Works Committee. This record consisted of volumes of figures, levels, and diagrams of measurements, taken with the most perfect and accurate instruments obtainable, and included the selection of suitable points in the building for measuring movements, thus keeping it under complete and continuous observation. Measurements as fine as one-thousandth of a foot could be observed, and had actually been taken and recorded. At any future time the smallest movement of the building could be detected, and its direction and extent ascertained and compared with the established records; this had already furnished reliable and valuable data on which to base opinion. The absence of any such data in the past proved a serious difficulty to the Commission in their task of estimating the condition of the building and of devising the right treatment for the defects which they found.

The underlying principles of the preservation work had been to fortify the building without marring its beauty, and as far as possible without interfering with the historic value of Wren's craftsmanship. By making use of the inherent strength of his masterly design they had tried, with all the aid that modern science lent them, to strengthen its weaknesses and to pass it on intact for future generations, leaving no visible trace behind them of the labours of the last few years.

* This Collect was used on the occasion of the Consecration of the Choir in 1710.

Obituary

SIR ISRAEL GOLLANCZ

EARLY AND MIDDLE ENGLISH

Sir Israel Gollancz died at his home at Shoot-up-hill, N.W., yesterday in his 67th year. He had been Professor of English Language and Literature in the University of London since 1905, and secretary of the British Academy since its foundation in 1902. He was widely known as an Early and Middle English scholar, and was the editor of several texts of the period. He had published also works of Shakespearian criticism. He was active as a member of various learned societies, having been chairman of the Shakespeare Association and from 1919 to 1922 president of the Philological Society; and took in addition a leading part in the movement for a National Theatre, being honorary secretary of the committee recently appointed to draw up a scheme for a National Theatre in London.

Born on July 13, 1863, the younger son of the Rev. S. M. Gollancz and brother of the Rev. Professor Sir Hermann Gollancz, Israel Gollancz was educated at the City of London School, University College, London, and Christ's College, Cambridge. He was appointed Quain English Student and Lecturer at University College, London, in 1892, and held that post until 1895. In the following year he was made the first University Lecturer in English at Cambridge, having lectured on English at the University for some years previously in connexion with the movement for a school of English there. He was appointed to the chair of English Language and Literature at King's College, London, in 1905. The English Department in the University of London was then in course of development, and Professor Gollancz found himself obliged to resign his post at Cambridge not long afterwards. He received on that occasion warm commendations of his work for English scholarship in the University, of which he took just then the degree of Litt.D. Gollancz raised his department in London University from meagre proportions to its present position in the academic world, and he inspired thousands of students both by his teaching and by his personal encouragement. It was due to his energy, too, that the British Academy found last year a home of its own in Burlington-gardens. He was active in the varied work of the Academy, and also in securing the foundation of the Cervantes Chair of Spanish and the Camoens Chair of Portuguese in King's College, London.

In 1910 Professor Gollancz and the late Mr. Sidney Ball, of St. John's College, Oxford, were awarded the first Albert Kahn Travelling Fellowships. Later recognition of his rank as a scholar came with his election in 1919 to corresponding membership of the Royal Spanish Academy, and in 1927 to corresponding membership of the Medieval Academy of America. He was also an honorary freeman of the Stationers' Company, hon. director of the Early English Text Society, and Leofric Lecturer in Old English, University College, Exeter.

As an English scholar and textual editor Professor Gollancz was industrious in collation, ingenious in amendment, and enterprising in suggestion. His texts are not impeccable, and on occasions his cleverness perhaps exceeded his judgment, but he was in the front rank of workers in an obscure and difficult field, where learning needed to be joined with enthusiasm. His first text of "Pearl" was published as early as 1891, and with later editions in 1918 and 1921 he made that poem his own. There followed, in 1892, Crynewull's "Christ," and in 1895 the "Exeter Book of Anglo-Saxon Poetry." More recently Professor Gollancz had edited "The Parliament of the Three Ages" and "The Caedmon Manuscript of Anglo-Saxon Biblical Poetry." This last work was published in folio form for the British Academy, in commemoration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of incorporation. In the introduction Sir Israel Gollancz gave the first authoritative account of the manuscript, one of the most important monuments of early English literature, and the whole edition fulfilled both his own long-cherished wish and a general want. Sir Israel's Shakespearian publications included "Hamlet in Iceland" (1898), "The Book of Homage to Shakespeare" (1916), and "The Sources of Hamlet" (1926). He was editor also of the Temple Shakespeare, 1894-96.

Sir Israel was highly esteemed by his fellow-scholars all over the world; his charm of manner, his eagerness to help others, and his enthusiastic energy won him many friends. He received his knighthood in 1919. He married, in 1910, Alide Goldschmidt, the artist, and leaves one son and one daughter.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL ROST

Lieutenant-Colonel Ernest Reinhold Rost, O.B.E., late Indian Medical Service, and a leading British Buddhist, died at his residence, West Hill, Putney, yesterday, in his 58th year.

Born at Ealing in 1872 to Dr. Reinhold Rost, the great Pali scholar and Librarian to the India Office, he was educated at Highgate School and at St. Mary's Hospital, Paddington. Qualifying as M.R.C.S.Eng. and L.R.C.P.Lond., he passed into the Indian Medical Service at the age of 22 and was posted to Burma. At Rangoon he soon came into prominence as a skilful surgeon and had a large practice. He led the way in setting up a bacteriological laboratory, where his studies in leprosy bacilli yielded results of consequence. He was one of the founders of the Rangoon Medical School, where he was lecturer on surgery. Inheriting his father's interest in Eastern philosophy and religions, he studied the Buddhist faith and, becoming a convinced convert thereto, he gave much assistance to organizations connected with the prevailing religion of the Burmese. In the Great War, after serving on the North-West Frontier, he went out to East Africa, where work at the Dar-es-Salaam hospitals alternated with arduous campaigning in the interior. He was on the North-West Frontier again during the 1919 troubles and served in the brief but trying Third Afghan War, receiving in this connexion mention in dispatches. He was gazetted O.B.E. in 1918, and five years earlier received the Kaisar-i-Hind gold medal. In 1911 he contributed to the "Scientific Memoirs" of the Government of India, and he also wrote on the treatment of tubercular affections by inflation of oxygen. After the War he returned to Rangoon as Senior Surgeon. Retiring from the I.M.S. in the autumn of 1922, he settled at West Hill, Putney, as a general practitioner and a specialist in tropical diseases for the Ministry of Pensions. He took a prominent part in the work and propaganda of the British Buddhist Society.

MR. C. C. MACONOCHIE

Mr. Charles Cornelius Maconochie, K.C., C.B.E., died on Sunday at Avontoun, Linlithgow, at the age of 78.

The youngest son of Mr. Robert Blair Maconochie, W.S., of Gattonside House, Melrose, he was a great-grandson of Allan Maconochie, Lord Meadowbank, one of the ablest of Scottish Judges, and a grandson of Alexander Maconochie-Welwood, who also took the Bench title of Lord Meadowbank. His uncle, Allan Alexander Maconochie, was Regius Professor of Law at Glasgow. He went to Winchester in 1864, and took his degree at Edinburgh University. In 1876 he was admitted an advocate of the Scots Bar, and in 1889 he was appointed Advocate Depute by the late Lord Robertson, then Lord Advocate, and held the office under his two successors. In 1896 he was made Sheriff-Substitute of the Lothians and Peebles, and was promoted to be Sheriff in 1904, when he took "silk." He retired in 1918, and was made C.B.E. He married in 1882 Alice Mary, daughter of Mr. Robert Robertson, of Auchleeks, Perthshire, and had two sons and two daughters.

DR. CECIL WEBB-JOHNSON

Dr. Cecil Webb-Johnson, who died yesterday, after a short illness, at his residence in Upper Wimpole-street, at the age of 51, was well known as a successful physician, writer, and musical composer.

A son of Dr. Samuel Johnson, medical officer for Stoke-on-Trent, by his wife, Julia Webb, he was brother to Mr. Alfred Edward Webb-Johnson, surgeon to the Middlesex Hospital. Cecil Webb-Johnson was educated at Owens College, Manchester, and graduated from the Victoria University in 1903. He was clinical assistant at the Chelsea Hospital for Women and afterwards medical officer at the Staffordshire County Asylum. He then went to India, where he was at first civil surgeon and officer commanding the Station Hospital at Dum-Dum, and later specialist on midwifery and diseases of women to the 8th Lucknow Division and medical officer at various station hospitals at Calcutta, Allahabad, &c. He held a commission as Major, R.A.M.C. (T.), and as early as 1914 was honorary secretary of the Naval and Military Medical and Surgical Section of the British Medical Association.

Settling in Upper Wimpole-street at the end of the War, he devoted himself to the treatment of cardiac disease, and was appointed clinical assistant at the National Hospital for Diseases of the Heart and honorary consulting physician to St. Margaret's Hospital. He wrote more especially on diet, on medicine in India, and on twilight sleep. As a composer he was the author of "The Early Girl," "Love Time," "Smacks and Blows," "Diplomacy," and several waltzes. He married Babette, daughter of Mr. T. Tobin, of Margate, and had two daughters.

SIGNOR CHIESA

ITALIAN REPUBLICAN LEADER

Our Paris Correspondent telegraphs that Signor Eugenio Chiesa, the former Italian Air Minister and head of the Italian Republican Party, died of heart failure at Chevreux on Sunday at the age of 67. He left Italy in 1926, and had lived in France ever since.

Our Milan Correspondent telegraphs:—

Chiesa was born in Milan, began his career as an accountant, and later became a rich and enterprising merchant. From his earliest years he took an active part in political life, and belonged to the Republican Party, of which he was one of the most popular leaders. In the Chamber, where he sat for four Legislatures, he represented the constituency of Massa Carrara.

On the outbreak of the Great War he was one of the most fervent of those in favour of intervention, advocating the entry of Italy into the War on the side of England and France. Immediately after the declaration of hostilities by Italy, although 52 years of age, he volunteered and served as an infantry officer. In the Orlando Ministry he was Commissioner of the Air Force, and also accompanied Signor Orlando to Paris during the Peace Conference, where he prepared the report of the damage suffered by Italy in the invaded territories. He was a fluent and eloquent orator, and contributed also polemical articles first to the Italia del Popolo and later on to the Voce Repubblicana. Both in Parliament and on the municipal council of Milan he occupied himself chiefly with economics and financial questions, and several of his campaigns for purity in the administration of public affairs had made him very popular. He was an opponent of Fascism, and after the Matteotti affair he abandoned the Chamber with the so-called Aventine group. In 1927, after the Bologna attempt on Signor Mussolini, when the exceptional laws for the defence of the State were introduced, Chiesa escaped across the Alps to France, where he remained as a political exile till the day of his death.

MRS. MARY DAVIES

Mrs. Mary Davies, who died on Sunday, at the age of 75, was a mezzo-soprano singer whose voice, though of limited power, was very sweet, beautifully produced, and of great charm. She will be remembered as having sung the part of Margaret in Berlioz's Faust when it was produced in its entirety under Hallé in Manchester. This was in 1880, and six years later she sang the part of Mary on the production at the Crystal Palace of Berlioz's Childhood of Christ.

Born in London on February 27, 1855, she was taught music and singing by her father, who was for over 50 years precentor at the Welsh Chapel, Soho. At the age of eight she made her début at the Hanover-square Concert Rooms. The Welsh Choral Union Scholarship at the R.A.M. enabled her to study under Randegger, and she won prizes and medals. For many years she was a popular favourite, singing at concerts and festivals, and in song-recitals and oratorio, especially under Hallé and Richter. In 1900 she finally retired to devote herself to teaching. She had married in 1888 Mr. William Cadwaladr Davies, the first Registrar of the University College of North Wales, who died in 1905. She shared his interest in higher education in Wales, and was president of the Welsh Folk Musical Society. In 1916 she received the hon. degree of D.Mus. from the University of Wales.

MR. ALAN MACPHERSON

His Honour Alan Macpherson, late Judge of County Courts, died yesterday at Cheltenham at the age of 73.

The second son of Mr. Alan Macpherson, of Blairgowrie, Perthshire, he was born on January 11, 1857. In 1870 he went as a commoner to Winchester, to Southgate House, which the Rev. C. H. Hawkins had just started. He went up to Exeter College, Oxford, where he took honours in classics and law, was called to the Bar by Lincoln's Inn in 1881, and went the S.E. Circuit. He was appointed Judge of County Court Circuit (Derby) No. 19 in December, 1912, being transferred to No. 53 (Gloucester) in April, 1920. He resigned at the end of last year. He married in 1889, Anna, daughter of the late Mr. William Young, of Standhill Court, Charlwood, Surrey.

A correspondent writes:—For the last 10 years of his life the late Mr. Haslam Mills was engaged in the business of advertising, in which he was remarkably successful, bringing new methods and ideas which have proved their worth.

Mr. James Robertson Murray, Inspector-General of Consular Establishments, died suddenly at Southampton on Saturday, shortly after his arrival on board the Homeric from America, where he had been on a visit of inspection of British Consular establishments. At the funeral, which takes place at Southampton to-day, the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, Mr. A. Henderson, will be represented by Mr. Hall Hall, Inspector of Consulates.

FELLOWSHIP OF EMPIRE EXHIBITION

OVERSEA AGRICULTURAL SCHOLARSHIPS

Arrangements have recently been made between the Oversea Settlement Department of the Dominions Office and the Fellowship of the British Empire Exhibition, with the concurrence of the Commonwealth Government of Australia, whereby 25 youths to whom scholarships have been awarded by the Fellowship will be trained, free of charge, at Government agricultural colleges or farm schools in Australia. Of this number 23 will be given a one year's course in New South Wales, and two a two years' course at Dookie Agricultural College, Victoria.

All of the students will, at the conclusion of their training, be found suitable agricultural work in the Commonwealth. The cost of the training and maintenance will be met jointly by the British Government and the Fellowship. The Fellowship will select the youths, who, after the selection has been approved by the Oversea Settlement Department on behalf of the Australian Government, will sail at a date which will enable them to begin their training this year. In addition to the Australian scholarships, the Fellowship is also sending a number of scholars to Guelph Agricultural College, Ontario, during this month, and to Manitoba in the autumn.

During the past four years the Fellowship, with the help of the Oversea Settlement Department, has granted nearly 300 scholarships to British youths for training in oversea agricultural colleges. The records of the Fellowship show that of these, over 95 per cent. have been successful; quite a high proportion are already in a fair way to independence as shareholders in farms, or training for professional agricultural posts; the remainder are in agricultural employment.

THE ROYAL SOCIETY OF ST. GEORGE

PROTECTING THE COUNTRYSIDE

The annual meeting of the Royal Society of St. George was held yesterday at the Mansion House. The LORD MAYOR, Sir William Waterlow, who presided, drew attention to the wish expressed by Prince Arthur of Connaught that the society would do all it could to help towards the prevention of the disfigurement of the countryside.

LORD AMPTHILL, moving a resolution that the aims and objects of the society were worthy of the support of all of English race or descent, said the society was needed because we had in our midst traitors and false prophets, whose pernicious object had gone so far as to bring the very word patriotism into disrepute among those they were deliberately corrupting. In many parts of the country an appeal to patriotism provoked derision and hostility. It was because certain classes of people had had such false teaching that they did not understand the meaning of the word patriotism. They had been taught to believe that it signified militarism and a lust for aggression and military conquest, and they imagined that any appeal to patriotism meant a call to military service. They disliked any mention of duty, because they had not been taught that rights and liberties were inseparable from duties.

COMMANDER ARTHUR MARSDEN seconded the resolution, which was supported by PREBENDARY GOUGH and carried unanimously.

LORD ULLSWATER moved that the society should assist in every way possible the National Trust, the Council for the Preservation of Rural England, and other organizations of a kindred nature. It was only recently, he pointed out, that people had begun to realize what a great asset they had in the beautiful scenery of the countryside. Motor-cars had opened up to them spots remote from railways and enabled them to see the charms of the homely hamlet, the "brotherhood of venerable trees," and the beauty of which the poets had written. SIR THEODORE CHAMBERS seconded and SIR J. FORTESCUE-FLANNERY supported the resolution, which was carried unanimously.

LEIGH HUNT

MR. BLUNDEN'S BIOGRAPHY

LEIGH HUNT. A Biography. By EDMUND BLUNDEN. Cobden Sanderson. 21s. net.)

It is a rare piece of fortune when a poet of mark vates the exercise of an original creative talent with antiquarian scholarship and critical instruction; and it would be a mistake to regret this variety of activities for the exactness of criticism embodies in the sparkling felicities of phrase that adorn and enforce his judgments with prodigal abundance established that Mr. Blunden's work of literary elucidation is no parergon but is of a piece with his mission in letters. There is something almost fay in his knowledge, and in his manner of communication. He has a intimate an acquaintance with the great and the obscure in English literature so easy a familiarity with all the channels and ramifications, in particular of the period of Lamb, Coleridge, and Hunt (to name three of his schoolfellows), that it seems a possibility not too fantastic to suspect him as reincarnated from that time to enlighten our day concerning the due significances of his colleagues. He brings us in this study so close to Shelley and Keats that regret that he has not yet presented them in full is checked by the reflection that these chivalrous proclamations against neglect (as in John Clare) and wrongful accusation (as in Leigh Hunt) are of his nature. But there is more in this book than the rehabilitation of a figure to whom literature is indebted and who has been falsely charged; here is the staging of a brilliant period, with Lamb, Shelley, Keats, Byron, Hazlitt, Carlyle, Tennyson, and many other illustrious figures in the scene. We are reassured that, after all, the art of biography is not mispractised by collecting all the evidence and handling it in imaginative sympathy; that possibly there is something wrong in the modern notion that a fanciful picture, in default of facts, is the same thing as truth.

The case against Hunt must now be dismissed. The evidence is conclusive and inescapable. We are shown a likeable, generous and abundantly interesting man, a true if faulty poet overshadowed by precipitous figures in an era miraculously rich in them, a critic of keen perception and wide catholicity who, from youth to old age, was unfaltering in industry. That is honour enough. But then gathered a cloud over Hunt. Mr. Blunden, as if a life so long and crowded as Hunt's did not present difficulties enough, has been forced, to some extent, to act for the defence in certain matters that gained prominence only because tittle-tattle has higher prestige than poetry for vindering wits. He is so successful in clearing Hunt of accusations and ridicule, when there was nothing but the malice of enemies to base them upon, that a question remains. Why did not the cloud dissolve a century ago? Here is one of Nature's mysteries. Some people seem fated for the ironic finger. It may be suggested that, woven in Hunt's endearing qualities, there was a vagary of personality (leaving its impress in his verse and not infrequently in his prose) that made him easier game than others for the yahoos of literature. That he lacked the higher creative power of his friends should not be an adequate reason for accepting the gentle "Blackwood's" charge that he was steeped to the ears in sin. All that brutality, together with the busy Haydon's mad and contradictory gossip, might be now as dead as the other campaigning of that distant day if Dickens had not projected Skimpole, and even his denial that Skimpole was Hunt, who was "the very soul of truth and honour," left some of the mud clinging to the flowered dressing-gown. That dressing-gown is suspect. It is the sign and symbol. The bowery prison is another. This defect of foppery in his person has been fatal to his reputation, though why so venial a blemish should have led to more than good-humoured chaff is beyond understanding.

It is exciting to follow Mr. Blunden in his re-establishment of Hunt to honour on these personal grounds. The many-sided interests in Hunt's long career (too long perhaps for the safety of his name) are described with affectionate care. The story is too intricate for summary treatment, and we can leave the rehabilitation of character and the equally important estimate of Hunt's worthy work as essayist and editor, where Mr. Blunden convinces by many bright beams of wisdom and humour, to turn to what is the outstanding motif of the book and Hunt's real significance. Hunt should be taken from his Victorian years and placed in his rightful setting, where, though his creativeness is dwarfed by the greater figures, his life is irrevocably bound with those of Coleridge, Lamb, Byron, Hazlitt, and most particularly with Shelley and Keats. This brilliant galaxy Mr. Blunden uses for his picture. That great age begins anew in this sparkling chronicle. Hazlitt in the precious record of people he and his friends would wish to meet did not make the presences more real to us. There are the strict lines of individual genius, but Hunt, if of lesser make, cannot be ignored in any consideration of Shelley and Keats. Wherever Shelley appears on the scene there is a thrill of pleased expectancy and genial refreshment, and Mr. Blunden's chapter on the Marlow days has a lustrous harmony.

The impact with Keats was not of the same rare quality, but there was veneration and respect from the younger man, which jealous busybodies succeeded only momentarily in shaking. A special affinity in the three is felt. Hunt's achievements and innovations and impulse in poetry were of the same kind but not of the same measure as theirs; but that is not the point, which lies in his immediate recognition of their genius and in proclaiming it, at all seasons, to a world which was hostile when it was not indifferent. Hunt's vocation was to extend the acquaintance of the public with the work of the poets, and Keats and Shelley were ever to him beacons of the eternal. It was so in the first years of their freshness, and in old age time and again we see him looking back in pride and reverence and gratitude. In that still delightful selection from the English poets presented in "Imagination and Fancy" in 1840 there is a special fervour and a warm glow of remembrance in recalling Shelley and Keats. There was reason for pride in being a believer when the world doubted, and it is an odd state of mind that would mock him for trailing their clouds of glory through the grey later years. It was not only respect for genius that moved Hunt, but friendship and fidelity had meanings heightened for him above the common. They were part of a larger poetry enriching life beyond ordinary experiences. It shines clearly through Mr. Blunden's luminous study that Hunt thought of himself as the instrument through which England should know that two great poets had heightened her renown.

DAME HENRIETTA BARNETT

A LIFEWORK OF REFORM

MATTERS THAT MATTER. By DAME HENRIETTA BARNETT. (Murray. 7s. 6d. net.)

In the four hundred odd pages of this book have been collected together some of the addresses delivered by Dame Henrietta Barnett, and some of the articles she has written for the Press on various social problems. An old woman living in the Hampstead Garden Suburb once said, when she did not quite approve of Dame Henrietta's insistence on fresh air in her little home, "Dear Mrs. Barnett's such a draughty lady!" She is: throughout this book sweeps a strong draught of cold common-sense, but always it bears with it a healing fragrance. The various papers grouped together in the book deal, among other subjects, with university settlements, housing, education, children, Poor Law administration, and America, and on each subject the author's philosophy is the same. She started the first settlement in the East End in an attempt to bring the fortunate and the unfortunate classes together, so that they could help and enlighten each other; her dream of the garden suburb was founded on the same idea, to "build so that all classes could live in neighbourliness together; the friendships would come about naturally, and the artificial efforts to build bridges need not be made." She has been notably successful, and to-day she assures us that 10,000 people are living in neighbourliness together, in houses varying in rent from 4s. 6d. a week to £400 a year; the gardens are unfenced as a symbol of the barriers removed from the lives of the tenants. "The division of classes is one of the deepest of our social wrongs and one of our gravest dangers," she says.

Her attitude towards education and the upbringing of Poor Law children is based on the same philosophy, and to carry it out she was instrumental in founding the State Children's Association in 1927, an association designed to improve the conditions under which the children in workhouses were living; great improvements have been made under the body of enthusiastic workers she gathered round her, but Dame Henrietta is still on the watch against the flaws in the Poor Law system, just as she is opposed to the wholesale granting of State pensions and "doles" as likely to destroy individual effort and to set a dangerous example to children brought up in homes where life is supported without work.

Dame Henrietta finds in American philanthropy all the naivety of a child-nation. "Amongst the evidence of the delightful youthfulness of America is its pride in its charities," and she was met by blank astonishment when she pointed out that the vast sums spent on voluntary charity were evidences of rotten social foundations; "our Transatlantic cousins were more than surprised at the suggestion that it was their duty, as they worked their charities, to plan to improve the conditions which had called them forth"; and when it was suggested that root reforms would make charity unnecessary Dame Henrietta was met with the objection that to do away with charity would be undesirable—a point of view occasionally to be met with in English philanthropic circles also.

It is refreshing to read a book so clear cut, so direct, so free of sentimental or emotional appeal; refreshing, too, to reflect on the valiant struggles for righteousness being made; "God never leaves Himself with only one witness," the author observes, "and, as Elijah was reminded, there are always an invisible 7,000 refusing to worship Baal."

NEW NOVEL

Of Mr. William Faulkner, the author of SOLDIERS' PAY (Chatto and Windus, 7s. 6d. net), we learn something from Mr. Richard Hughes's preface. This young writer, whom Mr. Hughes considers the most interesting novelist in America at the moment, is a Southerner who pursues the "solid calling" of a house-painter. It is obvious that he is a man of considerable reading and deep feeling for poetry. But this reading and feeling do not blind him to brute fact; indeed, like Ernest Hemingway, he seems to be unduly oppressed, in spite of all his literary culture, with the predominance of bodily desire in life. He, too, is a pessimist, and sadly records the thwartings of men and women who are locked in the prison of their flesh. "Soldiers' Pay" is a tale of what happened in a little Southern town just after the War, when two strangers brought home the still living but otherwise ruined body of Donald Mahon, the rector's son. They had all supposed him dead. The old rector, pathetically fingering a few relics, still thought of him as the bright, wild boy whom he had loved. Emmy the drudge thought of him as the glorious lover who had swum with her and made her his on a moonlit night; Cecily, his worthless betrothed, had put him conveniently out of her mind. A discharged soldier and a young War-widow who had fathered and mothered the helpless, disfigured, unremembering Donald, once an officer of England's Air Force, in the train, stay to witness the consternation wrought by this tragic return and to guard their adopted charge from its worst effects. Joe Gilligan and Mary Powers, the protectors and fellow-sufferers, are characters who endear themselves to the reader. They, too, are maimed by the War, in their emotions. Mary can love no more, Joe cannot win love. Unselfish comradeship is the best they can achieve. Against their best are shown the disappointment, the selfishness, the despair and the impatience of those whose lives are upset by this disconcerting reminder of what they wished to forget, by this cruel changing of what they wished unchanged. Mr. Faulkner displays the scene and the characters with unfailing resource: he shrinks from no brutality of word or thought, albeit he knows where beauty and truth lie. It is a book worth reading, though uncomfortable to read, for Mr. Faulkner is, as Mr. Hughes says, a novelist to his finger-tips.

AUSTRALIAN FINANCE

SHELL TAXATION PAYMENTS

Strange comment has appeared in a Melbourne journal on Sir Otto Niemeyer's mission to Australia for the purpose of conferring with the Commonwealth Government on the measures to be taken to extricate the country from the financial difficulties into which she has fallen. These difficulties have not developed suddenly, but are the inevitable outcome of causes which have been at work for a long time. That a serious financial crisis would sooner or later occur has been clearly foreseen by students of economics for years, and there has been no lack of warnings of the dangers ahead. Most people, however, are content to accept conditions of prosperity when they come without inquiring closely into their causes, and Australians are no exception to the rule. For years they enjoyed remarkable prosperity, and the standard of living has been high. All would have been well if this standard had been fully earned, but there is reason to believe that it has been, partly, if not largely, borrowed. In a period of 10 years Australia borrowed abroad £50,000,000 more than was required to pay the service on her large oversea debt, and the immediate financial problem is how to provide the necessary exchange to discharge her foreign obligations. In present circumstances it is clearly impossible to avoid further borrowing abroad. But if Australia were content simply to incur fresh foreign indebtedness to obtain the necessary exchange she would not solve but merely postpone her real problem. Briefly, that problem is to increase her productivity, to reduce her costs of production, and to live within her income. Although her creditors are naturally deeply concerned, the question of putting the country's industries and finances upon a sound basis is one which the Australian people alone can decide. There will certainly be no attempt by creditors to dictate to them.

The Shell Meeting

The board of the Shell Transport and Trading Company were able to give the shareholders at yesterday's annual meeting another very satisfactory account of their stewardship. Profits last year were increased by no less than £1,036,485 to the huge total of £6,720,991, and the total dividend for the year is maintained at 25 per cent., free of tax, in spite of the fact that the capital was increased during 1929 by the issue of £4,133,754 of Ordinary shares. Lord Bearsted, who presided, gave a very interesting review of the petroleum situation. Production again showed a very substantial increase last year, the increase being greater than in 1928. The total output was 210,600,000 metric tons, an increase of 23,000,000 metric tons on 1928, whereas the increase in that year was only 9,000,000 metric tons. America, which is the world's chief producer, contributed about 14,000,000 metric tons to the increase of 23,000,000. This growth is the more noteworthy since it occurred in spite of real efforts in that country to restrict production. In countries other than America and Venezuela output had been maintained at approximately the 1928 level, and it was to these two countries, Lord Bearsted pointed out, that they must look for an improvement in the oil situation. Like Sir John Cadman, Lord Bearsted is very hopeful that the present movement to secure cooperation in conserving the world's oil resources will succeed in its purpose.

Huge Payments for Taxes

Lord Bearsted referred at some length to the progress which had been made in the scientific exploitation of petroleum. Various new commodities manufactured from crude petroleum, he said, have been placed on the market. Great attention, he added, was also being paid to processes for the manufacture of synthetic benzine, either from coal or from oil. In this connexion the Shell Company has joined hands with the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey and the great German chemical company known as the I.G. All the experience and patents of each of these three companies will be exchanged and shared in order that the vast problem of hydrogenation as it affects the oil industry may be worked out jointly. Lord Bearsted made a striking statement regarding the growing burden of taxation. The expenditure which outstripped all else in its rate of increase, he said, was taxation, and he revealed the fact that Government taxes paid by the Shell group during the year 1928 amounted to almost double the sum which was distributed in dividends among all the shareholders of the group, and almost equalled the total amount paid by the group throughout the world in salaries and wages. One of the lesser-known facts regarding the Shell group is the great size of the provident fund which was established for the benefit of the staff. This fund now amounts to £23,500,000 and has about 33,000 members.

Anglo-Argentine Tramways Year

The latest report of the Anglo-Argentine Tramways Company gives a reminder that the vexed question of a revision of tariffs, which this old-established undertaking needs in order to do justice to the holders of its Ordinary capital, remains unsettled. The agreement for revision, which was signed by the executive department of the Municipal Council in August, 1925, ad-referendum the Council, was the subject of an adverse vote by a small majority on December 30, 1929. Negotiations were already in progress for certain modifications to meet the ideas of the authorities, and new proposals have since been presented to the Council by the company and are now under consideration. Gross receipts of the company last year showed a reduction of £117,063 at a total of £4,602,117. Against this the management reduced operating expenses by about £75,000 to £2,703,862, and set aside £36,524 less to renewals reserve, the appropriation being £335,892. A rather larger loss was incurred on exchange, and after allowing for a reduction of £20,000 in miscellaneous receipts the net revenue was £19,165 smaller at £364,547. This sufficed to maintain dividends on the First and Second Preference shares with a margin of a few thousands, which was added to the "carry forward," making that item £91,475. The directors state that traffic conditions in the city of Buenos Aires underwent no change for the better during 1929, and the congestion in the central thoroughfares continued to be a factor in adding to the cost of the company's operations, while at the same time restricting its receipts. Competition from omnibuses and taxi-buses increased, and added materially to the loss of traffic which the company sustained as a natural consequence of the commercial depression ruling in Argentina throughout the year.

Yorkshire Amalgamated Collieries

Lord Aberconway had a less unsatisfactory story to unfold to the shareholders of the Yorkshire Amalgamated Collieries at yesterday's meeting than was the case last year, for as announced in the report a maiden dividend has been declared for 1929-30 on the Ordinary shares. The better results obtained were due to the demand for coal being fairly well maintained during the 12 months ended March 31 last, but since then conditions have become less favourable. Shareholders should, however, be able to look forward with confidence to better distributions in future since, as the chairman stated yesterday, the profits earned by the subsidiary companies were considerably in excess of the dividends declared, which was all that was shown in the Amalgamated Company's report. Moreover, two members of the group, the Rossington and the Maltby, have only just emerged from the development stage. Nearly the whole of the capital expenditure on these two collieries has now been completed and paid for, and Lord Aberconway said yesterday that the hope that they would be able to hold their own with the average colliery in the field had been fulfilled. Lord Aberconway made out a good case for the district levy introduced by the Central Collieries Commercial Association, for he attributed to it the increase from 2,470,749 tons in 1927-28 to 6,613,537 tons last year in exports from the Humber. The circumstances which led to the introduction of the levy were as follows :—The Yorkshire coalfield has a longer average rail haul to the ports than the other exporting districts, and the increase in freights therefore affects it more than other fields; further, after the 1926 stoppage, the miners in this district were given the same wages as before, whereas on the North-East Coast the collieries obtained a lower wage scale. As a result the Yorkshire collieries saw a large part of their export trade disappear. They were driven to contemplate the sale of their output in inland markets, but a large proportion of the Midland collieries decided to subscribe to a levy to subsidize the export of coal rather than have a price war in the domestic market.

Lyons and Rationalization

In the course of his remarks at the annual meeting yesterday of J. Lyons and Company, the chairman, Major Salmon, claimed that this great undertaking had worked according to the principles of rationalization for the last 36 years. If rationalization, he said, meant keeping a business up to date by the management availing themselves of the latest discoveries, both scientific and mechanical, and by the fullest utilization of raw materials, the elimination of waste, whether of material or labour, the grouping of businesses which were related and which might be worked together with a gain in economy, in which the question of transport played no small part, then he could say that the business of Lyons had been conducted according to the theories of rationalization from its beginning, with the effect of reducing prices, increasing wages, and giving more employment. Major Salmon, in an allusion to the Consumers' Council Bill now before Parliament, said the proposal to give power to the Board of Trade to fix a maximum price for almost any commodity in use ignored the experience gained from similar experiments throughout history ; first, that a maximum price became a minimum price irrespective of quality and service, and secondly, that the standard which was adopted in fixing a price was that of the less and not of the more efficient. This is a pertinent criticism, as will be conceded by those who remember the extent to which the fixing of prices during and after the War, intended as a protection to the consumer, was frequently used to exploit him.

Timber Merchants' Larger Earnings

The recovery shown a year ago after two bad years by Denny, Mott and Dickson, timber merchants, was more than maintained in the 12 months ended March 31. Net profits of the company rose from £89,235 to £100,101, which permits of the repetition of a dividend of 6 per cent. and the carrying forward of £75,080, against £50,880. The directors state that a marked improvement in the turnover helped to reduce the percentage of working charges, but the severe competition for orders left room for only a very small margin of profit on the increased business. Of a balance-sheet total of £1,755,000 shares in other companies account for £613,195 and directly-owned property for £7,650 ; the remainder of the assets, amounting to £1,134,584, are of a floating character. Debtors, at £653,498, are nearly twice as large as a year ago, which reflects the larger business done, but stock-in-trade has been reduced from £444,689 to £393,785. Cash amounts to only £19,096, and there are loans due from subsidiary companies amounting to £68,205. Current liabilities stand at £433,754, so that the company possesses a large excess of floating assets over liabilities.

Trustees and Railway Stock

A correspondent states that one of the large British railways has made a rule that prevents trustees keeping duplicate accounts in their stock books. Thus, when trustees already holding stock in a trust in which they are duly registered purchase further stock on behalf of another trust the two holdings are amalgamated and the dividends paid on one voucher. When the company was asked in one case to have the accounts marked "A" and "B" and the dividends paid to the banks of the respective beneficiaries, it stated that its difficulty was to justify an expense which the company was put to and had to be borne by the Ordinary stockholders to benefit trustees who undertook the distribution of income over settled estates and then desired the company to bear the expense of distributing that income to the beneficiaries, although in some instances the trustees were paid for their trouble. This is a perfectly reasonable answer, and our correspondent makes a reasonable suggestion in rejoinder—namely, that the company might charge a fee to those who desire to have accounts specially marked. This seems to offer a solution of the difficulty.

STOCK EXCHANGE

INTERNATIONAL SHARES LOWER

Dull conditions marked the opening of the new Account on the Stock Exchange yesterday, and prices dwindled further owing largely to the week-end depression in the New York market and to the further fall in commodity prices. British Funds were quite firm, and a welcome feature was a small demand for Australian loans. Home Railway stocks were dull, but a better tendency prevailed for South American Railway securities. In the Foreign market the chief feature was the Reparations loan, which after early weakness rallied to some extent. In the Miscellaneous market Anglo-American securities weakened sharply, but there was a better tendency in the later dealings, and prices closed above the worst points touched. South African mining shares were easier after their recent rise, and Rhodesian shares were affected by the weakness in New York and by the fall in copper, which was also responsible for a decline in Rio Tinto. Tin shares also suffered from a falling commodity price.

The Gilt-edged market was firm, with few changes in prices. Conversion Five per Cents. rose to 104¼, and the War Loan was steady at 102½. There was a little inquiry for Australian stocks, a number of which rose ¼. Home Railway stocks were dull. Underground issues were firm, the Income Bonds rising ⅜ to 110½. In the Dominion group Canadian Pacific fell to 194½.

In the Foreign market there was rather more business, though conditions were by no means active. The Reparations Loan opened at 1⅛ discount, and fell to 2¼ discount ; at this level, however, there was a demand for the scrip, and the closing price was 1⅞ discount, a fall of ⅛ as compared with Friday's figure. Old Japanese loans were easier, but there was a fair amount of small investment business in the new Japanese Five-and-a-Half per Cents., which rose to ⅜ premium bid. Brazilian loans weakened, the Rescission falling 1 to 61 and the new San Paulo ½ to 3½ discount. French railway sterling bonds were generally ¼ higher. Argentine Railway securities regained a little ground. United of Havana hardened, and San Paulo rallied slightly to 171.

Oil shares were easier, being influenced by conditions in the New York market. Royal Dutch fell 9-16 to 31 7-16, and Anglo-Persian 1-16 to 4 1-16. Trinidad shares were lower, Leaseholds falling to 2⅜. London and Liverpool stocks of rubber showed an increase on the week of 1,492 tons, and the price of the commodity was rather lower. Rubber shares, however, were fairly steady. Tea shares were slightly lower where changed, Consolidated Tea and Lands falling to 19½.

CABLES AND WIRELESS LOWER

In the Miscellaneous market Anglo-American securities closed above the worst points touched, Brazilian Traction at one time changed hands at 39⅜, but rallied to 40½, a net fall of 1. International Nickel moved similarly, touching 22⅜, and recovering later to 23¾. Hydro Electric was 3½ points below Friday's closing price at 37½. Columbia Graphophone showed no change on balance at 3 15-16, but had at one time been down to 3 21-32, while Gramophone finished 5-32 lower at 3 11-16, having been 3¾. United Molasses declined to 2⅜. General Electric fell 1s. to 49s., and Associated Electrical were easier at 28s. 9d. Lautaro shares were lower. Unilever shares relapsed, the old shares falling 1-16 to 2 17-32, and the new 1s. 6d. to 9s. 6d. discount. Kreuger and Toll (27), and Swedish Match (14⅜) were lower, the former losing a point. Cables and Wireless stocks weakened once again, falls being recorded of 1 in the "B" (16), of 1⅛ in the "A" (36), and of ⅛ in the Preference (87⅛). Imperial Chemical Ordinary fell 9d. to 22s. 9d., the Deferred remaining at 7s. In the artificial silk group Courtaulds were offered at 2½, and Snia Viscosa fell to 10s. Carreras "A" reacted slightly to 8½. Motor shares were easier ; Leyland fell to 67s. (a decline of 1s. on balance), having been 68s. 6d. The brewery group was firm as a whole, and Watney Deferred rose 9d. to 62s. 3d. Lyons "A" hardened to 4½. Waring and Gillow finished 7½d. down at 26s. 10½d.

Rhodesian mining shares weakened, being affected by the fall in the price of copper and the depression in New York. Bwana M'Kubwa fell 1s. 1½d. to 13s. 4½d., N'Changa lost 3-16 at 2½, and Congo Border finished ¼ lower at 15. Rio Tinto fell 1½ to 33½. South African shares were easier, falls occurring in Randfontein (7s. 4½d.) and East Rand (10s. 4½d.) among others. De Beers, however, rallied further to 7½. Tin shares were lower in sympathy with the metal, London Tin closing 1s. 3d. down at 17s.

ANGLO-ARGENTINE TRAMWAYS

OMNIBUS COMPETITION

The directors of the Anglo-Argentine Tramways Company report that gross receipts for 1929 amounted to £4,602,117, which compares with £4,719,180 for 1928. Expenses, including £335,892 (against £372,416) carried to renewals reserve, were £3,574,596 (against £3,693,048). After crediting interest and sundry receipts, £5,890, and deducting annuity to City of B.A. Tramways Company, unchanged at £70,660, Debenture stock interest and sinking funds, also unchanged at £587,821, and amount placed to sinking fund for redemption of Preference and Ordinary share capital, £10,383 (against £9,983), the net profit comes out at £364,547 (against £383,712). This is disposed of as shown in the following table :—

—	1929	1928	1927
	£	£	£
Net profit	364,547	383,712	374,401
Brought forward ..	85,928	61,216	45,815

Ordinary dividend ..	Nil	Nil	Nil
Carried forward ..	91,475	85,928	61,216

The last dividend paid on the Ordinary share capital, the issued amount of which is £2,700,000, was 2½ per cent. for 1914.

The agreement for revision of tariffs, which was signed by the executive department of the Municipal Council in August, 1925, ad referendum the Council, was the subject of an adverse vote, by a small majority, on December 30, 1929. Negotiations were already in progress for certain modifications to meet the ideas of the authorities, and new proposals have since been presented to the Council by the company and are now under consideration. Meeting, July 1.

MONTREAL STOCK EXCHANGE

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT)

MONTREAL, June 23.—Although the opening was easy, trading was light, operators showing a disposition to await developments in the business situation. Later the market advanced gradually, recovering the early losses. The sale of a block of 10,000 shares of National Breweries at 28½ was one of the few features, only Brazilian Traction and International Nickel otherwise displaying any activity. The close was dull but firm.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

UNSETTLED

RALLY AT THE CLOSE

NEW YORK, June 23.—Sharp fluctuations on the Stock Exchange to-day indicated a very unsettled feeling, but the position proved to be oversold, and attempts to cover short commitments resulted in smart rallies, especially towards the end of the session. Sales were returned at 3,832,000 shares.

The opening was easy under continued active selling. Coincident with a sharp decline in cotton and other commodities, unfavourable trade news was circulated, including reports of further sectional declines in steel operations and a further decline in wholesale commodity price averages. These influences, coupled with an acute lack of confidence contributed to the release of a new wave of selling. Declines were accelerated by professional "bear" attacks in the attempt to break through the low levels established in the break last autumn. Steel Common reached 152¼, which is within 2¼ points of the autumn low level. Strong support, however, came out, and the ready absorption of the offerings led to active covering, which caused sharp rebounds in standard issues, notably public utilities.

During the early part of the afternoon the trend was irregular, selling outbreaks being witnessed in the industrial list chiefly affecting Steel Common, American Can, General Electric, and Westinghouse. Indications of strong underlying support at around the morning's resistance levels, however, quickly checked the professional selling efforts, and strong rallies developed later in the afternoon under active buying for both accounts. The nervousness of shorts was indicated by an eager demand to cover, under which industrials advanced abruptly, while the list generally rallied, buoyantly helped by the publication of a statement by the Harvard Economic Society predicting an early and substantial recovery in general business together with claims that sentiment recently has been unduly pessimistic. The close was firm.

MONEY MARKET

DISCOUNT RATES EASIER

Lombard-street yesterday was plentifully supplied with day-to-day credits, borrowers usually being able to satisfy their requirements at 1½ per cent. It is not unlikely that borrowing from the Bank of England, in connexion with the end-of-the-half-year needs, will begin to day, as loans now obtained will run into July, and the prospects therefore are for a continuance of ease during the next few days. In the discount market a good demand was reported for September bills to arrive next month, business being done at 2½ per cent., and in some cases, it was understood, on even lower terms. The weakness of the forward rate tended to bring down spot rates, buyers finding it necessary in competition to accept 2⅝ per cent. as the rate on three months commercial bills.

The Bank rate is 3 per cent., to which it was reduced from 3½ per cent. on May 1. The banks' deposit rate is 1 per cent., and the deposit rates of the discount houses are 1 per cent. at call and ½ per cent. at notice.

FOREIGN EXCHANGES

A feature of the foreign exchange market was the weakness of German marks. The rate on Berlin, which closed on Saturday at 20.37¾m., rose to 20.38¾m. Two theories were put forward to account for this movement, one that it was due to the offer of American securities in Germany, the other that it was connected with business in the Reparations loan, dealings in this loan so far as the Berlin Bourse is concerned beginning yesterday. Sterling on New York rose in the early dealings to $4.85⅛₁₆, from which there was a partial reaction later to $4.85²⁹/₃₂. Canadian dollars were offered, the rate on Montreal rising to $4.85½, but forward business on New York was done at 1-per discount over spot for both the one and three months positions. French and Belgian currencies were firmer, rates on Paris and Brussels rising to 123.76¼f. and 34.82b. respectively. There was also a renewed demand for Swiss francs, the rate on Zurich falling from 25.09f. to 25.07½f. Exchange on Madrid declined from 41.80p. to 41.44½p.

BECHUANALAND EXPLORATION

After providing £8,594 (against £13,236) for development and depreciation account, the profit of the Bechuanaland Exploration Company for the year ended March 31 amounted to £26,192 (against £37,223 for 1928-29). BODE RUBBER ESTATES

The report for 1929 of the Bode Rubber Estates (1914), Limited, states that the output for the year amounted to 181,500lb. (against 183,000lb. for 1928), which realised an average gross price of 8.4d. per lb. (against 8.63d.). The report states there was a reduction of 1.16d. per lb. in the f.o.b. cost compared with the cost in 1928. The accounts show a loss of £3,947 (compared with £5,427), which reduces the balance to be carried forward to £925. The directors report that, owing to the continued depression in the rubber market, the funds of the company are now exhausted. Invitations were recently sent to the shareholders (by circulars issued on April 23 and May 8) to make advances to the company to the extent of at least £5,000 in order to carry on operations for about a year in the hope that the price of rubber would, in the meantime, improve sufficiently to permit of more satisfactory means of financing being arranged. The directors regret that the response received proved to be quite inadequate, and, in the circumstances, the early appointment of a receiver on behalf of the Debenture-holders must be contemplated. Meeting, July 3.

MICHOACAN AND PACIFIC RAILWAY

The accounts of the Michoacan and Pacific Railway Company for 1929 show a profit on the working of the railway by the lessees, the National Railways of Mexico, of £6,776 (against £8,328 for 1928). The full year's interest on the Debentures has been charged to the accounts, and the directors have again set aside £2,759 for depreciation of property. The net result is a loss for the year of £1,530 (against a profit of £10,170), which increases the debit balance to £83,880. The directors state that they have been able to conclude a settlement of their claim for the long outstanding balance of arrears of earnings, and they now have £30,000 available for the service of the Debentures. These amount to £60,000, and fall due on July 1, with 27 years' interest thereon, amounting to £97,200. The directors have under consideration proposals for dealing with the Debentures and interest arrears, and they expect to be able to forward these to Debenture-holders shortly after the meeting. Meanwhile it will be necessary to renew the Debentures formally for a further period, and notice of a meeting to consider a resolution to this effect is enclosed with the report. Meeting, June 30.

PARKINSON AND COWAN

The directors of Parkinson and Cowan, which is a holding company, report that the income received and accrued from investments in subsidiaries and from general investments, &c., for the year ended March 31 was £117,979, notwithstanding that the income from one subsidiary was substantially less than formerly owing to a serious fire. A claim in respect of loss of profit insurance, however, remains to be settled with the underwriters and the amount to be recovered will be brought into that subsidiary's accounts during the current year. The accounts show a pro rata profit of £88,114 (against £58,282 for 1928-29) and a balance brought forward of £58,930. After meeting the Preference and the interim Ordinary dividends, already paid, it is proposed to pay a final dividend on the Ordinary shares of 7½ per cent., making 10 per cent. for the year (the same), to transfer £15,000 (against £18,000) to reserve fund, and to carry forward £28,610. As explained in a circular issued earlier in the current month, additional capital is now required for the development and expansion of the subsidiary and associated companies and to provide funds to enable the company to make an offer for the purchase of the Preference shares of the Parkinson Stove Company.

COMPANY MEETINGS

J. LYONS & COMPANY

ANOTHER SUCCESSFUL YEAR

RECORD PROFIT

THIRTY-SIX YEARS OF RATIONALIZATION

THE GOVERNMENT AND FOOD PRICES

MAJOR SALMON'S SPEECH

The THIRTY-SIXTH ORDINARY GENERAL MEETING of J. Lyons and Company, Limited, was held yesterday at the Trocadero Restaurant, Piccadilly-circus, London, W.

MAJOR ISIDORE SALMON, C.B.E., D.L., J.P., M.P. (one of the managing directors), presided.

Mr. H. H. G. BENNETT (one of the joint-secretaries) having read the notice convening the meeting and the report of the auditors,

The CHAIRMAN said:—Ladies and Gentlemen,—In welcoming you to another annual meeting, at which we are recording the results of the company's thirty-sixth year, I am pleased to announce once again that the profit available for distribution has exceeded that of any previous year, amounting as it does to £935,870. The year has not been without its difficulties, for, although, fortunately, our business is that of providing the main necessities of life, we are naturally somewhat affected by the prosperity of the general public who are our customers. In times of general trade depression the public literally tightens its belt, so that its spending power tends to decrease; but that very tendency makes for more caution in spending and a closer seeking after true value.

Our policy has always been to concentrate on true value, which naturally brings us new customers and some increased trade to off-set the decreased spending power. The increase in our profit which we are able to report in these circumstances testifies to the truth of our claim that we are supplying the public with what it wants at competitive prices and shows the wisdom of our policy. Every business has its difficult years, for it is affected by circumstances over which, whatever the ability of the directing force, it can have no control. For example, the present year has unfortunately seen the burden of taxation take an upward trend, the effect of which upon the country's trade has yet to be felt.

THE BALANCE-SHEET

Now, may I turn to the year's results and deal with them in a little more detail? As you know, the new Companies Act came into force in November last, and you will have observed a few changes in the balance-sheet consequent upon the new provisions then enacted. Those changes in our case have really meant no more than a few slight alterations in the manner of presenting the accounts to you—in other words, in the form rather than in the matter. I will deal first with the changes and then, without boring you by a long recital of the various items, comment briefly, as I did last year, on anything which I feel may be of special interest.

You will have noticed an additional paragraph in the report dealing with the profits and losses of subsidiary companies. As in previous years we have taken into our profits dividends which have been received from them, leaving the balance of profits in the various businesses with a view to the consolidation of their resources and their development. On the other hand, we have made provision in our accounts for the slight losses which arise mainly from the method of accounting in two of our subsidiaries who are trading with us.

In the balance-sheet, on the liabilities side, there is a new item—namely, subsidiary companies, current accounts; this now appears separately in conformity with the new Act. It represents amounts due to those companies with which we ourselves are trading; previously it appeared in the general item "sundry creditors, &c." On the assets side under the heading "subsidiary companies," which also appears separately for the first time, the items "shares" and "current accounts" need, I think, no comment. The third item of loans represents necessary additional finance for their operations, the company in this case acting as banker. "Balance of loans to staff" shows the amount outstanding at March 31 of loans made to staff for their purchases of our shares. So much for the changes.

ADDITIONS TO RESERVE

As to the other figures, the profit from the year's trading I have already commented on. You will notice we have taken a sum of £25,000 from our last year's carry forward and placed it to the reserve, making that account as it stands in the balance-sheet £1,200,000; to it we are again proposing to add a sum of £100,000 out of profits. The issued capital has increased by the "A" Ordinary shares issued to managing directors last year. I may mention here that this privilege has been repeated and 2,500 "A" Ordinary shares have been allotted to each of them at par.

The property item on the assets side, freehold land, buildings, &c., is £55,000 less, but as it no longer includes the shareholdings in subsidiary companies, it is, on a true comparison, some £360,000 more—a quite normal growth. Sundry debtors, at £593,000, is some £250,000 less than last year, but the difference is more apparent than real since loans to, and current accounts with, subsidiary companies are not now included in this item.

BURDENS ON INDUSTRY

I have already referred to the burdens imposed on industry in this country to-day. To devise a means of meeting them is a task which constantly confronts those who control great businesses. The latest theory for the remedying of our commercial ills is rationalization, of which we hear a good deal just now and which seems to mean different things to different people. If, however, it means keeping your business up-to-date by availing yourselves of the latest discoveries, both scientific and mechanical, the utilization to the utmost of the raw materials to be treated, the elimination of waste, whether of material or labour, the grouping of businesses which are related and which may be worked together with a gain in economy, in which the question of transport plays no small part, then I can say that our business has been conducted according to the theories of rationalization from its commencement, with the effect of reducing prices, increasing wages and giving more employment. The number of our employees has steadily increased from year to year until it has reached the very respectable figure of over 30,000 persons maintained in regular employment—(Hear, hear)—and I must leave you to draw your own conclusions as to the value of a practice based on such a theory.

THANKS TO THE STAFF.

This mention of our staff leads me to say that our and your grateful thanks are due to them for their loyal and untiring efforts on the company's behalf. (Cheers.) Their devotion to the company's interests fully merits the attention to their welfare and happiness we endeavour to give. We have in the past told you something of their sports and social club, the Lyons Club, which is recognized as one of the largest organizations of its kind in existence, with a membership embracing fully 70 per cent. of our total staff. It is run by the members for the members; the company does not interfere or dictate; but it does contribute a substantial sum each year to supplement the members' own contributions and assist where any further extension of the club's activities and amenities is required.

We do not seek to interfere in the private lives of our staff, but we do take an interest in their welfare and by wise assistance and humane consideration of their troubles and difficulties endeavour to make them feel that not only are our interests theirs but that their prosperity and happiness are ours. (Hear, hear.)

THE CONSUMERS' COUNCIL BILL

I should like to say a word on two things which are at present occupying public attention—namely, the Consumers' Council Bill and licensing reform. The Bill, which is now before Parliament, proposes to give to a Council of seven—the number savours of mystic charms and rites of the Middle Ages—wide inquisitorial powers and the duty of reporting to the Board of Trade what they consider a fair price for almost any commodity in general use. It gives the Board of Trade power to fix a maximum price for any such commodity. The Bill ignores the experience gained from similar experiments throughout history; first, that a maximum price becomes a minimum price irrespective of quality and service, and, second, that the standard which is adopted in fixing a price is that of the less efficient, not of the more efficient. I fail to see how the consumer can benefit from that.

The result of such a scheme will be to diminish if not entirely to destroy the value of a goodwill built up on quality and service. It shows an entire disregard for that elasticity which is so necessary in the constantly varying conditions and ramifications of modern trade. How can such a Council or the Board of Trade say what is a reasonable profit when circumstances vary from day to day and from place to place? The basis of such a measure seems to me to be wrong, for it assumes, very improperly, that there is only one motive in business—buying cheap and selling dear—or, in other words, profiteering.

LICENSING REFORM

I think you will be interested to know that recently the company was invited to give evidence before the Royal Commission on Licensing and I had the privilege—that may not be quite the right word since it was naturally something of an ordeal—of presenting to that body some of our views. Incidentally, it is gratifying to know, and a fitting tribute to the position of this company, that we were the only individual corporation invited to give evidence, though of course many of the trade associations have done so.

There are many points in the present licensing system as it affects us which, in our opinion, call for reform; mainly, the need for the recognition of a distinction between public-house business and a business such as ours where the provision of food is the main consideration and where the sale of alcohol is ancillary and represents but a small portion of the total business. Another point of importance which arises from this, and is indeed part of it, is the need for a system whereby the conditions requisite for the grant of a licence to an establishment like a new Corner House would be fixed by statute.

THE "TROCADERO"

Before concluding I will mention one other matter which I think will be of interest to you. We have taken advantage during the year of the opportunity which occurred of purchasing on favourable terms the freehold of the remainder of the Trocadero, so that we now own the freehold of the whole of this building—(hear, hear)—which, together with the Coventry-street Corner House adjoining it and the other land fronting Rupert-street and Shaftesbury-avenue—totalling something over 1¼ acre—must be one of the most valuable properties in London. Whenever a favourable opportunity presents itself it is our policy to acquire the freehold of our various properties, a policy which, I am sure you will agree, consolidates the value of this portion of our assets and serves to preserve the goodwill of our business, which is such an enormous asset though it does not appear in figures on our balance-sheet. (Hear, hear.)

CONFIDENCE IN THE FUTURE

Well, ladies and gentlemen, this brings me to the end of my review of the company's activities during its thirty-sixth year. If I have called attention in these remarks to one or two of the difficulties which beset the trader in these times I do not want you to think that we feel anything but a full confidence in the bright future of this business and a justifiable pride in its present achievement. Indeed, I am sure that from what you have seen in our report and balance-sheet, supplemented by this brief account of our stewardship and our prospects and plans, you will feel, as we do, that the affairs of the company are as satisfactory and as full of promise for the future as human power can make them. (Cheers.)

Ladies and gentlemen, I will now propose:—"That the report of the directors and the balance-sheet submitted to this meeting be and are hereby adopted; that the payment of interim dividends of 1s. 8d. per share on the issued Ordinary and 'A' Ordinary share capital of the company and 4d. per share on the Proportional Profit and 'B' Proportional Profit share capital of the company for the half-year ending September 30, 1929, be and are hereby confirmed; and that a dividend be paid for the half-year ending March 31, 1930, of 2s. 10d. per share to the holders of Ordinary and 'A' Ordinary shares of the company, and 6.8d. per share to the holders of Proportional Profit and 'B' Proportional Profit shares of the company who were on the registers on June 6, 1930." (Cheers.)

SIR ROBERT DONALD ON THE COMPANY'S SUCCESS

SIR ROBERT DONALD.—Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen,—As an old friend of the founders of this great business, it gives me very much pleasure to second the adoption of the report. You have heard from your chairman an illuminating statement, in which he has clothed the dry figures—perhaps I ought to say the cheerfully refreshing figures—of the report with additional information which I think must have the effect of increasing your confidence in this business and in the statesmanlike manner in which it has been managed. The few observations I would like to make are of a rather general kind, as I have been a close observer of this business since its establishment. In these distressing and doleful days—with emphasis on the dole—(laughter)—the House of Lyons stands out as a beacon on the industrial horizon. As the profits indicate continual expansion, you may expect them to reach the million mark before long. (Hear, hear.)

As I have said, I have watched this business—one of the newest of the great businesses of this country—grow from small beginnings to its present gigantic proportions. To begin with, it was nurtured and tended with infinite care by the far-seeing men who founded it, and it has advanced every year without interruption. Its progress will continue to gather strength from its own momentum, from new developments and expansions which are inevitable and which the board are always watching to take advantage of, and because—indeed, most of all, because—of its good management.

There are no secrets about the success of Lyons. Its recipe is for every one to read and to copy if they can. You will find one item in the policy referred to by the chairman of giving the public the best possible service in the widest sense of that word at the lowest possible cost. Another element is the capacity of your directors to foresee needs just a little before they arrive and also ahead of other people. In this way they are thoroughly progressive, but they blend their progress with caution. You have heard how conservative is their policy in regard to finance and how that is one of the most substantial elements in the impregnability of this business.

EXPERIENCE AND ENTERPRISE IN THE MANAGEMENT

A great factor in their success is that the directors know their jobs. Catering in one respect is something like journalism; it seems to have an attraction for people who know nothing about it. (Laughter.) Anyone without experience thinks he can run a restaurant, just as anyone without experience thinks he can run a newspaper. I do not know what has happened to those who have ventured into the catering world in a big way without experience, but in the newspaper world the ambitious man who did not know his job has gained a great deal of experience and lost a great deal of money. (Laughter.)

There are few businesses in this country in which the men at the head of them have risen from the humblest positions to the highest posts, as in the case of Lyons and Co. The managers of Lyons study the smallest details in order to improve the service. They search the world in the hope of finding something new, better, and cheaper. In this connexion it is interesting to note that they are developing tea plantations in a new Colony which, by and by, with their help, will be one of the greatest producers of that favourite beverage.

Lyons and Co. sets more than one object-lesson to other firms. You have heard the chairman give an admirable definition of rationalization. Lyons exemplifies in its best form what rationalization means to those whom it serves and to those who serve it, and there is nothing new to be learned by Lyons and Co. of this so-called new process of rationalization.

Another thing that strikes me is that one of their great qualities is their capacity for salesmanship. The traders of this country, as you know, are somewhat perturbed that we have lost trade partly because we have not known how to go out and get it, and a Government Committee is now at work studying the best methods of salesmanship, by which our trade can be increased—particularly our export trade. There, again, Lyons and Co. offer an object-lesson to other traders.

VALUE OF RESEARCH WORK

Another extraordinary weakness which we have in this country is our failure to appreciate the value of research as an aid to industry. There is a big Government Department with a lot of money ready to help firms to undertake research, ready to give them 50 per cent. of the expenditure incurred, and, if you read their reports, you will find they express great regret that this offer is frequently not taken advantage of. Lyons did not require the stimulus of a Government Department for them to undertake research; they did it on their own initiative, and I do not know whether shareholders and the general public are aware that one of the finest research laboratories in this country is that founded and carried on by this company. Some people say, "What does a firm of caterers want with research?" It is, however, most essential, Lyons have a staff of chemists and other experts at work examining all the materials which they purchase and the food products which they make. The whole object of this system is to increase the purity and nutritious qualities of their products. That is one of the most valuable departments of Lyons and Co. You will not find it directly reflected in the dividend, but you will find the dividend, and you have the result in the greater purity of the food they supply and in the care which they take in all their departments in order that they may supply only the best quality food at the lowest possible price. (Cheers.)

"A SPLENDID HERITAGE"

I do not think I have anything further to say. I told you I had only some general observations to make, but these things have struck me for many years as the leading characteristics of this firm, and they show how well the founders built—that they built better than they knew. It is very gratifying to find that the second and third generations of the founders are now managing this great business and preserving and enriching the splendid heritage which they handed on. I have much pleasure in seconding the resolution. (Cheers.)

The resolution, in the absence of questions, was then put to the meeting and carried unanimously.

Mr. HARRY SALMON (a managing director) then proposed the re-election of Mr. George W. Booth and Mr. B. A. Salmon as directors of the company.

Mr. LIVERMAN seconded the motion, which was unanimously adopted, and Mr. BOOTH briefly thanked the shareholders on behalf of his colleague and himself.

MAJOR M. GLUCKSTEIN (a managing director) proposed that Mr. G. A. Pollard and Mr. A. C. Watkins be re-elected employee directors of the company.

Mr. SHIELD seconded the motion, which was passed unanimously, and a suitable acknowledgment was made by Mr. WATKINS for Mr. Pollard and himself.

On the proposition of SIR RICHARD SENNETT, seconded by Mr. T. A. BULLOCK, Messrs. Turquand, Youngs and Co. were reappointed auditors.

The CHAIRMAN then announced that the dividend warrants would be posted that evening.

VOTE OF THANKS

Mr. S. PONDER proposed a vote of thanks to the directors and the staff of the company, and particularly to the chairman for his excellent conduct of the meeting. In doing so, he said that the difficulties which the directors and the staff had passed through during the last 12 months must have been much greater than many of the shareholders imagined, having regard to the fluctuations in food commodity prices and the fact that they had had to meet the requirements of people who had not as much money to spend as had been the case two or three years ago. They had, however, adhered to their policy of giving excellent value for money, so that, whatever happened, they would always attract new customers.

The vote was seconded by Mrs. FISHER and carried with acclamation, and the CHAIRMAN having briefly replied, the proceedings terminated.

THE GENERAL TOBACCO COMPANY, LTD.

SATISFACTORY YEAR'S TRADING

MR. L. FABIAN'S ADDRESS

The FIRST ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING of the shareholders of the General Tobacco Company, Limited, was held yesterday at the Holborn Restaurant, London.

Mr. L. FABIAN (chairman and managing director), in the course of his speech, said:—The company commenced business shortly after receiving the certificate to commence trading, in November, 1928, and immediately thereafter we started preparations for marketing and securing a national distribution for our Navy Club cigarettes. In these days of intensive, but nevertheless friendly, competition amongst manufacturers of cigarettes, to succeed with the introduction of a new brand you have to proceed along well-planned and carefully thought-out lines.

PUBLIC TASTE

The taste of the smoking public changes from time to time, and to gauge it correctly we made up, at the beginning, many different blends, and sent samples to a large number of people belonging to various sections of the public. In response to our invitations, we received a diversity of opinions which were of immeasurable assistance and guidance to us. We altered and improved the quality of Navy Club cigarettes, and at the beginning of last year we were satisfied that we had produced in Navy Club a cigarette that was different from, and, in our opinion and that of a large section of the smoking public, better than, competing brands. They have that distinct and pleasing appeal to every smoker which creates in him the desire to light one after another.

Our slogan therefore became "Navy Club, of all good cigarettes the best." The adoption of this slogan has fully justified itself, and the correctness of its meaning is borne out by subsequent events.

ADVERTISING

Our advertising policy had to be given the fullest consideration. In September last the first of our series of new advertisements appeared. The results exceeded our expectations, and since then we have not looked back. By the end of September our sales had increased by 99 per cent. over the previous month; by the end of October our sales had increased by another 23 per cent.; by the end of November we showed a further increase of 62 per cent. over the previous month; by the end of January we recorded a monthly increase of no less than 1,000 per cent. since August last. That was a gratifying achievement, and fully justified the bold and aggressive sales policy we commenced. Our sales continued to soar, and by the end of March we registered an increase of 1,500 per cent. for the month over the month of August last.

PROFITS

The experiments and preliminary work, and the time occupied, were not very profitable at the beginning, as far as the profit and loss account is concerned, and the position by December last year was that we had made practically no profit. The accounts before you, up to March 31, show a net profit of £9,759 6s. 7d., and this profit, representing about 12½ per cent. on our paid-up capital, was made during the short space of the last 3½ months, which equals approximately a profit of £30,000 per annum on a paid-up capital of £76,000.

There is every indication that we shall continue to progress steadily, and your directors are confident that we shall be in a position to lay before you at the next meeting results which I think you will consider extremely satisfactory.

SOLID FOUNDATIONS

The demand for Navy Club is founded on solid foundations. What seemed to other people a hopeless task is now an accomplished fact. Although introducing a new brand of cigarettes to-day is like navigating a ship through uncharted seas with submerged rocks and reefs abounding, we were determined to win through, and succeeded. We cater for every taste. Our Navy Club plain cigarettes are of medium strength. Our cork-tipped are mild, and our ivory-tipped, which appeal to ladies in particular, are very mild.

The report and accounts were adopted unanimously, and a vote of thanks was passed to the chairman and directors and to the staff.

LORD BEARSTED'S REVIEW OF THE POSITION

The ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING of the "Shell" Transport and Trading Company, Limited, was held yesterday at Cannon-street Hotel, London, E.C.

The RT. HON. the VISCOUNT BEARSTED, M.C. (chairman of the company), presided.

The SECRETARY (Mr. E. A. Smith-Rewse) having read the notice convening the meeting and the report of the auditors,

The CHAIRMAN, who was received with cheers, said:—Ladies and gentlemen,—Is it your pleasure to take the report and balance-sheet as read? (Agreed.)

Before dealing with the general situation during the past year, or with the position as we find it to-day, I will comment briefly on the salient points of the balance-sheet and profit and loss account which are before you.

BALANCE-SHEET TOTALS

Comparing the accounts as now laid before you with those of the previous year it will be noticed that the balance-sheet totals have been increased by approximately £5,750,000. This has been caused primarily by the issue of 3,983,754 Ordinary shares allotted at par to the holders of Ordinary shares as at January 1, 1929, being an issue at the rate of one new share in respect of every five old shares; and 150,000 Ordinary shares issued and sold in Paris at a premium as mentioned in the report which all of you have received. There is, further, an increase in profits of £1,036,485, the remaining small difference being principally accounted for by an increase in creditors of £42,000.

The premium less expenses on the 150,000 Ordinary shares issued during the year, which will be seen from the balance-sheet to have amounted to £527,444 3s. 9d., has been added to the reserve account, which now reaches the figure of £6,881,609 10s.

As before mentioned the profit and loss balance has increased by a sum of £1,036,484 16s. 4d., and amounts to £6,720,990 12s. 3d. This enables the directors to recommend a final dividend on the Ordinary shares of 15 per cent., making, with the interim dividend of 10 per cent. already paid, a total dividend for the year of 25 per cent. free of tax. This final distribution will absorb £3,618,204 3s., while the interim dividend on the Ordinary shares paid in January, 1930, and the dividends on the first and second Preference shares already paid will have absorbed the sum of £2,862,136 2s., thus leaving a balance to be carried forward to the next year of £240,650 7s. 3d., against the balance brought in at the commencement of the year of £237,604 0s. 11d.

EMINENTLY SATISFACTORY RESULT

It will be noted by you that notwithstanding the issue during the year of 4,133,754 Ordinary shares the directors have been able to recommend that the dividend for 1929—on the increased capital—shall be the same as that paid for the year 1928. No doubt you will all consider this an eminently satisfactory result. (Hear, hear.)

Turning to the asset side it will be noted that the property account stands at practically the same figure as in the previous year, there having been a reduction of only £71,666 17s. 1d., this account now representing an amount of £26,613,208 19s.

The balance of dividends declared by sundry companies has increased by £1,057,191 4s. 2d., while the investments as detailed in the balance-sheet before you have increased by £3,835,398 12s. 8d., and now stand at the figure of £10,462,500. This increase, as you no doubt appreciate, is the direct result of the increase in capital previously referred to, and for the same reason it will be noted that the cash at bankers on current account at short notice has increased by a sum of £1,026,351 6s. 2d. to £1,158,482 14s. 7d., so that the total liquid assets at December 31, 1929, amounted to £11,620,982 14s. 7d. This abnormally high figure will, of course, be gradually reduced as the new capital raised is absorbed in extensions.

The directors as heretofore are able to assure you that all depreciation necessary has been fully covered by all the companies in which you are interested.

WORLD PRODUCTION OF PETROLEUM

I will begin my survey of last year by referring to the world production of petroleum. Again the total figures during the year show a very substantial increase. Unfortunately also this increase has been at a greater rate than that of the previous year, which was only 9,000,000 tons, while production in 1929, as compared with that of 1928, amounted to not less than 210,600,000 metric tons, against 187,600,000 metric tons for 1928, an increase of 23,000,000 metric tons. Of this increase the United States of America have been responsible for about 14,000,000 tons, and this notwithstanding the fact that real efforts have been made in that country to keep production within bounds in order that the industry might be put on a more satisfactory basis, and supplies of petroleum conserved for the future requirements of the world.

In Venezuela the production increased by about 5,000,000 tons, and here again definite steps have been taken in order to conserve supplies, and I trust that common sense will bring about a situation which will prevent the wastage which has been going on in these two countries, as unless tangible results are achieved in this direction more and more money will be spent unnecessarily, and the policy of leaving the future to look after itself will continue.

COOPERATION IN CONSERVING SUPPLIES

The production in the other countries throughout the world has been more or less maintained at approximately 1928 level, and therefore it is to the United States of America and to Venezuela that we must look for an improvement in the present situation. I am glad to be able to report that there appears to be a distinct hope of common-sense prevailing in this matter of wasteful production, as we are still endeavouring by friendly cooperation to conserve supplies, to produce as cheaply as possible, and to frame our production programme in a manner which will give to the consuming public the best possible advantage from the proved natural resources of petroleum.

With regard to our group's production, this has increased from 22,000,000 tons in 1928 to 25,000,000 tons in 1929, the main increases being in Venezuela, where the output went from 7,000,100 tons in 1928 to 8,800,000 tons in 1929; and in Dutch East Indies, where there was an increase of about 750,000 tons.

As I have already indicated, we are only too willing to bear our full share of any reasonable policy of conservation which may be decided upon throughout the industry, and as a result of the friendly negotiations previously mentioned I trust that our figures of production for the current year will reflect a measure of progress in the policy of conservation. This progress is desirable from two points of view; first, that of world conservation, to which I have already alluded; and secondly, and unfortunately, because of the fact that as the general trade of the world is at present undergoing a period of acute depression, the demand for petroleum products may not show an increase in the same ratio as in the past.

EFFICIENCY IN THE INDUSTRY

Looking at our industry from these two points of view, therefore, it becomes all the more desirable that those who are responsible for the policy and direction of petroleum companies should turn their minds more towards greater efficiency in producing, refining, shipping, and marketing, rather than to the further unnecessary depletion of the oilfields throughout the world.

So far as the companies controlled by the "Shell" Group are concerned, I am glad to say that we have progressed far along the lines of stimulating the use of petroleum products, not only in connexion with those products which are so well known to everyone, but also in connexion with special products which we have been able to manufacture from crude petroleum. During the past year we have placed on the market various new commodities manufactured from crude petroleum, and, although many of these are still in the introductory stage, I am hoping that before long we shall have made definite progress in finding new outlets.

In saying this I am sure that you will be glad to learn that in every case where a new commodity is marketed by us under the "Shell" name it carries the guarantee of the "Shell" Group, which is not given until the most searching and prolonged scientific investigation and commercial tests have demonstrated that it is in every way suitable and reliable for the purpose for which its use is recommended.

We have also introduced during the past year many new methods, not only in connexion with production, but also—and particularly—in connexion with refining and manufacturing. Our technical staff throughout the world is second to none, and it is only by maintaining this condition that we are able to maintain our position in all matters pertaining to petroleum.

NEW DEVELOPMENTS

You may have seen from the Press that we have taken certain steps in connexion with the manufacture of fertilizers; an initial plant was built at Velsen in Holland in conjunction with important blast furnace and steel works there. This plant has now been brought into full operation and the manufactured products are being marketed with gratifying results through our existing selling organizations. As a result of the experience gained through the erection and working of this plant we have decided to build a similar plant in California, where the natural gas from the oilfields will provide an important basic material. Other chemical products will be manufactured from this oilfield gas, and I am glad to state that we are confident of being able to build up a successful development of our business in this direction.

You may also have seen reference to the fact that we have been giving great attention to processes for the manufacture of synthetic benzine, either from coal or from oil. A most important step in this direction has been reached in that we have now arranged to join hands with the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey and the great German chemical company known as the I.G. All the experience and patents of each of us will be exchanged and shared in order that the vast problem of hydrogenation as it affects our industry may be worked out conjointly. Our partners in this venture will unite with us in concentrating in one central body all patents and processes by which high-grade products can be made from different raw materials on the widest possible scale.

COMPETITION AND PRICES

During the year 1929 the market throughout the world for the primary petroleum products showed very little change as compared with 1928. As is normal in the petroleum industry, we have had to meet severe competition, and in many parts of the world prices—because of this competition—were forced to an uneconomic level. That we were able to maintain our fair share of trade is due not only to the unvaried good quality of our products, but also to our elaborate and efficient organization, and to the unremitting loyalty and zeal of our staff in every country in which we do business. In this connexion I think it is only right that shareholders should realize how great an asset we possess in the shape of our staff. It has been built up over many years by a careful selection of personnel, and this company may well be proud of those who work for it, just as the men and women who serve it are proud of the company for which they work.

Our fleet during the past year was represented by nearly two million tons carrying capacity of ocean-going tankers, including the fleet of the Eagle Oil Transport Company, Limited. Towards the end of the year orders were placed for seven small motor-ships of 2,000-3,600 tons carrying capacity, these vessels being intended to replace some of our older vessels which are now becoming obsolete and which are at present plying in Far Eastern waters.

NEW MOTOR-TANKSHIPS

In the early part of this year a very important order for 20 new motor-tankships, each of 11,500 tons loading capacity, was placed, and I am glad to be able to state that eight of these new vessels were placed with shipbuilders in the United Kingdom. These orders, representing, as they do, an expenditure of about one and a half million sterling, have added to the normally large expenditure which is made each year in the United Kingdom for ships, steel and iron goods, and manufactured articles of every description, which are required on our vessels, on our fields, by our fleet, and throughout our refineries and our distribution system. In this connexion I may say that during the year under review we have placed orders in the United Kingdom to an amount of not less than £7,500,000 sterling, this not including the eight large vessels previously mentioned. (Hear, hear.)

It is a great pleasure to be able to record that the Mexican Eagle companies—which have shown us no return on our investments for several years past—are again included in the category of dividend-earning companies. (Hear, hear.)

OPERATIONS IN THE ARGENTINE

I would draw your special attention to our operations in the Argentine. Our production in that country during the year 1929 was only 15,000 tons, against 50,000 tons in 1928, and this notwithstanding the fact that our estimated potential production is to-day over 350,000 tons per annum. The lack of progress during the year was due to our being obliged to suspend operations in consequence of the withdrawal of a permit granted in the early part of the year for the building of our refinery at Buenos Aires.

I am glad to be able to tell you that this refinery permit has recently been ratified, and steps are now being taken to proceed with the normal development of the concessions in the Argentine. That country at present is largely dependent upon imported petroleum products, and I am sure that the wise decision which has been taken by the Argentine Government relative to the encouragement of the local producing and refining industry will have a beneficial effect on the country and on all concerned.

The burden of taxation throughout the world is such an important factor that I need not apologize for referring to it, particularly in relation to the affairs of a company such as this which has a very large body of shareholders, and which is interested in industry in practically every country throughout the world. Working costs in almost every direction have been steadily increasing, and the detailed system of distribution, which is now a feature in the policy of all the more important oil marketing companies, although greatly adding to the ease with which supplies are made available, has, at the same time, added to the expense of supplying the consumer with his requirements. The increasingly scientific methods which are being employed throughout the industry involve the employment of increasing numbers of highly-paid experts, and the result has been a steady decrease in the profit per ton of oil.

INCREASING BURDEN OF TAXATION

The expenditure, however, which oversteps all else in its rate of increase is taxation, and I am sure that you will be interested to know that the Government taxes paid by our group during the year 1928 amounted to almost double the sum which was distributed in dividends amongst all the shareholders of the group, and almost equalled the total amount paid by the group throughout the world in salaries and wages. In referring to Government taxes I would emphasize that I have not included in these the consumption taxes imposed in various countries, such as the 4d. per gallon duty in this country.

The Provident Fund of the united companies now amounts to about £23,500,000 sterling, and has about 33,000 members.

I have now much pleasure in moving the adoption of the report and balance-sheet, and will ask Mr. Andrew Agnew to second the resolution. Before putting the motion I should be glad to answer any pertinent questions. (Cheers.)

Mr. ANDREW AGNEW, C.B.E., seconded the resolution and it was carried unanimously.

The CHAIRMAN then proposed the re-election of the retiring directors:—Sir Henri W. A. Deterding, K.B.E., Colonel Bertram Abel Smith, D.S.O., M.C., T.D., A.D.C., Mr. A. S. Debenham, Mr. Samuel Samuel, M.P., and Sir William Foot Mitchell, Kt., J.P.

Mr. ROBERT I. WATSON seconded the motion, which was carried unanimously.

The auditors (Messrs. Turquand, Youngs and Co.) were reappointed.

SIR LEONARD POWELL made a speech with reference to a concession in Peru, in which at one time the "Shell" Group had been interested, and asked that replies might be given to two specific questions which he raised in regard to the manner in which the concession had been abandoned, and the claim on the part of the agent for remuneration alleged to be due to him in connexion therewith.

CHAIRMAN'S REPLY TO QUESTIONS

The CHAIRMAN, in reply, said that he welcomed the opportunity of disposing of the matter once and for all. In the first place, the agent in question had put in a claim originally for 2½ per cent. of the net results of the venture. It was agreed by letters between both parties that this should take the form of 2½ per cent. of the Ordinary shares of any company formed to deal with the concession introduced by him. Subsequently it was found desirable, since the group might have other interests in Peru which were not introduced by this gentleman, to make what might be called a blanketing company embracing the whole of Peru, and, in order to avoid any question of commission in the future, he was offered 2 per cent. over the whole of Peru instead of 2½ per cent. for the concession introduced by him—which he (the Chairman) ventured to say was a very fair offer. This offer the agent refused, and continued to try to get 2½ per cent. While this was going on the company was formed, and shortly afterwards, in view of no extraneous undertaking, and in view of nothing but events in Peru, and, as circumstances had since proved, extraordinarily wisely, the group determined to abandon operations there. There was no inducement of any sort and no threat.

He would point out that the concession which had been abandoned was subsequently taken up by a totally independent American oil concern and was abandoned by them after a somewhat unsuccessful career. He thought that disposed of the question finally. If the agent in question really believed that he had any rights or had been denied justice he had a very simple remedy which he had never suggested taking. (Hear, hear.)

SIR GEORGE PENNY, M.P., said that he was sure that all the shareholders were satisfied with the explanation given by the chairman. He would like to propose a hearty vote of thanks to the chairman and his colleagues—in whom the shareholders had every confidence—and also to the staff for their services during the past year. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. VERE HERBERT SMITH seconded the motion, which was carried unanimously amid applause.

A brief acknowledgment by the CHAIRMAN concluded the proceedings.

DECCA RECORD COMPANY

FIRST YEAR'S OPERATIONS

BUSINESS NOW ON PROFIT-EARNING BASIS

The FIRST ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING of the Decca Record Company, Limited, was held yesterday at Winchester House, Old Broad-street, London, E.C.

SIR SIGISMUND F. MENDL, K.B.E. (chairman of the company), presided.

The CHAIRMAN, after referring to the resignation from the board of Sir George Fowler, said in the course of his speech:—The Decca Record Company was formed to purchase a modern record factory and to acquire the shares of the Decca Gramophone Company, which had then lately been launched as a public company, and which possessed a valuable goodwill and name, and also a successful selling organization. When the company obtained effective possession of the Malden factory there was no reason to suppose the estimates provided by Mr. Balfour would not be reached before the end of the first completed year of the company's trading. Shareholders will remember that, at the statutory meeting at the end of May, Mr. Balfour stated that he adhered to his estimate, and the board had naturally to rely on his judgment in a matter dependent on technical knowledge.

CHANGES OF MANAGEMENT

Shortly after that meeting, as the result of inquiries and examination, the board had reason to entertain the gravest misgivings as to the efficiency of the management and as to the probability of the sales of records being likely to amount to anything like what we had been led to believe. After conferring with some of our principal shareholders, it was decided to set up a committee to make an independent investigation into the company's affairs and report to the board.

That committee sat at once, and by the middle of July—some weeks before their report was, or could be, issued—they found sufficient grounds to lead them to advise the board to make immediate and drastic changes in the company's management, thereby fully confirming the board's misgivings, to which I have already referred. The board lost no time in acting in accordance with the committee's advice, and, Mr. Balfour having resigned his position, a new general manager was appointed in the person of Mr. S. J. Avidon, who is with us here to-day, and who held, and still holds, a very responsible position in the Decca Gramophone Company, besides being a director of the Record Company.

A few weeks afterwards a new sales manager and a new secretary were appointed—the result of these changes being to put effective management of the company into the hands of the officials of the Decca Gramophone Company. At once the new management found conditions of considerable gravity existing in the company's affairs. The board and management at once grasped the nettle, and took drastic action. Many of the earlier records were deleted from the company's catalogue and withdrawn from issue, involving the destruction of many thousands of records. The processes of manufacture were radically altered. Rigid economies were at once instituted in the running costs of the factory.

Two new directors, Mr. J. W. England, a recognized authority in industrial organization, and Mr. C. F. Entwistle, who adds legal knowledge to considerable commercial experience, were appointed to the board in the latter part of 1929—both of them eminently qualified to give assistance where it was most needed.

REDUCED OPERATING COSTS

The board set up a Works Committee, and that committee went closely into all the items and details of manufacture and factory organization. It is sufficient to say that it has succeeded, first in reducing operating costs and overhead charges to an absolute minimum, and, secondly, almost immediately in increasing production and improving the quality of Decca records, so that it may fairly be claimed that to-day general opinion in the trade, and outside, as to those records is almost uniformly favourable to them.

During this period the quality of the record was so much improved that sales began rapidly to expand. At the same time production costs were reduced, while on the selling side the important factor was the withdrawal from circulation of the unsatisfactory records, put out in July and August, just referred to. This created a most favourable impression in the trade. The other important factor was the marketing of Decca records at 2s. I think we can fairly claim that these records are the best value on the market to-day, and sales should continue to increase. As you are aware, we have also recently placed on the market a new series of 12in. records at 3s. 6d., and these have proved an instantaneous success. We are rapidly opening accounts with the dealers, large and small, in every part of the British Isles.

We attach the greatest importance in the future to our overseas trade, and it is our aim to sell Decca records wherever the Decca gramophone is sold, and that I may say is in practically every country in the world. The expansion of the two branches of the company's business must go hand in hand.

STRONG FINANCIAL POSITION

I should like to draw your attention to the strong financial position of the company's current assets, amounting to a total of £163,451, against current liabilities of £12,685. The company has, in fact, ample resources for the successful development of its business, and I may say here that the combined net liquid assets of the Record Company and the Gramophone Company amount to a sum of about £335,000, of which the sum of £129,000 is represented by cash and Government securities, which I think you will agree with me indicates a considerable financial strength. I now come to the amount of the debit as set out under profit and loss. We might, of course, have charged a great deal of the debit to a suspense or initial production account. In fact, of the amount to the debit of profit and loss over one-half represents expenditure which might have been so charged and is of a non-recurrent nature. We preferred, however, to charge everything to the expenditure of the first year, so that the shareholders might know the worst and the best, as they now do. The net loss has been arrived at after crediting the dividend received from the Decca Gramophone Company.

GRAMOPHONE SIDE OF THE BUSINESS

LARGE ORDERS FOR BIG ELECTRICAL FIRMS

(FROM OUR TRADE CORRESPONDENT)

While some expansion of business is reported in several of the smaller industries dependent upon seasonal influences, the amount of work in the heavy trades has not been appreciably increased since the Whitsuntide holidays. Large individual orders have been booked by the big electrical firms, and builders of commercial vehicles are still busy, but, generally speaking, there is a lessened demand for industrial equipment. In the shipbuilding industry launches of new vessels continue numerous, but the empty berths are not likely to be filled immediately.

COAL.—The condition of the industry does not improve. The increase in activity after the Whitsun holidays fell far short of hopes, and meanwhile the completion of old contracts is not being followed by new ones. Competition abroad is becoming even keener than recently, and the Mines Bill is a cause of much uncertainty for the time being.

IRON AND STEEL.—A resumption of normal business is still lacking, and the question of restricting output further is becoming more urgent. Contrary to the expectations of buyers, steel makers have decided not to make a reduction in prices. Sheffield reports severe depression in some sections of the cutlery industry.

COTTON.—The fall in cotton prices as the result of the weak markets in the United States has further depressed the Lancashire industry by restricting business in cloth. Only small transactions are taking place. A sharp break occurred in yarn prices, making the position of the spinning industry still more difficult for the time being.

WOOL TEXTILES.—The West Riding wool textile industry is still disorganized by the labour trouble, but in view of the poor state of trade it is doubted whether much additional employment could be found at present. Some of the Scottish tweed manufacturers have received more repeat orders for next winter season and are able to run their looms more regularly, but the situation generally has not improved; nearly all the manufacturers have now returned from London, where they have been displaying their ranges for next winter season, and generally report that results were not satisfactory.

HOSIERY.—Leicester reports state that since Whitsuntide holidays business has been only moderate. For home trade there have been a few inquiries for white goods, but the summer will apparently be almost as disappointing as the spring, as the turnover is substantially below what it used to be at this period of the year.

LACE.—Nottingham reports that warmer weather has helped to maintain a fair flow of orders for lace, especially in the finer qualities of cotton, rayon, and mixtures of both these yarns.

BOOTS AND SHOES.—Reports from some of the more important centres continue to be encouraging. At Northampton the larger factories have a satisfactory number of orders, and work seems assured for some time ahead. Many of the factories curtailed the Whitsun holidays to three days—a much shorter period than at Easter—and so far as can be ascertained there should be no slackening of activity before August Bank Holiday week. There is a better tone in the country centres. A number of the factories have been helped by the receipt of orders for boots for the Air Force.

DRAPERY AND CLOTHING.—Seasonal business continues fairly brisk in the retail trade, and annual "sales" are now being launched. Wholesale firms report quiet bookings on autumn account, but for rayon fabrics demand has expanded considerably since the Budget speech and full time at a number of mills has been resumed.
